Asked to Leave, He Goes 'Gladly'

Pleads With Committee Against Corporations Surplus Levies.

By Robert C. Albright.

William N. McNair, dark, dapper young Mayor of Pittsburgh, came to town yesterday, gave a loud horse laugh at Congressional "dignity," and almost broke up a Ways and Means Committee hearing by ripping into the Administration's tax plans and outshouting his opposition.

McNair stopped just short of being evicted by a Capitol policeman, but not before putting in a fiery last word.

"Why all this dignity?" he jeered. "I am the Mayor of a great industrial city and I have the right to come here and make this protest. I have a right to be heard, and nobody shall stop me."

Addressing members of the committee as "you guys," the slender, black-haired Pittsburgh Democrat did not improve his committee welcome by blandly asserting:

"The City of Pittsburgh has a function to perform which is more important than that performed by this body."

Doughton Tries, Fails.

Representative Robert L. Doughton, big, raw-boned committee chairman, can stand just so much from a witness and then he goes into action. He unlimbered on McNair yesterday, but he didn't get to first base.

Oblivious to efforts of Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, to read into the record a list of $536,000,000 in Federal allotments to Pennsylvania, McNair kept right on talking.

"Can't a member of Congress make a statement without you butting in?" shouted Doughton.

"He interrupted me. Why can't I interrupt him?" retorted the mayor.

Yell at Each Other.

For several minutes Doughton and McNair yelled at each other. A Capitol policeman in the rear of the room edged forward. E. W. G. Huffman, committee clerk, went to meet him. But by this time the tempest was subsiding. A motion was made to excuse McNair, and the Mayor said he would leave gladly.

In the corridor outside he told reporters:

"I saw in the paper this morning this committee has been razzing witnesses, so I decided to do a little razzing myself. I wish they had called the policeman to put me out. I wish I had brought some of my own along."

Then he posed for a picture.

Following the Mayor on the witness stand, Leslie M. Johnson, public works director of Pittsburgh, carried on where McNair left off. In answer to statements that Federal money had been lavished on Pennsylvania, Johnson said Pittsburgh had been "injured" by the allocations, 50 per cent of which he charged had been "wasted" and

G.O.P. Pledges 8 Ky. Delegates To Gov. Landon

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., March 31.—Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas won the endorsement today of the Kentucky Republican Convention which unanimously instructed its delegates from the State at large to vote for him so long as his name was before the national convention at Cleveland.

Adoption of resolutions describing the Kansas executive as the man "best fitted" for the Presidency came after seven of the nine Congressional districts convention instructed 14 district delegates for Landon.

The convention elected eight State-at-large delegates, with half a vote each, and instructed them to vote as a unit for Landon. The unit rule, however, did not apply to four uninstructed delegates elected in the Third (Louisville) and Fifth (Northern Kentucky) Congressional districts.

Kentucky's delegation as Cleveland will be composed of 18 delegates instructed for Landon and four uninstructed.

Dawson Cheered.

As keynote and temporary chairman of the convention, former Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson was cheered when he declared "Roosevelt and Roosevelt alone will be the issue of the coming campaign."

Cries of "give it to 'em, judge" came from the crowd as the attorney, who as a Federal jurist, held several New Deal acts unconstitutional, assailed the Roosevelt Administration for "extravagance," "boondoggling," "violation of solemn campaign pledges," and "usurpation and perversion of the Constitution."

Charging that "public funds will be ruthlessly used" and attempts made to "bribe whole communities" with Federal money, Dawson called on Democrats to join Republicans in a fight to "preserve the Constitution."

Breckinridge Files.

Trenton, N. J., March 31 (AP).—Henry Breckinridge, New York attorney and personal friend and adviser to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, today entered his name in the New Jersey Presidential preference primary as a Democrat. The primary elections will be held May 19.

Who Will Lead The G. O. P.?

Only the Republican Convention, meeting in Cleveland in June, can supply the final answer to that question.

But the latest poll by the Institute of Public Opinion, taken among Republicans in all sections of the country, can tell you which men the G. O. P. voters favor at the present time.

The question asked in the poll was: "If you would vote Republican today, which candidate would you like to support?" For the answer see

Dr. Townsend Names Board To Lead Plan

Expects to Call National Meeting of Pension Advocates.

By Felix Bruner.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend announced yesterday that management of the Old-Age Revolving Pensions, Inc., official name of the $200-a-month pension movement, had been placed in the hands of a board of directors.

The reorganization follows the resignation of Robert E. Clements, cofounder and secretary-treasurer, who, with Townsend, has directed affairs of the clubs.

At the same time, Townsend announced he planned to turn more than 90 per cent of the profits of the Townsend National Weekly to the movement. He also said he planned to call a national convention of advocates of his plan, to meet before the national political conventions.

National headquarters of the movement, he said, will be shifted from Washington to Chicago, although an office will be maintained here to keep in touch with Congress.

Describing the change, Townsend said he had planned it for many months, but not until now had he been able to carry it out.

Belongs to Donors.

"The Townsend Plan belongs to the American people who support it and whose financial gifts have made possible our success to date," he said.

Townsend said his salary would be paid from the profit of the Townsend Weekly and that he would receive no salary from the Townsend clubs. The weekly, until Clements' resignation, had been owned jointly by Clements and Townsend.

Retaining presidency of the organization, the doctor announced appointment of these officers: Gomer Smith, Oklahoma City, vice president; Gilmour Youngs, San Francisco, national secretary; Dr. Clinton Wunder, New York City, Eastern regional director; J. B. Kiefer, Chicago, central regional director; Frank Arbuckle, Los Angeles, Western regional director; Nathan J. Roberts, Jacksonville, Fla., Southern regional director, and Alfred Wright, Cleveland, as Ohio director. Townsend said a national treasurer "of recognized ability" would be named soon.

All clubs, Townsend asserted, will be requested "to immediately start machinery in motion to choose by popular election the outstanding and most worthy Townsendite in each State." These leaders will comprise a national advisory committee.

"As rapidly as possible," he said, "our State managers will be placed on a salary basis commensurate with the responsibility they carry, the amount of territory they represent, etc. As in the past, all employes in the national office and all regional directors will be paid a regular salary."

Townsend said he would ask the board of directors to select an auditing firm "of undeniable integrity and of national reputation" to audit the finances of the organization.

In addition, the announcement said, a department of visual education will be established to show by motion pictures the benefits of paying everybody over 60 years old $200 a month. Townsend said he was sticking to the $200-a-month figure.

"The Townsend plan can not be defeated," he said. "The present Congressional investigation lends itself to making more solid our ranks and to creating within the millions of our followers a greater zeal for an early success."

The investigation will be resumed this morning when Clements will again appear before the special House investigating committee.

Townsend referred to his new organization as "truly democratic."

Meanwhile, the breech between

Mrs. Harriman, Al Smith, Jr., Are Cited in Lottery Charges

By the Associated Press.

Solicitor Karl A. Crowley, of the Postoffice Department, made known yesterday that Mrs. Oliver Harriman's National Conference on Legalizing Lotteries had been cited "to show cause" why it should not be barred from the mails for conducting a lottery.

At the same time the "Golden Stakes," another "prize contest," in which Al Smith, jr., is interested, was cited "to show cause" why it should not be barred from the mails both as a "lottery" and as a "fraud."

If the solicitor is not satisfied with their answers, lawyers said, a "fraud order" would be issued and all mail to them returned to the addressee marked "fraudulent."

The Postoffice Department charged that the "Golden Stakes" adopted its name "to stimulate, in part, the name of a certain foreign lottery unlawfully promoted by agents in the United States," and prepared "a numbered 'ticket' in form and manner designed to stimulate a ticket in aforesaid foreign lottery."

Emil K. Ellis, general counsel of the National Conference on Legalizing Lotteries, in a statement later, termed "grossly misleading" the use of the word "fraud" in connection with his organization.

"No charges of misrepresentation or fraud are contained in the department's citation," he declared. "On the subject of the legality of the plan itself, before the contest was actually commenced, written permission of the Postoffice Department for the use of the mails was obtained. The question was pointed presented to the depart-

Doom Forecast For $258,000 D. C. Aid Pleas

Rep. Buchanan, Chairman of Committee, Attacks 1935 Relief.

The District Commissioners yesterday asked the Budget Bureau to approve an additional $258,000 appropriation for relief for the current fiscal year, but even before the request could reach the bureau, Representative James P. Buchanan (Democrat), of Texas, predicted the additional funds would not be appropriated.

Pleas of the Commissioners, Public Welfare officials and leaders in welfare work for more money fell on deaf ears so far as the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee was concerned.

"I don't think the request of the Commissioners for more money for relief is of much use, even if the Budget Bureau approves it," Buchanan said.

Payments Are Limited.

"It won't be unless they present some permanent plan for reducing relief to a normal basis. The $11,000,000 spent for relief here last year is entirely too much and is ridiculous in such a prosperous city as this, especially as the National Capital hasn't felt the depression in comparison with other cities of the country."

Buchanan did not indicate what would be a "normal basis" for relief, but he made it plain that he disapproved of relief on the scale on which it has been given in the past. Inasmuch as he is chairman of the committee which must pass on the request for additional funds, if the request gets beyond the Federal Budget Bureau, his statement was regarded by many officials as virtually closing the door on their hopes.

Pending appropriation of additional funds, the Board of Public Welfare has limited relief payments to the 4,200 cases of unemployables now on relief and to those families eligible for aid under the dependent children aid law in which may be employables. All others have received their last relief check.

1,400 Aid Certificates.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, following a conference with Miss M. Alice Hill, director of the public assistance division, announced that approximately 4,000 cases of employables would be cut off relief under the new policy. These cases, Street said, represented something like 12,000 individuals. The number of individuals might run as high as 15,000, he said.

This is a sharp drop in the official estimate of the number of individuals who will be cut off. Last week it was estimated the total would be approximately 19,000. Street said he based his estimate of the number of individuals on an average of three persons per case among the employables and unemployables.

During February, he said, there were 10,000 cases on relief. These represented 30,000 individuals. On March 1 there were 9,200 cases, representing 27,000 persons. Of the cases 4,200 were classed as unemployables, and 5,000 were classed as employables. Of the employables, 4,000 are to be cut off. What is to happen to the other 1,000 cases was not accounted for.

To date there have been 1,400 certifications for aid for dependent children certified to the Federal Social Security Board. These include employable and unemployable cases. How many individuals

'I'm Innocent,' Hauptmann Writes With 'Dying Breath'

'They Have Done Wrong on Me' He Says in Letter to Gov. Hoffman, Scoring Wilentz, Dr. Condon and State Witnesses as He Resigns Himself.

By the United Press.

Trenton, March 31.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, a few hours before his execution was postponed, wrote a letter to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, in which he repeated that he could not shed any light on the Lindbergh case and that his death "would add only another dead to the Lindbergh case."

"Mr. Wilentz," the doomed man wrote, "with my dying breath I swear by God that you convicted an innocent man. Once you will stand before the same judge to whom I go in a few hours. You know you have done wrong on me, you will not only take my life, but also all the happiness of my family. God will be judge between me and you."

"Your Excellence Governor:
Harold G. Hoffman,
'Your Excellence:

"My writing is not for fear of losing my life, this is in the hands of God, it is his will. I will go gladly, it means the end of my tremendous suffering. Only in thinking of my dear wife and my little boy, that is breaking my heart. I know until this terrible crime is solved, they will have to suffer under the weight of my unfair conviction.

"For passing away, I assure Your Excellency that I am not guilty of this crime. Over and over again I was trying to convince the prosecution that they murder an innocent man. I offer myself to any test what science may offer—but I was beggin in vain. I did this, not to force the prosecution to put me free, but only to convince the world that I am innocent.

"In living my last hours of my life, I wish I could bring some light in this case, but all what I can do, is to give a description of the friend of Mr. Fisch whim I saw the first time when I meet Mr. Fisch. (Description I have given already, all so all the circumstances).

Witness Ready To Face Jurors In Wendel Case

Trenton Man Goes to Court House, Denies Suspect Borrowed His Car.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 31.—Tito Salamandra, a Trenton liquor dealer, came to Mercer County Prosecutor Irwin E. Marshall's office tonight in connection with Paul Wendel's repudiated kidnap-murder "confession" in the Lindbergh case.

Salamandra came voluntarily, accompanied by his nephew, Anthony Salamandra, an attorney, while the county grand jury was deliberating Wendel's case.

Earlier, the jury had sought and obtained a last-minute postponement of the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann on the ground it had uncovered "interesting new angles."

"I will testify before the grand jury if they ask me to," said Salamandra, a portly, half-bald Spaniard who speaks with a marked accent.

"I know nothing about Wendel's reported charge that I loaned him my car for use in the alleged kidnaping.

"I have not seen his repudiated 'confession.' If I had, I could clear up this whole thing—or my part in it, at least."

Anthony Salamandra announced shortly before midnight that he and Tito were leaving the county prosecutor's office shortly. Neither had appeared before the grand jury.

"Tito knows nothing of the case," Anthony said. "He knows nothing of the automobile reputed to have been used by Paul Wendel in his now repudiated confession of the Lindbergh kidnaping.

"This is nothing but a political fight. If the grand jury had any real evidence it would have returned an indictment before this."

He said Tito appeared at the office of the county prosecutor at the request of a friend, who has no direct connection with the grand jury.

Told of News, German's Wife Wild With Joy

'I'll Always Remember You,' She Wrote in Deadline Note.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 31.—Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, told of the 48-hour delay in the execution of her husband, was "hysterical with joy," a person close to her said tonight.

Dr. William S. Collier, who has been attending her, left Mrs. Hauptmann's hotel quarters at 8:20 p. m. and said:

"Yes, she knows about it.

"She's all right now. She's very happy."

He would say no more.

The contents of a note Mrs. Hauptmann sent this afternoon to her husband were made known as follows:

"I love you and I will always remember you. I will continue to hope and you must, too."

But neither actually hoped for much. Mrs. Hauptmann had bought herself a mourning veil in the afternoon, and was awaiting the dread words that would mean all was over.

But she looked forward late tonight to another visit with her husband tomorrow. She asked C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense counsel, if she might see Hauptmann. Fisher said he assumed so, since only on the last day—now set for Thursday—do prison regulations forbid a visit.

Warden Delays German's Death At Last Minute

NEW DATE FOR ELECTROCUTION WILL BE TOMORROW OR FRIDAY

Convicted Slayer of Lindbergh Baby Appears Stunned When Told of Delay at the Zero Hour.

By Edward T. Folliard,
A Staff Correspondent.

State Prison, Trenton, N. J., March 31.—Richard Bruno Hauptmann was literally yanked away from the electric chair tonight at the hour set for him to atone for the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby.

He now has at least 48 hours more to live.

Before his life was once more left swinging in the balance Hauptmannw rote a "farewell" letter to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman proclaiming his innocence and predicting "in a short time I will stand before a higher judge."

The last-minute delay came at the request of the Mercer County grand jury, which all afternoon had been hearing evidence against Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton lawyer, who was reported to have confessed to the $50,000 kidnap-murder, but who now repudiates the "confession."

The jury, through foreman Allyne M. Freeman, notified Col. Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper of the prison, there "were some interesting angles in the case" that it wished to investigate further.

Newspapermen Summoned.

Thereupon Col. Kimberling called together 30 newspapermen who were ready to walk to the death chamber and announced that the execution of Hauptmann had been delayed. He did not say the postponement was for 48 hours.

"You can say," he told the reporters, "that the execution will be either Thursday or Friday."

It was understood he meant this would be the case unless the grand jury indicts Wendel and a court orders a stay for Hauptmann.

The postponement—the most dramatic of its kind in history, was announced on the stroke of 8 o'clock tonight. That was the hour at which Hauptmann was scheduled to walk from his cell to the death chamber.

Hauptmann's head had been shaved to clear way for the fatal current, his prison uniform had been exchanged for a cheap black suit, and Robert Ellictt, the "man who walks alone," was toying with the switches in the death chamber, getting ready to earn another $150 as an executioner.

The great crowd gathered near the grim-looking prison was quick to hear the news of the delay.

Hauptmann, whose famed "steel nerves" gave away on him earlier in the day, heard the news from his faithful attorney, Lloyd C. Fisher.

Apparently he was stunned.

Coming back from the death house, Fisher told what had happened:

"I said, 'Richard, you have got a stay.'

"He said, 'I'm very happy; this ought to mean better things for me.'"

Fisher was asked how the former German machine gunner acted, whether he laughed or cried.

"He didn't do anything," said Fisher. "He just looked at me and said what I told you he said. If you think that's preposterous, well then don't print it."

Spends Sleepless Night.

Truly it did sound "preposterous." All day long had come reports of Hauptmann breaking up. He had gone without sleep all night; he had spurned food, and he had alternately wept and proclaimed that he would "die like a man."

To understand what led up to Hauptmann's temporary escape tonight, it is necessary to go back to the little town of Flemington, N. J., where a year ago last February the Bronx carpenter was convicted of murdering the first-born son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who presided at the trial, set "the week of March 30" for Hauptmann's death in the electric chair after a 30-day reprieve was granted by Gov. Hoffman.

The custom has been in Trenton to execute prisoners on a Tuesday at 8 p. m., and Kimberling followed the custom in setting that hour tonight for Hauptmann's death.

If Kimberling chose to make it tomorrow night or some other night in this, the "week of March 30," it was entirely within his discretion.

Early today, even while Hauptmann's teeth were "chattering," as one of his visitors described it, there were signs that the execution might be put off.

Attorney Fisher had gone before Justice Trenchard, and on the basis of Wendel's "confession" appealed for a stay of the execution.

Justice Trenchard denied the appeal, saying the "confession" was "incredible on its face and out of harmony with the known facts in the case.

Grand Jury Calls Parker.

However, the county grand jury, at its regular meeting, decided to take up the case of Wendel, and it called upon Ellis H. Parker, chief of his Burlington County detectives, and his secetary, Anna Baeding.

It was Parker who turned Wendel over to the local author-

Ethical to Help Congressmen, Says Gifford

A. T. & T. Head Declines to Accept Responsibility for Speeches.

Smiling pleasantly, Walter S. Gifford, president of the five-billion-dollar American Telephone & Telegraph Company, said yesterday on the witness stand he considers it is ethical to prepare speeches for a busy Congressman and to urge their delivery, but that it's up to the Congressman to decide whether the delivery of such speeches is ethical.

"I am not the keeper of his conscience, you know," he said.

Gifford, the day's first witness in the third week's investigation by the Federal Communications Commission of the A. T. & T., was led through a long series of policy questions by Samuel Becker, dapper special counsel for the F. C. C. inquiry. Becker, carefully laying the foundation for a group of exposures (expected today), of alleged attempts by the company to influence and guide legislators in matters concerning the monopoly's far-flung interests, sought through Gifford to discover the company's policy on legislation wherever enacted.

He questioned the urbane, gray-haired telephone chief closely, developing that Gifford throughout his career has advocated protection of the principles of democracy by refraining from using pressure of any kind on legislatures, and by using only the mildest sort of lobbying tactics. Gifford readily admitted the greater responsibility of the A. T. & T. than of smaller businesses, but noted the possibility of an exception in each case on which he was questioned.

Proper to Meet Legislators.

Gifford said it was highly improper to send telegrams signed by persons whose consent had not been given to such signature; that it was improper to notify a Congressman that all the employes and stockholders of a corporation would vote against him unless he favored or defeated certain legislation; but that it was proper to meet legislators at trains and offer them various services.

In this connection Gifford said he thought it good business to "go after prospective customers" in this way, and to create friendly relations with legislators.

"When I came here, I wasn't met at the train," complained Becker, as the audience laughed.

"I'm sorry you were overlooked," smiled Gifford.

Becker then asked him whether invitations to luncheon and dinner, or the giving of theater tickets was proper.

Laughing, Gifford answered:

"It's proper to get acquainted, and it may be that's the only way you can get acquainted with Congressmen. But I don't think it's very wicked. While I wouldn't give theater tickets unless I went along to the show myself, I think such things are only a little bit wicked."

Studies 10,000 Bills.

The company head conceded that the policy of the Bell System in studying every bill and resolution even remotely affecting the labor, operating, taxation or other interests of the company proposed in all of the legislatures of the country yearly, meant that the legal staff went over some 10,000 bills every other year, when all legislatures were in session, and at least 5,000 measures on the even-numbered years.

In making suggestions to local company heads on tactics to meet adverse legislation or how to promote favorable legislation, he indicated that the interests of the public, the stockholders of the system and the employes were considered. Becker attempted to show that the system's interests might not always coincide with those of the company, but Gifford said that "in the long run" they would.

Asked about numerous cases of opposition to proposed legislature and Congressional investigations over a period of years, Gifford said: "Well, we can't spend our lives being investigated. It takes a lot of time and trouble. I'd rather retire and live on a farm."

Becker then asked Gifford if he thought no safeguards for the public interest were necessary other than the integrity of Bell System officials. Gifford thought that a sufficient safeguard, when coupled with the "limelight of publicity."

Later with Charles M. Bracelen, vice president and general counsel of the telephone company, on the stand, Becker cited a number of documents from the company's files to show that:

The A. T. & T. has opposed, in the States of Michigan, Wisconsin and New Mexico, investigations of the public utilities commissions of those States by their separate legislatures. No reason for this was brought out.

The company has opposed legislation for minimum wage contracts, laws that would prohibit night work for women under the age of 18, that would make compulsory arbitration in labor disputes, that would allow peaceful picketing, laws providing forms of social security, such as unemployment insurance, and laws for the 40-hour work week.

Mr. Bracelen did not agree that company had opposed all these proposed laws, but identified a number of documents which clearly showed opposition by the company to some of them.

Rival Camps' Whispering Campaign Evidence Landon Out in Front for Nomination.

By Franklyn Waltman

IF evidence were needed that Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas is far and away the foremost contender for the Republican Presidential nomination, it is found in the fact that the rival camps within the party are beginning to gang up on him—not openly, but surreptitiously and by setting on foot whispering campaigns.

WALTMAN

Within the last week a wave of anti-Landon propaganda has swept over Washington—most of it vague without supporting facts; some of it obviously untrue and some of it nasty. Such is the power of the Washington sounding board in matters political that this propaganda is now being spread around the country.

There is nothing unusual or strange about this development. It is according to the best rules for playing the game of politics. It happens every four years during the preconvention campaigns. Smear the fellow out in front, by hook or by crook, but smear him, is the motto. Sometimes it works and sometimes it becomes a boomerang, but it gives color to the contention that it is dangerous for a candidate to be too far in front this early in the proceedings.

The contention is based chiefly on the Wood-Lowden experience of 1920—but in that case charges that unconscionable sums of money had been used in the campaign for delegates were proved. The rule worked in 1912—to go further back—when Champ Clark, after leading the race, was struck down at the finish line. But Clark's defeat was due primarily to the Democratic two-thirds rule.

The rule did not work, however, in the last two elections. At this time of the year in 1928 Al Smith was head and shoulders above all other Democratic aspirants, and he gained ground until the day of the convention. The same was true, on the Republican side, of Herbert Hoover, who won the nomination despite a coolness toward him on the part of the man in the White House, the party's leader.

Four years ago it became clear in April that Franklin D. Roosevelt was in the front for the Democratic nomination. The opposition within the party—including those in charge of national headquarters—tried all sorts of tactics against him, but he won despite the two-thirds rule. The truth was that Messrs. Smith, Hoover and Roosevelt in their respective races were so far in front that they could not be stopped.

* * *

Whether Gov. Landon is now so far in front that he cannot be stopped is not clear. But there can be no quarrel with the statement that without being particularly active, he has made a phenomenal race so far. It is to be expected that the going will become heavier as the convention approaches; that some of his friends will prove to be liabilities and that attacks on him will multiply.

Yet the Landon bandwagon does not seem to have been slowed down by the current propaganda, which is spread about, if it does not originate with, friends of Senator William E. Borah, former President Herbert Hoover and Col. Frank Knox. New Dealers also have had a hand in the campaign to smear Gov. Landon. They would infinitely prefer either Mr. Hoover or Senator Borah to the Kansas Governor as President Roosevelt's opponent this year.

* * *

The most frequent charge made against the Kansan is that he is the candidate of "the interests," which have not yet been identified, except for Senator Borah's effort by inference to make it appear that Standard Oil was backing Gov. Landon—an inference quickly disclaimed by the Idahoan when he was called on it.

It also is contended by the whisperers that Gov. Landon is the choice of the Republican "Old Guard"—which has become a feeble element within the party. But it is supposed to sound very sinister. More specifically, it has been whispered around that a certain oil man with an unsavory reputation has been lavishly financing the Landon campaign—although the Kansan's friends assert that not more than $5,000 has been spent in his campaign so far and that this sum was raised among Kansan friends and college mates.

On top of these rumors word comes every couple of days that Senator Borah intends "to do a job" on Gov. Landon, attacking him by name and with verse and chapter. All of this is designed to create the impression that Gov. Landon will come a cropper in the final jumps.

Whether it works remains to be seen, but so far these attacks have rolled from the Kansan's back like water from a duck. As the undercover campaign claims that Gov. Landon is down with his shoulders touching the mat, Republicans in seven out of Kentucky's nine Congressional districts refuse to follow their leaders in behalf of an uninstructed delegation and bind their delegates to vote for the Kansan, and Delaware's Republican Governor declares him the most available man in the party.

* * *

Publication yesterday of "This Man Landon," biography of the Kansas Governor by Frederick Palmer, comparing him to the Nation's greatest statesmen—which is customary in such biographies—adds to the flood of political bibliography gushing forth this year.

Norman Beasley's "Frank Knox: American" already has been issued. In another week will come "Borah of Idaho" by Prof. Claudius O. Johnson, head of the department of history and political science at the State College of Washington. Herbert Hoover is represented by the Myers-Newton "The Hoover Administration." Ogden L. Mills' "Liberalism Fights On" has been on the book stands for several weeks and Charles P. Taft's "You and I—And Roosevelt" spares neither the left-wing demagogue nor the "Old Guard" bellwether, as the publisher says. Tens of thousands of copies of James P. Warburg's "Hell Bent for Election" are being distributed by the Republicans and the Du Ponts. It is the best campaign year the book publishers have had in a decade.

were comprised in this group officials could not say. During February, Street said, there were 6,542 families on relief. These comprised 26,624 individuals. Some 700 of the employable cases have been families to which relief payments have been made to supplement the security wage paid on WPA jobs.

The relief situation was gone over at a hearing before the Commissioners at which the position of the Board of Welfare was set forth by Street and others and supported by representatives of welfare organizations. They asked first the $258,000 supplemental appropriation for this year. This amount is the difference between the $608,000 asked by the welfare board and the $350,000 appropriated. The Welfare Board now has on hand $500,000 for relief for the balance of the year, Street said. This is made up of the $350,000 just appropriated and $150,000 balance on hand at the end of this month.

Every effort should be made to persuade Congress to increase the $1,506,020 carried in the District appropriation bill for next year as it was passed by the House, the Commissioners were told. Stressing need for more money for this year, the pleaders said:

"We feel sure that only by such provision will the reputation of the District of Columbia for humane treatment of its public dependents be maintained and untold suffering and distress for thousands of our fellow residents be prevented."

Committee Aid Attacks Hearst In Lobby Fight

The Senate Lobby investigation committee yesterday turned its guns on newspapers in general and on William Randolph Hearst in particular.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, a member of the committee, in an hour-long speech in the Senate, defended the committee's seizure of telegrams and began recital of a life history of the chain-newspaper publisher. He indicated he would resume his recital today.

Hearst is seeking an injunction in District Supreme Court to prevent the committee from using telegrams sent by him and taken from Washington telegraph offices. In answer to the committee's plea in court that the injunction suit be dismissed, Hearst declared yesterday that "if the contention of the defendants who have moved to dismiss be correct, then we have had our liberties destroyed and are back to prerevolutionary days."

Hearst Criticized.

The Hearst answer was filed by Elisha B. Hanson, attorney, to whom Schwellenbach referred in his speech as "just a stooge."

Opening his talk with a brief comment on charges made against the committee by Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, Schwellenbach said he did not believe "anyone pays very much attention what Mr. Shouse says." He then turned to a defense of the committee, followed by his criticism of Hearst.

"We believe," said the Washington Senator, "that every member of our committee has as great a love and respect for the Constitution as any newspaper editor or any member of the opposition who may, because of the fact that he desires to prevent the disclosure of facts such as have been uncovered by the committee, attempted to attack the committee upon the ground that the committee is abusing constitutional rights and privileges.

Protected Constitution.

"The committee in its every activity has assiduously attempted to protect the constitutional rights of everyone connected with the investigation. No personal telegrams being sent into or out of Washington were at any time examined by the committee or any member of the committee or any of its agents or employes. We got telegrams which we secured as a result of the power and authority of the Senate and we got them under our own subpena."

Referring to attacks on the committee by Hearst newspapers, Schwellenbach said the publisher "has become the plumed knight leader of the newspaper fraternity of this country." Supporting this charge, he called attention to a resolution of the American Newspaper Publisher's Association condemning the committee's seizure of messages.

"He (Hearst) comes down here through the medium of his attorney, Elisha Hanson, who parades himself before they public in Washington as being an authority upon constitutional law," Schwellbach said. "Anybody with any information about legal conditions in the city of Washington or about newspaper conditions knows that Hanson is today and always has been just a stooge for William Randolph Hearst and the rest of the newspaper fraternity of this country who believe that newspapers should be run upon the basis and theory of a sweatshop."

Hearst Fortune Cited.

Schwellenbach described the Hearst fortune and told of his construction of a "$15,000,000 Bavarian castle" in California. While Hearst was building the castle, he said, and "while he was getting $500,000 a year salary, he was putting into effect three separate and distinct reductions of 10 per cent each in the salary of his employes."

The Senator went into detail charging Hearst was largely responsible for the war with Spain. He then switched to the World War and charged that the International News Service, a Hearst organization, had stolen war news from the Associated Press. He recounted a suit against the Hearst agency by the Associated Press.

"The securing of news by larceny and bribery was the charge which the Associated Press made and sustained against William Randolph Hearst, this man who talks about the sacredness of the press and the sacredness of the telegraph wires," he said. "And let it be said to the eternal disgrace of the American newspaper profession that the Associated Press did not have the courage to remove Mr. Hearst from membership in that body."

Schwellenbach charged Hearst deliberately stirred up feeling prior to the World War and quoted a telegram from Hearst to the editor of the New York American, telling him that flags printed on the front page "probably have helped to sell papers."

Fascism Charged.

"It is a peculiar thing," he said, "that the leader of the movement in this country toward fascism, the man who when he returned after a visit with Hitler in Germany editorially praised Mr. Hitler, and the man who more than anybody else is advocating fascism in this country—and under fascism you know what remains of personal liberty and the freedom of the press—this man is William Randolph Hearst who today is so ardent in his protection of the rights of the people under the Constitution."

In recounting Spanish War history, Schwellenbach said Hearst was responsible for stealing and publishing an advance copy of the peace treaty. He waved a photostatic copy of the New York Journal of that day containing the treaty.

"Not any man in the country today is more despised by the people who work for him than William Randolph Hearst," he said.

In his answer to the committee's plea for dismissal of the injunction suit, Hearst said:

"Neither House of Congress is the final arbiter of its own powers where private rights and liberties of citizens are at stake. Otherwise, the dominance of the legislative branch of the Government over both the executive and judicial departments would be absolute. And the citizens of this country would be subject to a parliamentary dictatorship from the excess of which there would be no relief."

U. S. Is Leader In Fight to Bar War, Says Hull

America's Arms Cut, Trade and 'Neighbor' Policies Cited in Report.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull has placed before Congress an assertion that the United States was leading the world against war through its trade, naval arms reduction and "good neighbor" policies.

"The primary purpose of American foreign policy," he said, "is the maintenance and promotion of peace, not only betwen the United States and foreign nations but throughout the world.

"Whenever war prevails the progress of civilization is retarded, commerce and industry are impaired, heavy tax burdens are imposed upon people and humanity in general suffers."

In testimony before a House Appropriations sub-committee — made public for the first time yesterday, and considered significant since it stood in the nature of his sole annual report to Congress—the Secretary of State said:

"In seeking to promote political peace this Government has dedicated itself unequivocally to the policy of the good neighbor. We have endeavored consistently to cooperate with the other nations of the world in strengthening the machinery of peace and in devising new ways of preventing the possibility of war."

Points to Conference.

Hull said the "good neighbor" policy had been carried out through participation in the Pan-American conference where five peace pacts were signed; signing of a new treaty with Cuba calling for abolition of the Platt amendment which permitted American intervention in that nation and the withdrawal of Marines from Haiti.

Discussing the Administration's trade program, the secretary said it was "the most constructive single effort to achieve the liberalization of world trade through the reciprocal reduction of trade barriers and the removal and prevention of discriminations." He added:

"If nations can find no practicable method of abandoning the existing practices which make for increasing economic nationalism, there can be but one result, which is economic conflict, and economic conflict sets the stage for war."

Hull cited the "stake" of nearly $14,000,000,000 Americans have in foreign countries and the more than 500,000 Americans who travel or live abroad as demanding this Government's day-by-day attention to prevent the United States from becoming embroiled in international controversies.

Touching on trade relations with Japan, Hull said it was necessary to give "a great deal more thought and attention" to protect American interests than in past years.

Blonde Repeats Slaying Story; Defense Rests

Vera Stretz Denies Telling Police German Did Not Attack Her.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 31.—Vera Stretz concluded a three-day ordeal on the witness stand late today, repeating to a State's attorney her story of how she shot and killed her suitor, Dr. Fritz Gebhart, in an attempt to ward off a brutal assault she said he forced on her.

But she was more calm under the prodding questions of Assistant District Attorney Miles M. O'Brien than when she recounted to her attorney, Samuel S. Leibowitz, the sordid story of the end of her romance with Gebhart last November 12.

Leibowitz, who surprised the jury by waiving an opportunty for an opening statement, asked the 32-year-old former secretary only a few questions after O'Brien had finished, and then announced the defense had rested.

Denies She Talked.

After court adjourned Leibowitz said he may put one or two minor witnesses on the stand tomorrow. He did not indicate who they were.

Miss Stretz denied she told a police detective after her arrest there had been no attack.

Her five-hour cross-examination was an attempt by the State to shake her plea of self-defense.

"Do you deny the statement made by police that you said there was no assault?" O'Brien asked.

Miss Stretz replied: "I think I can say that because I didn't talk at all."

O'Brien then asked her if she remembered telling police that she would not talk until she "had seen a lawyer."

"Yes," she replied.

Retells Entire Story.

The State had her retell the entire story of her relationship with the German export-import firm executive with whom she testified she had been intimate before he went to Europe in the summer of 1935.

The ash-blonde stenographer testified they had quarrelled several times, but said she thought he was "always a gentleman."

Shortly before the cross-examination was ended, Leibowitz moved for a retrial on the ground that Judge Cornelius F. Collins was prejudiced against the defendant. The motion was denied.

"I object to the court's remarks," Leibowitz said, "and I feel they are prejudicial to the defendant."

He referred to remarks made by the judge as interpretations of a statement made by Miss Stretz.

4 Held Under Bond In Numbers Racket

Four men, accused as "numbers" operators, were held in bonds of $1,500 each yesterday when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on charges of setting up a gaming table.

Arrested earlier in the day when vice squad police, led by Sergt. George Deyoe, raided a barber shop in the 1400 block of Irving street northwest, the men gave names of Joseph Loewe, 30, of 5500 block Illinois avenue northwest; Vincent Norcera, 45, of 1500 block Monroe street northwest; Otto Weisgerber, 43, of 1300 block Kenyon street northwest, and Clinton Chambers, 19, of 900 block Twenty-sixth street northwest.

Police said they confiscated a quantity of alleged "numbers" and racing slips and a small amount of money. According to investigators, the reputed establishment was operated under supervision of a so-called "big shot" gambler.

Typist for Nudists Starts on Duties

Tampa, Fla., March 31 (AP).—Helena Hardy, ill and jobless for several weeks, today was a full-fledged nudist stenographer under the shade of a moss-laden oak tree on the shore of Lake Thonotossa, with nature's raiment as her "office dress."

A typewriter mounted on a table in the wide out-of-doors constituted the office furniture for the slender, 25-year-old brunette. She was an employe and nudist member of the American Gymnosophical Association, which means "nudist colony" in practical application.

Some days ago, Herman Soshinski, director of the nudist group at Lake Thonotossa, advertised for a stenographer who would subscribe to the nudist ideas. Yesterday he found 60 young women applying for the one job he had to offer.

Miss Hardy, recommended by the Federal Re-employment Service here, was employed on her qualifications, which included five years of interest in nudism, membership in a nudist colony in Miami, and experience as a nurse, in addition to stenographic ability.

Detective's Assault Trial Again Delayed

Trial board hearing of Detective Sergt. Frank Alligood, charged with assault on a superior officer and intoxication, was continued again yesterday until next Tuesday, when physicians told the board the policeman was still in the hospital.

The charges grew out of the detective's alleged attack on Inspector Bernard W. Thompson in front of the Willard Hotel while he was guarding the President on March 7. Alligood is said to be suffering a brain tumor.

I.C.C. Suspends Delivery Plan Of Railroads

Free Service Proposal Is Delayed to November 1 as Trucks Protest.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday suspended until November 1 a proposal by Eastern railroads to establish free pick-up and delivery service.

The service, which was to have become effective today, was vigorously protested by trucking interests at a hearing before the I. C. C. yesterday.

Truck spokesmen centered their fire on the railroads' plan to allow 5 cents per hundred pounds to shippers and consignees performing pick-up and delivery service for themselves.

The commission will conduct an investigation into the proposed new service and will rule on it finally by November 1.

Fight Workers Bill.

Meanwhile, railroad managements massed opposition in Congress yesterday against the bill by Representative Crosser (Democrat), Ohio, to assure new jobs or other compensation for workers displaced in rail consolidations or other economy moves.

J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, told a House sub-committee considering the bill that the problem was one to be handled by agreement rather than legislation.

"Certainly a railroad with its hands tied by a law of this kind could not comply with the mandate of Congress to operate efficiently and economically," he said. "The railroads should not be prevented by law from effecting such economies as well ultimately benefit labor by reason of the increased traffic that would follow decreased cost."

Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, protested the proposed legislation would prevent abandonment, or consolidation, of rail lines even though they were not self-supporting.

President's Appeal.

Interest in the hearing was heightened by President Roosevelt's recent appeal for railroad managements and employes to seek an agreement on the question of labor displacements in terminal consolidations.

While the Crosser bill was under fire of the rail executives' support for the Eastman bill to permit the I. C. C. to fix minimum joint rail-water rates and require establishment of through routes in the public interest was voiced before another committee by the American Short Line Railroad Association.

C. A. Miller, association counsel, said that unless the commission is given this authority the short lines will be "wholly unprotected" when the emergency transportation act expires in June and larger lines "will immediately make a raid upon their routes."

Overtime Ordered For D.C. Inspectors

Employes of the building, plumbing and electrical inspectors' offices and the surveyor were ordered yesterday to work an additional 45 minutes daily to catch up with behind-hand work.

These offices are to close for business at 3 p. m. hereafter, the Commissioners ordered, to give employes more time in which to inspect applications.

More than $1,000,000 in building and repair applications have been filed and are awaiting approval and the inspection offices are falling steadily behind, it was said.

Luck at Its Best, Roosevelt Will Fish Until End of Week

Gov. and Lady Bede Clifford of Bahamas Are Guests at Buffet Lunch Aboard U. S. S. Potomac; President Catches 27-Pounder.

By the Associated Press.

Nassau, Bahamas, March 31.—Enthusiastic over his fishing luck, suntanned President Roosevelt told newspapermen during a brief visit in harbor here today he would continue his cruise until the end of the week—his second at sea.

The U. S. S. Potomac, carrying the President's flag and the Stars and Stripes, anchored in mid-harbor of this quaint, picturesque capital of the British Bahamas Islands for the day as Mr. Roosevelt put into very actual practice his "good neighbor" policy.

Sir Bede Clifford, Governor of the Bahamas, and Lady Clifford and their guests boarded the Potomac at 1 o'clock for an informal buffet lunch, served on the open quarter-deck of the comparatively small naval craft.

White House correspondents flew over from temporary headquarters at Miami in a Pan-American seaplane and interviewed the President before he turned out to open water tonight.

The Chief Executive reported his fishing luck the best he has enjoyed on any of these annual trips. As for official news he observed that everything seems quiet.

While his fishing companions indulged freely in fish stories with the newspapermen, Mr. Roosevelt told only of one incident—a catch by him of a 27-pound mystery fish which he has been unable to classify and is bringing back in the ice box to Washington.

He added with a smile that the fish might be a very common one, but he has not been able to classify the species so far.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was setting out tonight for the "Tongue of the Ocean," about 80 miles south of here and receives the name, the President explained, because the very deep body of water is surrounded by coral reefs and is the shape of a tongue. Mr. Roosevelt said he was anxious to find just what kind of fish inhabit the place.

The best luck so far, he said, was on a hunch trip to the uninhabited Caicos Island. So now he is looking for uninhabited islands, he added. The mystery fish was caught there.

Frederic A. Delano, uncle of Mr. Roosevelt, said goodby to the fishing expedition here to return by plane to his home at Washington to attend to business duties.

Mr. Roosevelt went to the gangplank to welcome personally aboard Sir Bede and Lady Clifford. She is an American girl.

Frank Henry, American Consul at Nassau, and Mrs. Henry joined the Presidential luncheon as did Mr. McIntyre, the White House correspondents and photographers.

The destroyers Monaghan and Dale stood by just outside the harbor, and alongside were three merchant ships.

Landon Given Kentucky Vote

Breckinridge also filed in Maryland today.

The 1,800 State convention delegates roared "Aye!" after a resolution binding national convention delegates to the President, was offered by United States Attorney John D. Clifford, jr.

The convention also invoked the unit rule.

Indorsement of the Roosevelt Administration followed addresses by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, and F. Harold Dubord, Maine National Committee member and candidate for the United States senatorial nomination.

"The slogan is still 'Fordward with Roosevelt!'" Dubord declared in concluding a keynote speech that praised the Chief Executive.

Bravery Acclaimed.

The bravery of President Roosevelt in inaugurating measures that kept "millions of unemployed from starving" was acclaimed by Reynolds.

"We owe it not only to him, but to ourselves and the future of our country to continue him in office," he said.

In pledging Maine's national convention votes to Roosevelt, the delegates repeated their 1932 action.

Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, precipitated a lengthy demonstration for Gov. Louis J. Brann when she exhorted the delegates not to allow him to leave the hall until he promised to be a candidate for a third term.

No word came from Brann, however, that he would change his announced plans to retire to private life.

The convention chose eight delegates at large to the national convention, each with a half vote, and two each from the State's three Congressional districts with full votes.

Reserve Quarters.

Cleveland, March 31 (AP).—Supporters of four prominent Republicans mentioned for the Presidential nomination prepared today to open extensive headquarters at the national convention here June 9.

Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas; Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho; Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago and Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, requested numerous hotel reservations from the committee on arrangements.

The Landon-for-President Committee asked headquarters in every hotel.

Borah's campaign managers requested one headquarters and a private suite. Senator Dickinson put in a request for "from 50 to 100 rooms." Col. Knox's committee applied for a number of rooms.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, asked for no headquarters, only a room and parlor.

Chairman Fletcher of the Republican National Committee said yesterday "the National Allied Republican Council, Inc.," with headquarters here, had no connection with his committee.

"It is not financed directly or indirectly by the Republican National Committee," his statement said, "nor is it acting in any manner under the direction of the Republican National Committee or with the advice or suggestion of the committee.

Brahms' Work Voted Favorite In Music Poll

Dr. Kindler Will Include Symphony No. 1 on Sunday Program.

National Symphony Orchestra followers, after a spirited contest to select their favorite symphony, chose the Symphony No. 1 of Johannes Brahms, Hans Kindler, conductor, announced yesterday as final votes were counted.

This work and other "favorites" picked by the concert-goers will be included in the annual request program, which closes the orchestra's 1935-3 season next Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall.

Among the request pieces will be the orchestral suite, "Circles of Washington," by R. Deane Shure, Washington composer. The composition, given its premiere by the orchestra last fall, depicts Logan, Thomas, Dupone and Observatory Circles. Other selections on the program, all of which received the largest number of votes in their respetcive fields, will be excerpts from Moussorgsky's opera, "Boris Godounov," arranged by Dr. Kindler; Beethoven's "Egmont" overture, and the intermezzo from Wolf-Ferrari's opera, "Jewels of the Madonna." Because Tschaikovsky's "Pathetique" Symphony ran the Brahms Symphony so close a race in that field, Dr. Kindler announced he will include a movement from the Tschaikovsky work on the program.

Before making its final appearance of the year Sunday, the orchestra makes a concert trip of the Carolinas. There will be a concert tomorrow at Duke University, Durham, N. C., and Friday and Saturday will be spent at a music festival at Columbia, S. C. Mr. Kindler and his men will return to Washington by special train to be here for the Sunday concert.

Air Conditioning Seen As Hope for Idle Aid

By the Associated Press.

Congress heard yesterday that all that was needed to solve the country's unemployment problem was one new industry like automobile manufacturing.

One of the "most hopeful prospects" of developing such an industry, Director Lyman J. Briggs of the Bureau of Standards told a House Appropriation sub-committee during hearings made public yesterday, lies in the air conditioning field.

"If we had one additional industry in this country of the size of the automobile industry and its related industries," he said, "we would have no trouble about employment."

Britain Claims Most Powerful Bombing Plane

New 12-Cylinder Fighting Ship Has 300-Mile Speed; Wing Spread 54 Feet.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 31.—A new single-engined bombing plane, described as the most formidable air weapon yet developed, is now being put through its final tests, air ministry officials disclosed today.

The plane is said to be capable of a speed of 300 miles an hour. Although it is yet to be placed in service by the Royal Air Force, it is regarded as one of the most important developments to date in British military aviation.

It is said to be so fast and so advanced in range, carrying power and ease of maneuvering that single-seater fighter planes will be practically useless against it.

Speed Not Announced.

No formal announcement has been made of its speed, but it has been stated that no defense plane at present in service in Britain could catch up with it.

Known as the Fairey "battle" medium bomber, it is powered with a new Rolls-Royce Merlin 12-cylinder engine, has a 54-foot wing span and an overall length of 42 feet 1¾ inches. Bombs are carried inside the wings.

Carefully streamlined the new machine has retractable undercarriage, split wing flaps to reduce landing speed, all-metal airframe construction except for control surfaces, and a three-bladed fixed-pitch propeller.

Openings in the machine for bomb dropping, bomb aiming and camera work are concealed. Pilot and gunner are housed under a non-breakable "glass tunnel" which can be opened quickly for actual combat.

Easy to Maneuver.

What impressed observers chiefly in trials of the new bomber was its extreme maneuverability, including all the twists and turns through which the single-seater fighter is normally put through in air warfare.

Every effort now is being made, it is said, to safeguard details of construction of the new machine, production of which is already under way.

How to provide a defense by interceptor planes against bombers of this new type is now a subject of speculation among aviation experts here. During an attack on London by bombers of this new type, it is pointed out, interceptor planes would be fortunate if, after climbing to engage in combat, they would have a margin of 60 seconds in which to shoot down the bomber in time to prevent bombs from being dropped.

Escaping As a Novelty,' Life Termer Is Caught

Cartersville, Ga., March 31 (AP).—Preston Saylor, life-term convict, who escaped just "for the novelty of it," was back in his cell today with a touch of fresh "atmosphere" for the book he says he is writing.

Recaptured yesterday after a few hours of freedom, Saylor told Sheriff G. W. Gaddis about the book. In his cell he had left a note saying the jail was "too small to hold an innocent man."

Saylor, once known to fight fans as "K. O. Duggan," was convicted of shooting his brother, Harry, to death several months ago.

3 Killed, Many Hurt As Police, Moros Clash

Manila, March 31 (AP).—Three Moros, including two women, were killed and many wounded today in a fight with eight Philippine constabularymen near Dansalan, in Lanao Province of Mindanao Island.

The Moro band was found building a fort and refused to surrender.

The soldiers used heavy guns and destroyed the rampart. The Moro leader, Sultan Sa Mitring, and others were captured.

Some reports said the Moros were sought as cattle rustlers. Others asserted they were building the fort to resist registering for compulsory military service under the Philippine Commonwealth government.

'Hot' Oil Shipments Ban Is Held Valid

New Orleans, March 31 (AP).—The validity of the Connally act, prohibiting interstate transportation of contraband or "hot" oil, was upheld by the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals today.

The constitutionality of the Federal act was sustained in a decision affirming the action of the District Court for the Western District of Louisiana in issuing an interlocutory injunction restraining E. F. Griswold, the Griswold Refining Co. and others from dealing in interstate commerce in products made contraband by the laws of Texas.

The Griswold company's attack on the Connally act was based primarily on the contentions that the act under which the injunction was issued was an invasion of State powers, that it was not a true regulation of interstate commerce, but an attempt by indirection to control the production and marketing of a natural product of a State.

Concentration Of Ownership Draws Attack

Competition Is Upheld in Catholic Conference Address Here.

"Wherever we're going from here," said the Rev. William Bolger, of Notre Dame University, speaking at a dinner of the Catholic Conference on Industrial Problems at the Willard last night. "And," he added, "whatever reforms we intsitute have to be reforms of the present order."

The institutions of private ownership and of competition he upheld in his speech. Private ownership he termed the only basis for religious, political and economic freedom. Without competition, he said, there is stagnation, because competition gives men a motive for which to work.

But, Father Bolger said, the economic system as it works in the United States today harbors certain evils which are at the root of our present business disorder.

He listed these evils as "ousting of the principle of justice to establish the principle of economic right" and the disharmony of interests that exists between employer and employe.

Ownership Concentration.

He said that these "evils" resulted in the concentration of ownership and of economic power and of an "anti-social" distribution of income. This in turn, he said, made for inadequate consumer purchasing power.

For "fundamental economic reform," the topic of his speech, Father Bolger, working from the premise that all men have the right to a decent livelihood, proposed that dividends should be limited by law.

A good salary, he said, should be given to the managers of industry and a just minimum return should be paid to the owners. Then, he said, all other profits should go to the workers in the form of higher wages and to the consumers in the form of reduced prices.

Father Bolger suggested that perhaps the only way to maintain private ownership was to multiply private ownership. He suggested that more people would be in favor of the institution if they could benefit from its results.

Decentralization Urged.

To accomplish this he advocated an automatic decentralizaton of ownership which would come from the workers investng their higher wage surplus in bonds.

The Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, S. J., editor of the magazine America, stated that a healthy economic system should be based upon the production of wealth. As it is now, he said, people are not interested in producing wealth but in making money for themselves, two totally different objectives.

Senator C. O'Mahoney from Wyoming attacked the present form of corporation laws. Corporation in industry, he said, should be Federal and not State.

Stating that we must have economic as well as political freedom, he quoted from the law of Wyoming that since every corporation derives its power from the government it is the right and duty of the government to regulate the corporation.

Speaking at the afternoon meeting, the Rev. R. A. McGowan, secretary-treasurer of the conference, stated that observance of moral codes was the first requirement for a healthy economic condition.

Basis Moral Laws.

In terpreting the 1931 Papal Encyclical, Father McGowan said that social justice could come only from employers and employes alike living up to basi moral laws.

The birth of a labor party based on the trade union movement was the solution for economic disorder offered by Francis J. Gorman, international vice president of the United Textile Workers of America.

He said that under the present political system no relief for labor could be expected from either the Democratic or Republican parties. By 1940, he predicted, the Labor Party will run a national ticket.

Maj. George L. Berry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, told of the stand of the Council for Industrial Progress for laws providviding a minimum wage scale.

At the morning session Dr. Elizabeth Morrissy, professor of economics at Notre Dame College in Baltimore, claimed that, as shown in the Encyclical, it is the duty of the Government to protect the common welfare after private enterprise has failed.

Ray Tucker, columnist, said he thought labor bills pending in Congress have no chance of immediate enactment because of fear of Supreme Court nullification. He expressed the opinion that Congress was waiting for the Court to decide the constitutionality of the Guffey law.

Guard Knifed in N. Y. Jailbreak Attempt

New York, March 31 (U.P.).—An attempted break in the Bronx County jail was frustrated tonight after two prisoners slugged and stabbed a guard in their efforts to escape.

The two prisoners—John Alex, 21, and Casta Demetrowitz, 22, in jail since March 10 on assault charges—had summoned McGarry and asked him to call the jail priest, saying they wanted to make confessions. He let them out of their cell and sent two trusties to get the priest.

Then Alex pushed a gun into McGarry's stomach, while Demetrowitz stabbed him in the head with a pocket knife. McGarry struggled with Alex to disarm him, shooting the prisoner twice. The other struck McGarry again, knocking him down. The two surrendered to another guard, summoned by McGarry.

'Hollywood Premiere' Planned For District Film on Saturday

'It Happened in Washington' With Local High School Cast to Be Shown at Palace; Produced by Loew's and Post; Senator in Picture.

An exciting "Hollywood premiere" is being planned today for the opening at Loew's Palace Saturday night of the All-District high school motion picture, "It Happened in Washington."

Leonard DeMenna, who directed this movie, will arrive in town today to assist the management in this gala event. All principals in the film will be driven to the theater in automobiles and will talk into microphones in the Palace lobby. Later they will all appear on the stage in a novel presentation.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst, who will be seen on the screen in the role of a high school principal, is expected to be on hand with many of his colleagues. Many members of the Senate have evidenced considerable interest in the local production, and are particularly anxious to see just how good an actor the Senator is.

According to latest reports from the "cutting rooms" the Senator's performance will be quite a surprise to his many Capital friends. Surprising, the reports state, are the performances of all of the principals, as well.

"It Happened in Washtington" is an amusing story of high school life and marks the first time a sound motion picture of its kind has been filmed here. It was produced by The Washington Post and the Loew Theaters in an effort to further the dramatic talents of Washington's high school students. The lead parts are played by 16-year-old Dorothy Ramspeck and James Pendergrast, 18, both of Western High School. There are 226 local students in the cast.

Air Corps Buys 200 Motors for Planes

The purchase of 200 new aircraft engines for use in Air Corps' attack planes, was announced yesterday at the War Department.

The Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Motor Co. received the contract for $1,877,030. Designed for air-cooling, the new engines are 14-cylinder "two-row radials."

"The use of the two-row radical feature allows a considerable reduction in head area over the single row radial engine," officers said yesterday. "This allows an increase in speed of the airplane in which the engine is installed," it was added.

Two Win Prizes In Holy Land Essay Contest

First Award Is Made to Patricia Stuart; John Powderly Second.

Judges last night selected the two winners in The Post's essay contest for children on the subject "What I Liked Best at the Holy Land Exhibit."

First prize of $5 was awarded to Patricia Stuart, 8, of 3133 Connecticut avenue, for her essay on the scene at the exhibit which depicts Jesus and Peter walking on the water. Patricia is a student at the Cathedral School.

The $3 award for the second best essay went to John Michael Powderly, 6, of 4132 Fifth street. John, who attends St. Gabriel's School, selected the tableau of moving figures which shows Christ riasing Lazarus from the dead, on which to base his entry in the contest.

The exhibit, which presents a scale model of Palestine with more than 2,000 miniature figures grouped in 124 different Biblical scenes, is on view at Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest. It has drawn the unqualified praise of all who hae seen it and, although the majority of those who have attended are residents of Washington, groups have come from as far away as Baltimore and Winchester, Va.

The exhibit is scheduled to close Sunday, April 5. Admissions are 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children. Hours aer, daily, from 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m. Sunday, from 1 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m. Proceeds to go Children's Hospital.

Pearl Buck Lecture To Benefit Charity

Pearl Buck, author of "The Good Earth," and other books dealing with China, will be introduced by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at a lecture in Constitution Hall next Wednesday.

Mrs. Buck, who grew up in China, where her parents were engaged in missionary work, has not announced her topic, but she is expected to speak informally of her experiences in that country, and hold a discussion afterward. The talk is for the benefit of the Training School in Vineland, N. J.

She is not a professional lecturer, and her two or three appearances have been for charity. Because of the suffering she has seen among handicapped children in China, she has a deep interest in work being done in the laboratory at the Vineland Training School.

This will be Mrs. Buck's first local appearance. Reservations for the event may be made through Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey's Bureau in Droop's, 1300 G street northwest.

Rep. S. A. Rudd Is Dead at 61; Burial Friday

With his wife and their four children at his bedside, Stephen A. Rudd, Representative in Congress from the Ninth New York District, died yesterday in his Brooklyn home. He was 61 years old and had been a member of the Seventy-second, Seventy-third and Seventy-fourth Congresses. Death resulted from a heart attack.

A lifelong resident of Brooklyn, where he was born December 11, 1874, Rudd studied law at Brooklyn Law School and St. Lawrence University. He was a member of the Board of Aldermen from 1922 until his election to the House in February, 1931, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative David J. O'Connell.

Re-elected to the Seventy-third and Seventy-fourth Congresses, he served on the Foreign Affairs Committee. He was an ardent champion of the postal service. George Washington Lindsay, who represented the Third New York District (Brooklyn) in the Sixty-eighth to Seventy-third Congresses, was Rudd's brother-in-law.

Early in his career Rudd was for a time an assistant District Attorney in Kings County.

At his side when he died were his wife, Martha, sister of former Representative Lindsay, and their four children—Mrs. Martha Wulfing, of Manhasset, Long Island; Stephen J. and Roy H., of Brooklyn, and Lindsay H., of Bloomfield, N. J.

According to word received from New York, funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Friday at his home, with burial in the Cemetery of the Evergreens, Brooklyn.

Violinist Closes Series at Howard

Gertrude Martin, young violinist, closed the Howard University school of music's concert series last night with a spirited program in Andrew Rankin Chapel.

She roamed the field of violin literature from Handel to pieces of the present, arranged by Fritz Kreisler. Her technique is not so flexible as it should be for so broad a program, and her playing was not always smooth.

But, if some of her notes fell hard, it was because the young artist is a driving violinist more interested in exploring the limits of her talent than in polishing tones.

From the Handel Sonata in E Major, Miss Martin proceeded to the startling "Symphonie Espagnole" by Lalo. Then there was a group of modern pieces, including the interesting Southland Sketch No. 4 by H. T. Burleigh, and the brittle "Danse Espagnole" by deFalla-Kreisler. She played finally Vieustems' "Ballade et Polonaise."

Chain Bridge Repai Bids Are Requested

Bids for materials needed to repair Chain Bridge were formally requested by the District Commissioners yesterday, thus setting at rest all questions about re-opening of the old bridge which took a battering from the recent flood.

Repairs, however, will not be completed for seven weeks, it is estimated, and even after completion it is possible trucks and motor buses may be barred from the bridge.

Cost of materials is estimated at $2,000. The destroyed parts must be made to order. It will take about five weeks before they are at hand and actual repair work will take another fortnight, it was said. Repairs are to be made to broken struts, rods, braces and end posts and minor repairs will be made to flooring.

Until repairs have been finished the bridge will be kept closed. Whether busses and trucks will be permitted to use it when it opened will depend on an inspection to be made at that time, it was said.

Chamberlin Plans Stratosphere Flight

Shreveport, La., March 31 (U.P.).—Col. Clarence Chamberlin announced tonight he is planning a nonstop stratosphere flight from Dallas, Tex., to Paris, a distance of 5,100 miles, in June, to demonstrate the feasibility of high altitude commercial flying across the Atlantic.

The transatlantic flier plans to use a regular Douglas Airliner with two 1,000-horsepower Wright motors for the trip. The plane will be equipped with superchargers, oxygen and other equipment for high altitudes and will carry a radio operator and a navigator, he said.

The schedule would call for refueling in the air over New York, but the plane would not land until it reached Paris. Chamberlin estimated the trip could be made in 20 hours on 2,000 gallons of gasoline.

Col. James Walker Dies in Canada at 90

Calgary, Alberta, March 31 (A.P.).—Col. James Walker, 90, who led the famous overland march of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police in 1874, died in a hospital today.

The Cree Indians named him "Chief Eagle That Protects."

Col. Walker, one of the last of the peace officers of the old school, was the soldier who was once described by the late Gen. Sir Arthur Currie as "the man who has the habit of breaking out and going to war every 50 years."

Walker's military services began in the second Fenian raid of 1870 and ended, at the age of 70, in the World War in France.

In 1874 he was made superintendent and sub-inspector of the mounted and led a troop overland from St. Paul to Fort Dufferin, now Emerson, Manitoba.

He concluded a treaty with the Cree Indians in 1876.

Housing Loan Insurance Bill Sent to the President

By the Associated Press.

Congress paved the way yesterday for speedy transmission to President Roosevelt of a bill to extend authorization of Federal insurance of housing modernization loans for another year.

The present law expires today. Advised that the bill would be sent to the Executive in Florida by airplane, Speaker Byrns signed the extension legislation the moment the House adopted a conference report on it by a 112 to 50 standing vote.

Leaders hoped to obtain the President's signature as speedily as possible, although officials said a few days' suspension of the activity would not work great hardship.

Hitler's Answer Asks Armistice In Rhine Crisis

Proposes 4 Months' Delay to Negotiate, Is Report; Envoy in London.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 31.—Adolf Hitler has called for a four-month "armistice" in the Rhineland crisis, during which peace pact negotiations would be carried on, a reliable source said tonight.

This, with a three-man international commission to supervise the Rhineland on both the German and French-Belgian sides of the frontier, was said to be the principal feature of the long counter-proposals Hitler sent the British government today.

This commission would be composed of one Englishman and one Italian, who would name the third member.

Would Require Guarantee.

Germany would agree, this informant said, during the "moral armistice" not to increase her Rhineland troops, but France and Belgium also would have to make the same guarantee.

Hitler's counterproposals were in reply to the program mapped by the four remaining members of the Locarno Treaty which he rejected last week.

Under the Locarno proposals, British and Italian soldiers would have policed the German side of the Rhineland, but no provision was made for such supervision on the French and Belgian sides.

Hitler's answer, a lengthy document, was taken to London by Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's special ambassador, who made the trip by plane.

Two airplanes carried von Ribbentrop and his staff and the largeness of the delegation indicated that the Germans are prepared for lengthy negotiations. He was instructed to deliver the reply to Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, who in turn will inform France, Belgium and Italy of its contents.

Official spokesmen intimated that Hitler had changed his proposals because of the bristling speech made Sunday by Pierre-Etienne Flandin, foreign minister to France. Der Fuehrer was reported to be deeply angered by Flandin's remarks, calling upon Germany to renounce aggression and define clearly her policy toward her former colonies and territories.

Hitler called the cabinet into session late today, presumably to lay before it his reply to the Locarno powers.

Will Deliver Reply Today.

London, March 31 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's fateful reply to the four-power Locarno security proposals was brought to London tonight as mounting suspicion and opposition in British circles were attached to forthcoming military staff talks with France and Belgium.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, Hitler's special ambassador, who arrived by plane from Berlin shortly after 8 o'clock, was scheduled to deliver the dictator's message tomorrow to Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary.

Because of the lateness of Von Ribbentrop's arrival a meeting between him and Eden was postponed until tomorrow morning.

Persistent reports that the British cabinet is badly split on the question of general staff talks, tentatively scheduled to begin next week, were circulated but were officially denied.

There were rumors of stiff opposition within the cabinet from members who feared the staff arrangements might provide an easy road to war.

Soviet Court Dooms 3 On Sabotage Charge

Moscow, March 31 (AP).—Three more persons were sentenced to death today by a military supreme court in an effort to break up a ring of "wreckers" endeavoring to disrupt service on the Trans-Siberian Railway.

Sentences were pronounced after the court had moved from Krasnoyarsk, where two alleged members of the ring had been sentenced to death March 25. Those condemned to die today were Mikhail Medzikhovsky, former manager of the regional traffic department of the railway; Konstantin Klotchkoff, former assistant manager of the department, and Vasili Marenhoff, a minor official. Five confederates received prison sentences.

The ring, declared to be in the pay of an unnamed foreign intelligence service, had been disabling locomotives and wrecking freight cars.

Throat Ailment Blamed In Milwaukee Epidemic

Milwaukee, March 31 (AP).—Health Commissioner John P. Koehler said today a contagious throat infection might be the basis of the epidemic of intestinal influenza here, now at its peak.

Two deaths have been attributed to the disease by physicians and the normal routine of many offices, stores and factories has been disrupted, with an officially estimated 120,000 persons afflicted.

Dr. Koehler described 95 per cent of the cases as "very mild."

Italy's Troops Seize Gondar, Key City in War

Capture of Town Close to British Territory Held Greatest Victory.

By the Associated Press.

With the Northern Italian Army, Gondar, Ethiopia, March 31.—Italy's "mechanical cavalry" captured this strategic Ethiopian city today and established itself close to a vital zone of British influence.

Gondar is only a few miles from the head of Lake Tana, source of the Blue Nile and the water supply of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Egypt.

A column of trucks manned by 5,000 picked men of the northern army and led by Lieut. Col. Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist Party, who came here from Rome expressly for this task, clattered into Gondar.

The sudden southward thrust cut all northern Ethiopia off from supplies which had been coming in over caravan trails from the Sudan. The capture of Gondar was regarded as the most important activity of the war from an international standpoint because of its proximity to British influence.

Sweep of 155 Miles.

The trucks had the advantage of operating over a flat, desert-like plain, baked hard by the sun. The colmn made a semicircular sweep of about 155 miles, starting at Asmara and circling through Eritrea to the border at Umaga, only a few miles from Kassala; the land entry port of the British Sudan.

Victories along the northern front in the last six weeks paved the way for today's drive, giving left flank protection to the column.

There were reports that Emperor Haile Selassie himself has taken the field to rally his forces in the north and Ethiopia may make a desperate stand in the vicinity of Quoram.

The deepest secrecy surrounded the start of the Gondar attack and correspondents were not allowed to mention the impending drive until Gondar had been taken.

For weeks the Italians went about commandeering trucks, taking over about 200 new machines in Masawa alone. Most of them were of American make.

Soldiers to make the expedition were selected with unusual care. All are white, acclimated to the tropics, enthusiastic and outstanding physical specimens.

Made Stirring Speech.

On the night before the column started its dangerous thrust, Starace, widely known for his oratory, made a stirring speech to the troops.

"This is the most risky, most difficult and most important venture of the campaign," he said. "Do not waste a shot. Fire cooly and coldly when necessary.

"We must save ammunition. We are carrying all we are going to have this trip.

"We must halt the Ethiopians in their tracks. This column must be like an electric live wire—death to the touch."

Referring to Britain's interest in the Lake Tana region, Starace said rich people get "tumultuous indigestion," and since "tumultuous minds" sometimes followed such indigestions this probably explained Britain's stand in the Italo-Ethiopian war.

"They thought they only had to mass a war fleet in the Mediterranean, and Premier Mussolini would take off his hat and bow in submission," he said. "Instead, he reared up like a thoroughbred horse and sent his soldiers into Africa."

(Rome dispatches said Starace would probably take formal possession of Gondar tomorrow. The city is the capital of Central Amhara.

(Following its occupation, military circles in Rome expressed belief the command in Africa would make another converging movement by driving southeast from Gondar towards Dessye in the hope of surrounding Emperor Haile Selassie and ending the war with a final great victory.)

Flandin Opposes Italian Sanctions

Paris, March 31 (AP).—The newspaper Petit Parisien tonight quoted Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin as saying that sanctions against Italy must be abolished "as quickly as possible."

The newspaper said Flandin told peasant electors across the table of a village inn in Avalon that Adolf Hitler is a "wolf in sheep's clothing" and that his peace offers were made for "needs of cause."

Flandin, answering farmers' questions, the newspaper continued, admitted it "is very unfair" to continue to apply penalties against Italy and let Germany "go scot free."

The newspaper said Flandin assured his listeners that both Italy and Great Britain were "certain" to come to France's aid in case of a German attack.

When the electors showed "some scepticism concerning England's attitude," Flandin was quoted as saying "a general staff accord will be concluded. Prime Minister Baldwin told me his country had never gone so far on the road to international engagements."

Mexican Slain, Four Wounded In Futile Coup

By the Associated Press.

Laredo, Tex., March 31.—Gunfire killed one Mexican police officer and wounded four others in Nuevo Laredo today when an embittered political faction, seeking to oust Mayor Martin Herrera, failed to seize the city hall.

Soldiers quickly suppressed the unsuccessful coup and armed patrols took charge of the city, just across the Rio Grande from here. Mayor Herrera declared military rule and moved to army headquarters.

Fifty men who undertook to overthrow the Herrera city government were described by the Laredo Times as adherents of Emilio Portes Gil, head of the Mexican agrarian movement. Authorities said Portes Gil, former President of Mexico, was a political opponent of Herrera.

The plotters moved on the City Hall at daybreak. Policemen in the building were unaware of the nature of the disturbance until called on to evacuate. Shooting broke out then and continued about five minutes until military forces arrived.

Policeman Leopoldo Esquivel fell dead. Sergt. Luis R. Mendez, Policeman Salone Garcia and State Policemen I. Mata and Alfonso Moreno were seriously wounded.

Gov. Enrique Canseco of the state of Tamaulipas named Candelario Guajardo, Nuevo Laredo banker, to head a civil "junto" to manage the city until a municipal election can be held.

There were no arrests. The anti-Herrera faction dispersed, when soldiers took the city hall.

Mongols Battle Japan's Army, Soviet Reports

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Moscow, Wednesday, April 1.—Reports from Ulan Bator, capital of Outer Mongolia, said early today that heavy fighting between Mongolian defenders and Japanese-Manchukuoan invaders was continuing.

The invading troops, whose actions caused a sharp protest to be delivered to the Japanese Ambassador at Moscow, have not yet been forced out of Mongolian territory, the reports declared.

The Russian Foreign Office protest, made by B. S. Stomaniakoff, vice commissar for foreign affairs, informed the Japanese flatly the situation "does not permit pacifically waiting for developments of events."

Stomaniakoff's declaration, made to Japanese Ambassador Tamekichi Ota, followed first reports of the invasion which began yesterday, when a force of Japanese-Manchukuoan troops pushed into Mongolia after capturing the border post of Ddykdolon.

Predict More Conflict.

Stomaniakoff declared it was necessary to take "energetic measures" to put an immediate end to the attacks by Japanese troops against Mongolia. He said "serious responsibility" would fall on the Japanese government in case the actions of its "dependent organization" might lead to the extension of conflicts in Mongolian territory.

The Japanese-Manchukuoan forces are supported by an artillery battery, tanks, armored cars and airplanes, the dispatches asserted.

The first attack was said to have been launched against the border post of Adykdolon. It was occupied and the invaders proceeded on against Tamsyk-Bulak, which is about 45 kilometers (about 30 miles) inside Mongolian territory, the Soviet accounts continued.

The attackers were said to have met strong resistance at Tamsyk-Bulak and to have been pushed back beyond Adykdolon. There they received reinforcements and resumed the offensive.

The Mongolian Peoples' Assembly only a few days ago approved a mutual assistance pact with the Soviet Union. Under its terms Russia would come to Mongolia's aid if it is the victim of aggression.

The reports did not disclose the total strength of the attacking forces, but declared they filled more than 20 motor trucks.

The attack was reported to be the second on Adykdolon in three days, the Japanese-Manchoukuoan forces having failed in an attempt to capture the post Sunday.

Adykdolon was described as 28 miles south of the Mongolian border with desert between the post and the boundary.

All Youth in Italy Must Learn to Fly

Rome, March 31 (U.P.).—The government today drafted a law providing compulsory aviation training for all youths physically and mentally qualified.

When the law becomes effective it will mark the first time in history that compulsory aviation training has been attempted.

Purpose of the law is not only to increase the nation's air corps personnel, but to build up the reserve corps with specialized technicians.

Meanwhile, a decree published in the official gazette called several thousand officers and soldiers to the colors "to complete the efficient power of Italy's aviation corps."

Americans See 1,200 Battle Peiping Police

Peiping, March 31 (AP).—Twelve hundred students battled police in an outbreak of anti-Japanese rioting today while American and other tourists from the visiting cruise ship Empress of Britain, looked on.

Several persons were injured and police arrested 41 before the demonstration was broken up.

It was stated that the presence of the tourists accounted for the failure of the police to exercise their discretionary power of firing on the mob.

The students were demonstrating in honor of the memory of a student rioter who died recently in prison. They carried an empty coffin and shouted slogans denouncing the Japanese policy toward China and the proposed increase of the Japanese garrison in North China.

A spark from an acetylene torch was believed to have caused the blaze by setting off a minor explosion. All employes escaped unhurt.

Six small dwellings near the factory also were burned before the flames spread to the lumber yard.

The Story Behind
Your Eyeglasses
Optical Glass

The manufacture of glass is an extremely exact art, for every step in its production has to be carefully controlled to insure the quality of the finished product.

In making glass, the elements are melted in a huge furnace. An average pot of glass contains 600 pounds of melt when taken from the furnace. 100 pounds are lost in pouring due to rapid cooling of the glass. Loss in subsequent inspections and cuttings leave only 248 pounds to be sent to the molding furnaces; molding defects cause a further loss of 11%.

The glass is then ground into lenses. After the grinding only 147 pounds of the semi-finished product remain. Additional losses follow further grinding. Of these lenses, approximately 20% are rejected for defects, so that only 80 pounds of the original 600 pounds are put into envelopes and shipped to retail opticians. Here, in drilling, mounting in frames and similar operations, there is further shrinkage until only 50 pounds, or 8% of the original material, remain.

Despite this tremendous loss in material and the cost of skilled labor and intricate machinery, the cost of lenses is low enough for almost everyone to be able to enjoy the benefits of glasses.

Woodward & Lothrop maintains a thoroughly modern Optical Department, where your eye physician's prescription can be accurately filled. If you prefer, an optometrist will examine your eyes, for which we charge a moderate fee.

Warden Delays Hauptmann's Electrocution for 2 Days as Wendel Angles Develop

Zero-Hour Stay Is Granted Upon Request of Mercer Jury

Kimberling Announces New Execution Date as Tomorrow or Friday; Convicted Lindbergh Baby Slayer Stunned by Temporary Escape.

ities Saturday on a charge of kidnaping and murdering the Lindbergh baby.

Parker arrested Wendel, who was disbarred as an attorney for perjury, in New York last February. He said Wendel had confessed that he kidnaped the Lindbergh baby, kept the child in his Trenton home and disposed of the body after the baby had been killed in a fall out of bed.

Attorney General Wilentz, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf and other officials scoffed at the Wendel "confession," terming it ridiculous.

Nevertheless, the grand jury decided to look into it and as a result the Lindbergh kidnaping case, already too fantastic to believe, took another fantastic turn.

Learning of the grand jury's action, Col. Kimberling sent word early in the day to Prosecutor Marshall, asking that he be notified if the grand jury uncovered anything of sufficient importance to delay the execution.

The answer, as has been said, came at 8 o'clock in the form of a telephone call from Foreman Freeman of the grand jury.

Reported Hoffman's Friend.

Freeman, a twice-defeated candidate for the State Assembly, is said to be a close friend of Gov. Hoffman, who has consistently championed Hauptmann, saying he did not get a fair trial at Flemington.

Col. Kimberling said that, so far as he knew, Gov. Hoffman knew nothing about the postponement.

"I am taking the responsibility for this myself," he said.

If Gov. Hoffman did not know about it then, he soon learned. And his informant was Lieut. Robert W. Hicks, erstwhile employe in the District highway department, who has been working as Gov. Hoffman's private criminologist in the Lindbergh case.

Hicks, who abandoned the Corinna Loring murder inquiry in Mount Rainier, Md., to come here, was to have been a witness to Hauptmann's execution tonight.

"If Hauptmann said anything," Hicks told The Post correspodent, "I would have taken it down to see if it fitted into the investigation."

Hicks said he also called Mrs. Edward B. McLean at Friendship this afternoon.

"I told her," he chuckled, "that Gassy (Gaston B.) Means would swear he was the man that put the salt in the ocean if it got him a few days out of jail."

Means, who swindled Mrs. McLean out of more than $100,000 by promising to find the Lindbergh baby, recently has been trying to confess to the kidnaping himself, but his reputation as a liar has rendered his attempts futile.

When Col. Kimberling announced that Hauptmann's execution had been postponed, there was a rush for the exits by the assembled reporters.

They had reported at the prison at 7:15 o'clock, in accordance with instructions. Each bore an "invitation" to be present "as a witness at the execution by electricity of Bruno Richard Hauptmann."

All Others Are Barred.

Only those with such invitations were allowed on the steps leading up to the heavily barred door of the prison.

You walked through a lane of Trenton policemen and gayly clad State troopers, while the rays of a powerful set of kleig lights beat down on you.

At the top of the steps, two prison guards asked you to hold your hands aloft. Then one of them patted your torso, while the other swept his hands down your pants legs to your shoes.

"What's that?" you heard them say to a fellow in front. "A pint. That's all right; I thought it was a camera."

When Ruth Snyder, paramour of the corset salesman, Judd Gray, went to the chair several years ago, a photographer, posing as a reporter, got in with a tiny camera strapped to his leg. He came away with a picture that startled the world.

Col. Kimberling was determined that nothing like that should happen tonight.

Once inside the prison, you submitted to a second search. This one was more thorough. They looked on the inside of your hat.

After that you got a card that admitted you to the death house.

Attorney Fisher, who had been talking about a "break" all day, got one, and so, of course, did his client.

The crowd is moving away now, and with it the big Trenton fire engine that had been standing all day outside the prison. The firemen were there to turn the hose on the crowd if it got unruly.

Hauptmann was in an emotional whirl today, prior to his unexpected stay, weeping one minute and promising he would "die like a man" the next.

Late this afternoon, the Rev. D. S. Werner, of the Seventh Day Adventist Church of the Bronx, one of his spiritual advisers, came out of Hauptmann's death cell and said:

"His teeth were chattering."

The man convicted of murdering the Lindbergh baby spurned his breakfast and bitterly announced he would forego his dinner.

"I'd like," he said in his guttural German, "to have the last meal sent to Mr. Condon."

Hauptmann was referring to Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, Bronx educator, who testified that he gave the former German machine-gunner the $50,000 ransom money.

Charles Zied, 37, another inmate of the death house, who was to precede Hauptmann to the electric chair, actually felt sorry for him.

After polishing off a breakfast, the Philadelphia murderer said:

"I know I'm going to burn. Hauptmann's the guy that's got to worry. He thinks he has a chance of getting off. I don't have to worry."

The words were barely out of the condemned man's mouth when announcement was made that Gov. Hoffman had granted Zied a 30-day reprieve.

Zied's appeal from his murder conviction in April, 1935, was denied only recently by the Court of Errors and Appeals, and thus the Governor's power of reprieve in this case was not open to question.

It was learned the Governor's action was based on documents produced by Rabbi Abraham Holzberg, the prisoner's spiritual adviser, which Hoffman believed warranted investigation.

But worry was a mild word for Hauptmann's condition. He was in a panic, so distraught that he slept not a wink the whole night through.

He spent the time writing letters, talking to the guards, pacing his cell and gripping the bars, babbling "Oh my God, oh, my God."

In the morning Hauptmann experienced an interruption that must have given his nerves a terrible jangling. The prison barber came in to shave the top of his head and clear the way for the electric current.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper of the State Prison, visited Hauptmann at 9:30 a. m. today. He said the prisoner looked pale and hollow-eyed.

"I was there about a half-hour," Col. Kimberling said. "He had his head down and was weeping practically all the time. It took him two or three minutes before he could talk.

"I have a statement here from the guards who spent the night with him. Fred Mayer was one and Charles D. Douglas the other."

"He says he has told the truth from start to finish.

"He spent the night writing letters. He wrote one to his mother in Germany. He spent some time talking to us about his mother.

"He says there is no use trying to make changes in his statement. He says any change he might make would only be a lie.

"He said the State would never solve the case by sending him to the chair, as he is innocent.

"He wanted to know if it was possible for him to make a radio appeal to the public, asking anybody who knows anything about the case to come forward and confess.

"He said he wants his little son, "2-year-old Mannfried to grow up and know his father is innocent."

Col. Kimberling quoted Hauptmann as saying that he was convicted for having money in his possession "without knowing what kind of money it was."

Hauptmann, the warden said, cried out:

"I have saved three lives in my life, but now they are going to take mine on built-up evidence.

"But I am not afraid to die. I will go to the chair better than some of those who testified against me."

And then, Col. Kimberling said, Hauptmann willed what was to have been his last meal to Dr. Condon.

This meal, which was ordered by the murderer Zied, was:

Celery and olives, roast chicken, French fried potatoes, butter (2 pieces), cake and cherries, coffee and milk and a cigar.

Undergoes Crying Spell.

The Rev. John Matthiesen, Lutheran clergyman, who was to walk to the chair with Hauptmann, called on him in the morning after Col. Kimberling had reported that he had been through a crying spell.

Emerging from the prison, Matthiesen said:

"He has recovered from that breakdown now. He gave me a message for Mrs. Hauptmann."

But the later experience of his other spiritual adviser, Werner, showed what an emotional tempest Hauptmann was in. It was he who reported that Hauptmann's teeth were chattering.

Today in Trenton was such a day as Washington enjoyed Sunday—a balmy, lazy day, with the sun caressing the young grass, the budding plants and those who cared to bask in it.

But Hauptmann knew nothing about this.

The only light that could penetrate his cell was from a lofty transom, and there were shadows over even this. One prisoner had escaped through that transom, and a guard was there to see that the "world's most famous prisoner" did not attempt to do likewise.

There were guards on the parapets, rifles under their arms. A cordon of Trenton police, reinforced by picturesque State troopers, was thrown about the prison as early as dawn.

Rope barriers were erected at the streets a block away from the prison, and nobody could pass without a white card bearing the seal of New Jersey and signed by Col. Kimberling.

The crowd was pretty much like any crowd that gathered in America to follow Hauptmann's progress toward the electric chair.

"Sure Hauptmann done it," said a man in overalls, who apparently had quit work for the occasion.

As word spread that Hauptmann had broken down and wept, the inevitable cry arose:

"Hah. So he couldn't take it."

Not all those covering the event were on the scene.

Four London newspapers called on the transatlantic telephone. The reporters for three were satisfied with what Col. Kimberling could tell them, but not so the fourth.

Mother Wires Faith In Son's Innocence

By the Associated Press.

Kamenz, Germany, March 31.—The sobbing 70-year-old mother of Bruno Richard Hauptmann sent him a final message tonight expressing confidence in "the complete innocence" of her "most beloved son."

The weeping, hard-working woman scribbled the following message, which she asked be cabled to her son in the death house at Trenton:

"My dear Richard—I am standing by you right to the last second, convinced of your complete innocence and in the belief God will bring the truth to light. You have always been my best, truest, dearest and most beloved son.

"YOUR LOVING MOTHER."

Frau Hauptmann then saw her attorney, but declined to say why.

Pointing to a Bible—the only book on the table in her spotless living room—she said simply:

"It is in this book where I get my comfort. I just can't give up hopes that I will embrace my poor boy again."

Trenton Crowd Cheers at Word Of Death Delay

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 31.—The legend that "anything can happen and probably will" in the Lindbergh crime came true again tonight at the very minute Bruno Richard Hauptmann was scheduled to walk to his death in the electric chair.

A score of men gathered around a littered table in the handsome new Mercer County courthouse thrust their way into the publicity of the Lindbergh crime by putting through a telephone call to the warden of the State prison and, while witnesses waited to be led into the death chamber, asked him to put off again the death of the convicted German.

Head Keeper Mark O. Kimberling could do nothing but send word out to a hundred newspaper reporters standing in the dazzling purple flood of lights from movie camera apparatus that it would be at least 48 hours before the electrocution.

Along the street corners where every available city and State policeman fought to hold back crowds of curious, the word flashed.

There was a roar. For an instant it was uncertain whether it was a roar of approval of condemnation.

Then, dramatically, a cheer went up from a red-faced man who was being held in line only by a burly policeman.

There was another cheer and for a few seconds the shouting was definitely on the "hurrah" side.

Shouts re-echoed from convicts' cells.

The blow-up of the scheduled execution was announced first to newspaper men inside the prison—those who had gone in the witness the execution.

They dashed some 200 yards down the street through a blaze of colored floodlights to the telegraph wire heads, where the shouts of "flash" started a bedlum.

Meanwhile, C. Lloyd Fisher, defense counsel, and both of Hauptmann's spiritual advisers went back to the deathhouse to break the news to Hauptmann.

"He was very, very happy," the ministers said when they came out, leaving Fisher in the deathhouse with Hauptmann for a few more words.

The ghostly drama of the night continued even after delay in the execution. One of its sharpest spots centered around Robert Elliott, the executioner who waited in vain in the death chamber for two men who had been doomed to die.

Hauptmann's 'Death Letter'

have troubled Your Excellence in any way. The same I never would have ask the Court of Errors and Appeals, also the Court of Pardons to take my cause in consideration. I know in my one sense of justice that a person guilty of such a crime, can't deserve any consideration. But I was fighting with clear conscience I did have a right to do so before God and the world.

"May I ask fair thinking people—would I have been convicted of this crime without the circumstantial evidence, and them false witnesses—no! Never and never. Why did people say on the witness stand they saw me near Hopewell. The motive can be only money and to play an important part in the Lindbergh case. Up to the present day I have no idea where the Lindbergh house in Hopewell is located.

"Why did, and does Dr. Condon (Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon) hide so many things he knows? It is not for the course of justice that this man says everything. Why did Dr. Condon say in my cell he cannot testify against me? My God, Dr. Condon any your witnesses, did you ever realize what you did? In a short time I will stand before a higher judge and you will live a little longer, but you and you never can leave this world with a happier inner feeling as I do.

"Gentlemen from the prosecution where are all the direct evidence? Fingerprints, footprints, you all know there are some in existence. Oh yes! For, what did the police take right by my arrest all my shoes? Why all them special fingerprints from part of the hand from where the usual never take?

"Why was it said to the jury I had $49,984 dollars of Lindbergh's money? You know it was not true, or half hour after my conviction your self send an officer to me that I should say where are the other $30,000 dollars.

Admits Spending Money.

"Why did you say to the jury that people saw gold bills in our house but never brought this people on the witness stand? For what did you through (throw) all this same in the eyes of the jury, them two persons whom are judging offer my life?

"Who is responsible for building up all the circumstantial evidence? Is there really a man who can believe that I, a carpenter, should have built such a ladder?

"I stated that I found the money middle of August, 1934, and that I past the money without knowing it was Lindberghs money.

"Is there any person who can say that I past one single bill before that date?

"Why did my chief lawyer send important witnesses home without even bringing them on the stand. My God, my God, I hardly can't believe on all that what happened by my trial. But it was necessary to convict me and so close the books on the case.

"Mr. Wilentz, with my dying breath, I swear by God, that you convicted an innocent man. Once you will stand before the same Judge to whom I go in a few hours. You know you have done wrong on me, you will not only take my life but also all the happiness of my family. God will be judge between me and you.

"I beg you, Attorney General, believe at least a dying man. Please investigate because this case is not solvet, it only adds another dead to the Lindbergh case.

"Your Excellence, I see this as my last duty, before this State takes my life, to thank you for what you have done for me. I write this with tears in my eyes. If ever prayer will reach you, they will come from me, from my dear wife and my little boy.

"In all your effort to save my life and see that justice is done, I assure Your Excellence, that your effort was spent to an innocent man.

"I thank You Excellence, from the bottom of my heart.

"And may God bless you.

"Respectfully,

"Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

"P. S. Why was not any consideration given to my four witnesses whom saw me in the same hour between 8 and 9 in the bakery in New York? On the first of March, 1932? There were no friends of mine. There are all strangers to me. Even one of them came in very bad condition from the sick bed. No witness from the State came up at all to cover this particular period, to place me in New Jersey."

Conflict between Japan and Russia would be a "war of despair," Gen. Victor Yakhontoff, former Czarist military attache at Tokyo, told a group of Friends of the Soviet Union last night.

"Japan's participation in a major war with the U. S. S. R. is almost impossible," he said, "but should Japan attack Russia it will be only in despair."

Partial Retreat From Moscow.

Spokesmen for the Senate lobby investigating committee explain that, since its field work is about done, no more telegrams will be subjected to unreasonable search and seizure. It may be hoped that this decision was also prompted by the widespread and significant public outcry against the OGPU methods followed by Senator Black's investigators. In any event, the news is good news.

Members of the Lobby Committee, for whom Senator Minton has recently assumed the rôle of defender, would like to make it appear that criticism of its spying into private telegrams has come only from sources which fear exposure. That is an insult to thousands of citizens who resent this intolerable encroachment upon fundamental liberties as a matter of vital principle. The fact that the committee has forsaken its fishing expedition suggests that the force of the important criticism has gone home to a majority of its members.

The questions that now arise are: What use will the committee make of the information it has obtained by snooping through private telegraphic files? What will be the policy of search and seizure in future lobby probes? Already the committee has violated the rules of ethics and fair play, if not the law, by turning over to an individual a telegram seized in the course of its "investigation." Will other confidential messages, political and otherwise, be made available to individuals who may have a personal interest in them?

Fortunately, the issue has been carried into the courts, with a ringing decision in one case by Chief Justice Wheat of the District Supreme Court. But the question as to how far a legislative committee may go in the investigation of private papers having no relation to the subject of its inquiry ought to be judicially determined by our highest judicial body. The Fourth Amendment was adopted to protect the public against just such invasions of private affairs without reasonable cause. Its concrete interpretation and enforcement by the courts would be welcomed by a majority in Congress, as well as by the public.

Effective Parole Work.

The current report of the Parole Board confirms belief that in previous years the existing parole system was not given a fair trial. Even now the board is so handicapped that it can not be expected to function with 100 per cent efficiency. Yet the work it has done under very trying circumstances merits high commendation.

One of the serious difficulties by which the board is confronted is the incarceration of habitual criminals at Lorton Reformatory, originally designed to rehabilitate youthful offenders. Some young men are doubtless schooled in crime during their stay at Lorton. Restoration of prisoners to society as law-abiding citizens is extremely difficult in these circumstances, especially when the board's work is hampered by the inadequacy of its staff. It has no psychiatrist to study the men while they are incarcerated, and the allowance for officers to supervise the activities of prisoners after they are paroled is inadequate.

Nevertheless, the board's report shows that approximately 90 per cent of the prisoners paroled in the fiscal year 1935 "made good." This creditable showing is probably due to the refusal of the board to parole hardened criminals and to the closer supervision of prisoners released under its jurisdiction last year. The record suggests that the parole problem might be completely solved with the addition of a few thousand dollars to the board's appropriation.

Savings to the District through the parole of 300 men last year amounted to $75,000. Moreover, these men earned $54,885 to support their families, many of whom would otherwise have been on relief. In spite of that saving, the board is compelled to operate on a budget of $8,900 annually.

Members of the board are willing to continue functioning without pay. But since they can devote only part of their time to this public service, they request, with excellent logic, funds to maintain an adequate and efficient staff. "Our experience indicates to us," write Chairman LaRoe, "that we could operate efficiently with a total budget of approximately $18,000." In view of the important work the board is doing and the possibility of further savings as the system operates more effectively, that is a very modest request.

Name The Big Beneficiaries.

Senator Vandenberg's demand for information on large benefit payments gives Secretary Wallace no option other than compliance. The Senator cites reports that $705,488 of the fund distributed as agricultural subsidies went to a New York bank; that $961,084 was collected from the AAA by a Puerto Rican sugar company. Whether or not these precise figures are correct, it is a fact that enormous sums have been paid out to large corporations and wealthy individuals in the name of farm relief, and this fact reveals a basic weakness in both the old and new AAA programs.

When Congress agreed to the expenditure of approximately $500,000,000 per year for the benefit of farmers, it claimed to be thinking of families whose sole occupation is cultivation of the soil. Much sympathy was aroused for the man who plants a few acres of cotton in the South: for the hardy wheat grower on the Kansas prairies, and the thrifty corn-hog producers on thousands of relatively small farms in the Middle West. In reality, of course, benefits have extended far beyond these simple farm households. They have gone to corporations operating vast tracts of land on mass production lines, to banks and insurance companies that have obtained farms through the foreclosure of mortgages, to brokers, real estate companies and absentee landlords.

Congress has been surprisingly indifferent as to the recipients of the millions appropriated to aid the farmer. Even when the adjustment act was invalidated, and a new subsidy plan was adopted, there was no concerted effort to scrutinize the payments already made. Senator Vandenberg's campaign to make this information available to the public is unfortunately belated, but it is nevertheless an essential step toward the creation of intelligent public opinion on the subject.

Further resistance to this eminently fair request for information is likely to react against the AAA far more seriously than any candid presentation of the facts. As Senator Vandenberg has pointed out, "no individual who draws subsidies from the public treasury—no matter how inherently worthy his cause or classification—is entitled to immunity from public scrutiny on this score." Compilation of the list of AAA beneficiaries in the $10,000 class would be a boondoggling project really worth undertaking. Unless Secretary Wallace can find some really valid reason for secrecy, therefore, his reluctance to release this information will inevitably create suspicion that he is afraid to let the facts be known.

Such an attitude would be the more deplorable because of the close relationship of enormous benefit payments to the policy now being put into operation. Farmers whose interests are bound up with the productivity of their land do not need subsidies from Washington to encourage soil conservation. They will diversify their crops as a matter of sound farm management. Thus corporations and city farmers who are interested largely in immediate profits become the chief beneficiaries of such schemes as the AAA.

Few facts are of more importance in the development of a constructive agricultural policy than the data now sought by Senator Vandenberg.

Andersen's Fairy Tales.

Once upon a time, a very young shoemaker named Andersen and his very young wife lived in Odense, Denmark. On April 2, 1805, a child was born to them whom they called Hans Christian. Despite that little boy's later propensity for giving all his stories a happy ending, fate did not write one for his parents. The shoemaker died, his widow was poor and ignorant, and her small son at first showed little of the aptitude which was later to mark him as one of the greatest fairy tale writers.

Paradoxically, Hans Christian Andersen's rise from an unschooled, sullen peasant boy to world-wide fame would not have delighted the heart of Horatio Alger. Alger heroes only reached the top by dint of ambition and ingenuity. Andersen's opportunities were handed to him on silver platters by various patrons until he became the protege of King Frederick VI. That royal gesture was more in keeping with the genii-like miracles of the Dane's fairy tales than with the more robust technique of our own inspirational literature.

Andersen's fairy tales were at the height of their vogue when the children's hour was exactly that, and not just another theatrical hit on Broadway. Gold and silver for his sultans and shepherdesses literally grew on trees and only ogres talked of inflation. At one time he wrote: "There was once a poor Prince, who had a kingdom which was quite small, but still it was large enough so that he could marry upon it." As a statistical abstract this leaves much to be desired. We know neither the steel production of the kingdom nor the annual expenditure on work relief.

Happily, Andersen's tin soldiers were conceived before the age of gas masks and his princesses were charming creatures unspoiled by news reels and rumors of their imminent alliance with King Edward VIII. This gives them a magical quality that is undimmed by time, and that is one of the reasons why the world will tomorrow observe the birthday of their originator.

Fall Of A Triumvirate.

The first great triumvirate, of course, was composed of Caesar, Pompey and Crassus. But Crassus was killed at Carrhae, and Pompey, forgetting his earlier disdain for the oligarchs, became champion of the senate, leaving Caesar to carry on alone with the dream of ruling the Roman Empire. In the end he was stabbed in the senate house.

As President Roosevelt has noted: History repeats. Now a second great triumvirate, not Tiberian, but Californian, is dissolving like liquid sunshine. As its predecessor, the O. A. R. P. triumvirs designed to overthrow an oligarchy but became oligarchical. First to go was Clements. As with Crassus, his interests were those of the capitalists; but, more happily than Crassus, he merely returns to his real estate office in Long Beach, presumably never again to discuss affluent pensions or 2 per cent transaction taxes.

And now McGroarty is slipping. He was the Pompey of the trio, the legislator, the hero who had gone afield—to Washington, that is, as Representative of the Twelfth District in California. Originally he sponsored the legislation that would have put the old-age pension plan into effect. But now he stands up only to flay the Caesar of the group, none less than Dr. Townsend. And his language leaves no doubt that the end of the scheme is at hand.

"I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him," said Mark Antony, according to the Bard. Again history repeats, though with a slight variation. Today Pompey—Mr. McGroarty—has those lines. Said he in the House as the ghost of the Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., began its long flight to the valhalla of all wishful thought: "Dr. Townsend . . . is talking like a fool—just like a fool." Mark Antony was more poetic in his language. But the meaning was not so different.

Off His Trapeze.

Some few years ago society took an Armenian named Dikran Kouyoumdjian, better known as Michael Arlen, to its heart. He wrote a book about a people suffering from the ill effects of too much caviar and cake and it was discussed avidly over smart dinner tables laden with too much caviar and cake. His heroine was decidedly informal, to say the least, and regarded life and love as something invented merely, like her green hat, "pour le sport."

The next Armenian author who rode to fame did so on the rings of a flying trapeze and not in a Hispano-Suiza. From such a vantage point, he wrote of heroes obsessed with the business of living and the reasons therefor; of young men who starved and who mused thereon. And society, ever fickle, gladly abandoned the sugary fiction of Arlen for the bitter but healing bracer of William Saroyan. It was harder to swallow but it seemed less liable to cause mental indigestion.

Alas for those readers who had hoped to subsist on this simple formula. For no sooner does a novelist hit upon an agreeable tonic than he must switch to another prescription. The one which catches Saroyan's eye at present is labeled by himself a "humble and pious language." But like Wolfe and Dreiser, he really does nothing more than sniff at the stopper. His second book of short stories, just out, proves conclusively that he intends keeping simplicity as an objective rather than making it an object. And that, Mr. Saroyan, is bad medicine for both author and reader.

Astronomers in Pasadena are greatly excited over the appearance of an exploding star. That shouldn't be news to anyone living on the outskirts of Hollywood.

Crises are developing so fast these days that the average man stays about a week behind with his worrying.

Assassination Cannot Rule.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

There are two ways of taking the outbreak of assassination in Japan. One is to be shocked and alarmed, to denounce the Japanese as barbarians and to apprehend all manner of evil to Japan and the world from the coup of young militarists. The other is to be awakened to an effort to discern the mental causes of such crime and what is required to hold it in check.

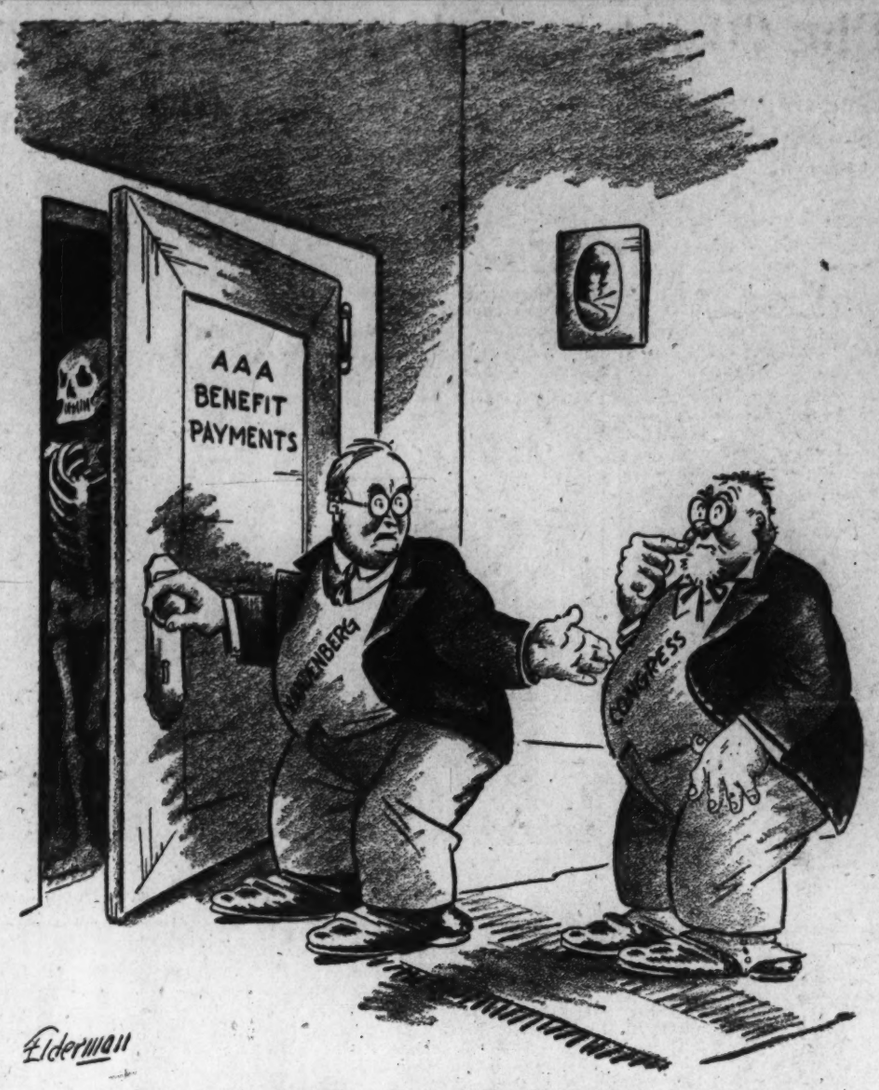
Undoubtedly some aspects of these assassinations are peculiar to Japan. The pathological patriotism that produced them is explained in a following editorial. But violence and militarism are not distinctively Japanese. No one who has read the news of the rest of the world in recent months can believe that. Not when murder is an accepted instrument of government in so many Western countries and military might an accepted basis for national policy throughout the world. Let the nation that is wholly without similar manifestations of hate and unreason cast the first stone.

Sanctions And Gondolas.

From the London Times.

Sanctions have given new life to the gondolas. It is announced from Venice that the local prefects and podestas have banned the motor-launches and taken out from the yards of the commune and prefecture the time-honored two-oared gondolas with their traditional and graceful black felza.

The gondolas of the old Venetian aristocracy numbered 300 at the fall of the republic, and the ordinary ones about 3,000. Latterly, the patrician gondolas had been reduced to six and the plebeian to not more than 500, a melancholy, unjust, and unjustified decadence. The motor-launch may be the Grand Canal, but the gondola is Venice; the traffic, the social intercourse, the very soul of Venice are inconceivable and unintelligible without it.



Are You Scared To Look?

Letters To The Editor.

Anonymous But Amusing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read one of your morning editorials, "Communism in Italy." May I say first that we consider (or have considered) The Post the best Washington paper in view of political understanding, impartiality, and political insight; so it is with considerable surprise that we read this particular editorial this morning.

The most startling aspect of it is the belief of the writer that Mussolini is not effecting this "socialistic" re-organization as greater preparation for war.

Another thing: can it be possible that the writer thinks Mussolini (any more than Hitler) stays in power without the aid of the big industrialists whom he is "socializing." Is he so naive as to think Mussolini could defy the money that backs him; in other words, does he believe all he reads in the papers?

His most damning point in the light of revealing his utter political confusion is his condemnation of the Senate committee's exposing (by publishing telegrams, etc.) such capitalists as Hearst, et al. (This is especially striking coming from a newspaperman.) We can suppose he will condemn the publication of orders from Cudahy, Weirton Steel, etc., for firearms to be used against workers. This point brands the writer quite purely and simply as a true Fascist. When the investigation of corruption becomes fascism, then the world is certainly mad.

It would be possible to take up the editorial point by point but that would effect no great gain since the political philosophy of the writer, as seen through this editorial, is confused and black. It is essentially fascistic and he is abysmally uninformed on the principles of the various forms of governments; e. g. fascism and communism, which he ignorantly clumps together.

Government Employes On Section 213

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The more a reasonable person ponders over the Government economy measure enacted during the Hoover Administration, limiting Government positions to only one in a family, the more enraged one becomes. Washington is full of young people in the Government service, the majority averaging $1,440 to $1,620 per year. How is one to marry on $1,440 per year, and live in Washington, having the highest cost of living in the country? The majority have to change their minds and remain single with the hopes of a possible promotion later on, to enable them to marry and live decently. Others take the gamble of marrying secretly without the Government's knowledge, and retain their positions.

The bill limiting the earnings of two married people in the Government to $4,000 annually should be passed at this session, or else the Government might as well say that if you are earning $1,620 or less per year you cannot marry.

M. B. SHABER.
Washington, March 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I happen to know about a dozen couples who work for the Government. Each makes only a small salary, ranging from $1,200 to $1,620. These people are trying to buy small homes, provide for their old age, and their children's education. Several of them are keeping their relatives off the relief rolls. I can assure your recent correspondent who signs himself "Citizen" that there is neither waste nor luxury in the lives of these people. I also know two young couples who plan to be married soon. Each salary is small and they have aged parents totally dependent upon them for support. It is absolutely necessary that these four young people work, for the combined salaries of two will do no more than furnish a plain, decent living for themselves and their parents. I am sure such situations are duplicated many times throughout the Government service.

May I offer as a suggestion that in cases where husband and wife each have a salary of $1,620 or under and have dependents, Section 213 be not operative? I wish that some of your correspondents who have written so vehemently against the repeal of Section 213 would write again and state what they think should be done in the case of the low salaried married employes. This is a very real problem and no amount of just talking about it is going to help.

ANOTHER GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEE.
Washinton, March 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the Government wishes to confine its positions to only one in a family, that is a matter for Congress to settle, but to set up a ban against marriages that is administered in no two departments alike, but is simply a hit and miss proposition, why that does not seem to be a just and equitable remedy. The amount of salary, length of service, efficiency and several other things should enter into a matter of this sort and such a provision should apply to all and not simply to a few.

I can make nothing out of Mr. John Public's letter of March 27 except that he is in favor of dismissing all married women and hiring single people in their places, and if that is what he means, then his letter needs no further comment.

W. E. D.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of Section 213 of the economy act, let it be said that this act did not only work hardship on women, but men as well. It is being viewed by many in a selfish, biased manner. Because a great many people are suffering hardship, they want to drag everyone else down to suffer with them. It is as ridiculous as if the flood sufferers wanted all those who were spared the privation and terror they went through to suffer with them.

I am a man 50 years of age; I went in the service when any man or woman in our country who wanted a job, could have one. I gave up my Government job temporarily to serve during the war; and was reinstated after the war. Almost three years ago I lost a job that I had faithfully and conscientiously worked at for many year; my salary was small—I have lost my home—I have nothing left. My wife doesn't make enough to keep both of us.

Yet Congressmen and Senators, pulling down $10,000 a year, sit in judgment on the little fellow with families and dependents who might be getting $2,400 a year combined salaries. Does a Congressman or Senator need more food, more clothes, or more roof to cover him than any other man; does he have less self respect; or do his children need more opportunity of education or decent living? I think not.

Much has been heard lately of the Government's interference in private business for the "betterment" of working conditions; also along the line of social and financial security. Yet here it's setting up a precedent for private concerns to "fire" faithful employes between the years of 45 and 50; of tearing down the "security" that Civil Service employes were promised for faithful service; and of damning the hopes of hundreds of its employes for no logical reason.

Section 213 of the economy act, until repealed, will make uncertain every Government job, whether held for 5 years or 25; it will tear down any hope of "security" any employe may have; it is as illogical as firing people who have other means of support; or for political or religious affiliations. Not only that, but it is causing immorality of the rankest sort—and immorality that cannot be looked down upon in any sense.

"Hush, Little Deficit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The gullible American shareholder has been asked to believe that when a staggering tax on corporate surplus is imposed he will become a blessed beneficiary.

Why does this Administration indulge in so much subterfuge in dealing with the people? Why not resort to old-fashioned truth for a change, instead of forever playing politics?

Our politicians have again dipped a sponge into verbal soothing sirup and applied it to the bewildered brains of credulous stockholders. They are told that "more dividends" will be distributed when the tax becomes law.

It so happens that the enlightened individual is generally aware that when the Government helps itself to any corporate surplus, it is actually confiscating what belongs to the stockholder. He is actual and absolute owner of his company.

After Uncle Sam helps himself to this surplus by cutting out a gigantic slice, he proposes to soak poor "Johnny Shareholder" again by taxing dividends disbursed. Under present income tax law, dividens are exempt.

Some dark day sleepy stockholders may awaken to the fact that no tax ever devised can lighten the taxpayers' load. To decide otherwise is an insult to the intelligence. Who was it that said:

Hush, little deficit, don't you cry,
You'll be a crisis, by and by.

The Juvenile Court Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a native of Washington who is very definitely interested in the welfare of all children, I have long felt that the criminal status of our present Juvenile Court is a stigma upon our city.

I feel that the main purpose of the new Juvenile Court bill is to remove this most objectionable feature and that under its provisions the delinquent children of our city (who are such, frequently, through no fault of their own) will no longer be considered criminals.

Any objectionable features the bill may contain can be easily remedied if the citizens of Washington will make them known at the hearings on the bill. Our Capital City should not maintain a criminal court for our children when throughout the Nation other juvenile courts function for the best interests of the children who come within their jurisdiction, who are not considered criminals in any sense of the word.

The Invalid's Duty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some day society will admit the fact that the cripple has just as much right as the next one to be big business to himself, and it is up to the invalid to bring about this change. That is why I am writing—to open the eyes of the invalid to his duty.

It is the animal in us that forces us to cling to that unfathomable power called life as does the most destructive and loathsome worm, insect or fowl, even though in any case that life be a burden to progress and seemingly useful development.

It is the gypsy in us that makes us nurture the hope that social bars which cramp will ease up and the invalid, though hedged in by limitations, may be recognized as being a person capable of doing wonders within those limitations. If only his faults are pushed to the background and his virtues emphasized, and his abilities considered and counted as being a necessary cog in the wheel of well-balance of this modern go-getting system, though he is a physical "unemployable," he will then be free to be himself, assured of an audience and conceded the right to join his fellow accomplishers in clinging to life without being rapped a "poor thing," infantile though be the dream.

The Post Impressionist

Post Office, Wednesday.

WE hear predictions that, whichever party wins November's election, the successful candidate won't be a woman. But one woman, Lizettle Woodward Reese, was right; "The fight for Helen still goes on." And if citizens of the District were allowed to vote for their governor, this columnist would bet his next week's salary that, no matter who occupies the White House for the next four years, the Mayor of Washington would be a certain girl from Troy, A. M.

Each day brings us letters pledging the Post-Impressionist support in his Hellenic campaign and vilifying Prof. Blagen, Trojan excavator, and Ambassador Skinner, accomplice, for their declaration that the runaway bride of Menelaus was mere moonshine. We've already printed Mr. Stranahan's indorsement. Now mark the following selected epistles.

* * *

Says N. E. K., exercising a bit of poetic license:

"Helen is her name in Greek;
Elena Italians speak;
Lenchen is the German way;
Ellen's what the English say;
Nelly, or The Irish Rose,
She is called where Shannon flows—
But, when all is said and done,
Her name is Dear to everyone!"

* * *

Perhaps cynic Sadie Blake (still of 1717 R street northwest) would call those verses sentimental. But even Sadie believes in the Homeric legend—from a strictly sadieblake angle:

"Dragging my soul," she writes, "from its search for the first violet of spring, I address myself to you concerning this argument about the reality of Helen.

"Foolish man, don't you know that every woman is a Helen? Every woman, in her inmost heart, is a mirror of that fascinatin' wench—or so she hopes."

* * *

Of course, that's just what we ourselves said—though, of course, not so well.

* * *

But Sadie runs right on: "Take from woman her sometimes timid, sometimes bold, belief in her unfailing Helenness and you denude her of the assurance she needs in this cruel world.

"I think you are afraid to say loudly that Helen existed, for you continue to offer historical proof. And when you do say she lived and had her fling, you drag in paltry poetry about osculation, which sounds like the words for a crooner's radio minute.

"Helen deserves better. A gallant female, the first Gold Digger. I betcha she never wrote sad letters to extinguished flames; too busy scanning the forward horizon for new males to conquer.

* * *

"It's all right for you to admire her," Sadie continues, "but please don't make her so delicate and susceptible. I insist she took the prerogative every time and followed through with grace and dispatch. She is, as you say, 'the acme of perfection,' and such a woman needs not the fragile crutch of sympathy. She stands alone, with infinite grace and impenetrable confidence, directing a lightly sneering leer at her less-favored sisters.

* * *

Whereupon, concludes Sadie, "Now I gotta hunt vi'lets again."

* * *

Another voice from the Great Northwest is that of Milton N. Adams (1925 Sixteenth street). "I," he says, "have been reading with interest about Helen's tough time. I'm a firm believer in Helen—have been from 'way back: only about 19, but that is one of the best ages to start forming opinions concerning Helen.

"A few months ago, on a radio fact-program, I heard the astounding news that Helen was 60 when she eloped with Paris. In this I suspect the fine Trojan hand of Dr. Blagen, seeking to soften his final blow. We were expected to believe that Helen was too old to get flustered about; then, when the news came that she never existed at all, we wouldn't take it so hard.

* * *

"But I took it hard," Mr. Adams confesses—"and I won't believe it. To dig in, a bunch of ruins and prove that somebody did exist is quite all right; but to try to prove, by such means, that somebody did not exist—that's something else again. You can't find records debunking a myth before the myth gets started. Trojan records will either say nothing about Helen or else say that she was a reality.

"At any rate, I, like Mr. Stranahan, have known lots of Helens—in fact, I know one whose name really is Helen."

* * *

Then Mr. Adams becomes personal: "Whether or not your identity is supposed to be a big secret, I don't know. But when Ed Sullivan was in town, The Post printed a picture of him and a group of Post staff members, all of whose names were given, together with the positions they held, except one of the group, and his name was printed without mention of his position. Then, Nelson Bell, on the dramatic page, mentioned all the names except that one, calling him merely The Post-Impressionist. So I'm wondering if I've made a deductive identification."

Marvelous, Mr. Holmes—marvelous!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

For Irish Hospitals.

Lopdon, March 31.

THE British law forbidding all publicity regarding the Irish Free State Hospitals Sweepstake has compelled the supervision of tickets which otherwise might be sold in England, Wales and Scotland. These tickets sell for ten shillings sterling, or approximately $2.50. An opportune ruling by James A. Farley rescinding the American postal rule against the mailing of publications carrying mention of the Sweepstake has been a great help to the operators of the gamble, for this offhand decision of the Postmaster General has tended to offset the British verboten.

Your correspondent happens to know that Mr. Farley had no such thought in mind, however. Shortly after the coronation of Mr. Roosevelt in 1933 your correspondent phoned Mr. Farley to explain that Walter B. (High Hat) Brown, who was Herbert Hoover's Postmaster General, had forbidden mention of the Sweepstake in the American press and to ask if he intended to enforce the same regulation. Mr. Farley said, "No; this is a new administration and a New Deal," and in this informal spur of the moment manner expunged from the book a restriction which had been criticized as an infringement on the freedom of the press, but which had been secretly enjoyed by the three big American press associations, nevertheless.

• • • •

THE job of checking the lists and sifting out the American names when the drawings are made in Dublin three times a year is not only laborious and a headache for the London reporters but a matter of considerable expense. These names and addresses must be cabled over to the States, and the staffs of the London bureaus and the auditors back in New York will not thank your correspondent for having suggested the concession to Mr. Farley.

The management of the Sweep now conducts a strong ballyhoo in the American papers and stands ready to provide free first class transportation, food, drinks and entertainment to almost any accredited representative of an American newspaper who is willing to make the voyage to Dublin and cover the draws, which are conducted three times a year between March and October.

• • • •

In any country so far away the venders of valid lottery tickets have a temptation to keep the money themselves, neglecting to forward to Dublin the names and addresses of their clients. The tickets are sent free to the agents, but sales do not become valid until the cash is received in Dublin and the management has sent an official receipt to each purchaser. Your correspondent has bought perhaps half a dozen tickets in the last few years and has never received a receipt—a fact which creates a suspicion of foul play.

• • • •

IF an agent sells a hundred tickets and forgets to send the money to Dublin he gains $250, and his clients are not represented in the drawing because the counterfoils of their tickets are not placed in the drum. The American racketeer is comparatively safe in selling counterfeits or in holding out the receipts for genuine tickets, because the client himself cannot come into court with clean hands. Nevertheless, American sales are rising as an offset to the decline of business in Great Britain.

There have been 17 Sweeps since the lottery began, in 1930, and the total gross receipts have risen to $233,457,000. From this awe-inspiring sum a fund of $46,179,000 has been allotted to the 50 hospitals of the Irish Free State, but a few years ago the government stepped in to collect a tax on the hospitals' share of the money and to assert a supervising authority over the hospitals' fund. Up to that time about $20,000,000 had been distributed to the hospitals, but since the government took charge allotments of money have been held up pending an investigation of the requirements of the various applicant institutions.

• • • •

IN THE meanwhile a mass of about $25,000,000 has accumulated, notwithstanding the deduction of the government tax, which amounted to about $755,000 on last Friday's Sweep alone. The tax is said to have yielded the government approximately $5,000,000 in the years 1932 and 1933, when the gross receipts were just a little short of $100,000,000. This period included the greatest kitty of them all, the Derby Sweep of 1932, which drew $20,600,000.

Four individuals who promoted and financed the lottery in the beginning are reported to have received an average of 2 7-10 per cent of the total, which would be $6,303,000, although the charter permits them as much as 7 per cent, which would have been $16,342,000.

Your correspondent declines responsibility for these last figures, however, as they are taken from old clippings in the morgue and are unaccompanied by any explanation of the promoters' forbearance. The story of the promoters—one of whom, Richard Duggan, a famous Dublin bookmaker, is now dead—obviously is a swell piece, but your correspondent is too lazy to go to Dublin and dig it out.

The Oklahoma Race

By Tully Nettleton.

Special Correspondence of the Post.

IN terms of oratorical fervor, silver-tongued eloquence and dry humor, the citizenship of Oklahoma will be one of the best entertained constituencies in the United States during the Democratic primary elections this summer. This is guaranteed, if in no other contest, by the personnel of the race for Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

Even without the colorful figures of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, once expected to enter, the filing which opened last Monday brings at least two strong challengers into the lists against the famous blind Senator, Thomas P. Gore, who is up for re-election. These are Representative Josh Lee, whose speechmaking has earned him unusual prominence for a first-term member of Congress, and Gov. Ernest W. Marland, former oil magnate, who is halfway through his term as chief executive.

Both Marland and Lee have already announced their candidacies as champions of the New Deal, and the veteran Senator, who has sharply criticized NRA, the AAA and relief spending, though professing good will toward the President, has no intention of retiring. Whether there will be other candidates cannot be certain until filing closes May 2, but the contest appears to lie among these three.

A potential threat is Gomer Smith, recently named vice president and counsel of the Townsend Plan organization. Ira M. Finley, a labor leader, once mentioned, is expected to support Lee or Smith. Former Gov. Murray is devoting his attention to his Association for Tax Equality and Economy, and Gen. Johnson, columning in Washington, has not re-established residence in Oklahoma.

• • • •

GORE was elected to the Senate in December, 1907, when William E. Borah, now senior member, was a fledgling there. Moving to pioneer western Oklahoma from Mississippi by way of Texas, the young blind lawyer and judge, with his wife as his reader and secretary, sat in the territorial Legislature and was sent with obert L. Owen to represent the newly-made State. In subsequent elections he proved himself a devastating campaigner until 1920, when he went to defeat after having been one of the "willful 12" that opposed President Wilson in entering the World War.

The ability to sweep an audience with wave after wave of laughter by a wit that can be pungent or droll has always been one of Gore's political assets. His memory holds literary allusions with which to wing a flight of oratory and his delivery has ease of gesture and resonance of voice. Hitherto, he has put opponents to flight with a challenge to joint debate.

• • • •

BUT such an offer, if made this year, will probably meet prompt acceptance, since Josh Lee, for all his youthfulness, is possibly the most experienced public speaker in Oklahoma, and was until his election to Congress a professor of public speaking in the University of Oklahoma. Ever since his return from war service in France he has been jumping about the State giving dramatic readings at community entertainments and church suppers, acting as toastmaster or after-dinner speaker, talking to veterans' organizations, delivering high school commencement addresses and at length—after study of law and government—dipping into politics.

These activities have made him astonishingly well known throughout the State. He speaks, too, the language of the farmer, for he owns and manages a ranch in northwestern Oklahoma. Around Washington he has made a succession of speeches and has been sent by the Democratic National Committee to address party rallies in Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York.

Lee has always looked young for his age, as he does now at 44. When he was an instructor at the university, a class vigilante once halted him with, "Hey, freshman, where's your red cap?" only to learn with dismay that he was addressing a member of the faculty. Now some of the elder politicians think it a bit brash for a freshman Congressman to aspire to the Senate after a single term in the House, but, nevertheless, Lee is in the race with an energetic State organization and presumably the quiet benediction of the Administration.

TIGHT-SPOKEN business man though he may be, Gov. Marland will not be exactly silent in the presence of this company, for he was trained as an attorney before he became an oil producer. Marland is a man who has come back from two depressions. After the panic of 1907 froze him out of the natural gas holdings he had developed in West Virginia, he went to Oklahoma and in a few years laid the foundations of the Marland Oil Co., which grew to a $100,000,000 concern.

While known as an employer interested in welfare activities for his employes, Marland also helped put Ponca City on the map with a model refinery and office building, his own beautiful estate and with a national prize contest for a statue of "the pioneer woman." But in 1930 the company was caught overextended, was taken over by New York banking interests and merged with the Continental Oil Co.

In losing his oil company, however, Marland acquired a grudge against the money barons of the East which in the eyes of Southwestern agrarians gave him spiritual kinship with themselves. So in 1932 he made a successful race for election to Congress and in 1934 returned to Oklahoma to be elected to Congress and in 1934 returned to Oklahoma to be elected Governor.

• • • •

SHOULD the one present major question mark, Gomer Smith, because an entrant, the race would indeed become a contest of spell-binders, for he is accounted one of the shrewdest pleaders in the State. He has run for county attorney, for Congress, the Senate and the governorship, using latterly the Huey Long method of sound truck speeches. Though he won none of these offices, his law practice in damage suits, divorce and criminal cases profited greatly. It is assumed he would make the Townsend Plan his platform unless that movement should break up too rapidly. But, even then he might adopt a martyr role effectively.

• • • •

MARLAND has made his stand one of support for the New Deal, old-age pensions, homestead tax exemption and a labor relations law. Lee also capitalizes heavily his loyalty to the Administration and couples with it advocacy of low-interest loans to encourage farm and home ownership, legislation to take the profit out of war, friendliness to labor and specific support of social insurance and AAA soil conservation.

Senator Gore's present alignment with Senator Glass and former Senator James A. Reed as a conservative critic of the Roosevelt regime stands in striking contrast to the radical aroma of Populism with which some frightened folk associated his name when he first came to Washington. The backbone of the Senator's support now is from oil companies, bankers and business interests such as he represented in a prosperous law practice during his absence from the Senate from 1920 to 1930.

Yet he continues to claim liberalism by opposing trusts, taxes and corporation farming. The Senator argues that he has voted with the President when the President most needed votes, as against the Patman bonus bill and the prevailing wage amendment. He declares his good wishes for the Administration.

Nevertheless his opposition and criticism of many of the measures that have embodied major policies of the Administration, such as NRA, crop control and liberal relief, constitute what Lee describes as "a strange kind of support."

Consequently the primary election in Oklahoma will be one of the early and significant tests of the popularity of the New Deal. The primary is to be held July 7 with a run-off, if no candidate gets a clear majority, on July 28.

Election of 3 Czechs By Nazis Is Protested

Berlin, March 31 (AP).—The Minister for Czechoslovakia gave a note of protest from his government to Germany today. The protest was based on the fact that three Czech citizens, Rudolf Jung, Hans Kreds and Leo Schubert, have been elected into the German Reichstag. The Czech government regards their election as a violation of the treaty signed between Germany and Czechoslovakia in 1922.

The Czech government was represented as holding that election into the Reichstag was tantamount to granting German citizenship and that the Germano-Czech treaty provides that such citizenship cannot be granted until persons are released from their original citizenship.

Don't Mention It.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Rags—War Dog.

(Rags, a wired-haired terrier that served through the World War with the First Division after being found outside a Paris cafe by Private Jimmy Donovan, died at the age of 20 after having been the division's pet ever since the war.)

They buried Rags with a volley—
Rags of the First Division
Who fought by the doughboys' side.

Twenty was Rags, and weary,
Glassy and dull his gaze;
Gone was the spark that drove him
On through the Argonne's blaze.

Rags knew the smell of powder,
Rags knew the rat-tat-tat
Of the machine-gun units—
He'd had his share of that!

Muck and the wagon's sloshin'—
Shells and the flaming wall—
Wire and trench and dugout—
Rags had been through them all!

Outside a bar in Paris,
Far back in '17,
Donovan (Jim) had found him
Dirty and starved and lean.

Rags perked his head and listened—
Donovan laughed and sang;
Rags followed on behind him
Straight into Pershing's "gang."

War? Why the tough pooch ate it!—
Ate it and barked for more;
Thrilled to the strange weird whistle
That followed the cannon's roar.

Rags took it in his stride,
Trotting beside his buddies,
Missing the boys who died.

Into the Argonne's fury,
Through the machine-gun's hail,
On through the gas-choked meadow,
Wagging his funny tail!

Carrying through a message,
Panting and spent and hot;
Stirring the weary doughboys,
Cheering their souls a lot!

Gassed and one eye made sightless;
Seared by the bullets' flight,
Rags showed a dog could take it—
Showed how a dog could fight.

• • • •

Back with the cheering victors,
Sharing the victors' fun,
Rags heard the cheers and shoutings;
Knew that the boys had won.

Placid the years that followed,
Empty of exploits high . . .
Oft in the night he'd whimper,
Dreaming of fights gone by.

Age and its ailments got him,
Crippled and blind he grew;
Just an old dog to strangers—
Not to the "First"; they knew!

Sleeps he in some Valhalla
Young and with new-found sight;
Waiting the drums, the bugles—
Getting his chance to fight!

U. S. Envoy to Iran Quit 'for Business'

The resignation two months ago of William H. Hornibrook, American Minister to Iran and Afghanistan, has no connection with the diplomatic situation culminating Monday in the recall of all Iranian representatives from this country, State Department officials emphasized yesterday.

Hornibrook's resignation was made on the plea that he wanted to devote time to his publishing interests in Utah and Idaho. A Salt Lake City man and life-long Democrat, who served as Minister to Siam during the term of President Wilson, Hornibrook is believed to have become restless in Persia and to have decided to return to plunge into the Western poltical whirl during the campaign year. He is now on his way to Washington.

Iranian officials recalled Monday by the Shah included Hossein Ghods, Charge d'Affaires here since the recall last autumn of Ghaffar Djalal, who became celebrated when he resented arrest for speeding in Elkton, Md., last Thanksgiving Eve; Hossein Gadime, consul in New York, and Jaroslav Smetanka, consul in Chicago.

All began trunk-packing yesterday. Ghods will call at the State Department in routine farewell shortly.

Marilyn Miller Better, Her Physician Reports

New York, March 31 (AP).—The condition of Marilyn Miller, stage and screen actress, who is in Doctors' Hospital suffering from a toxic condition, was "much improved" tonight, her physician, Dr. W. L. Whittemore, said.

The statement was not amplified, but earlier in the day hospital attendants feared she might not live the rest of the day. Throughout most of the day she was in a semi-comatose state, with temperature running as high as 106 degrees.

House Starts Drive to Pare Appropriations

Slashes in Supply Bills Likely in Conferences Now Pending.

A tightening of Congressional appropriation policies, that may even lead to substantial slashes in supply bills now in conference, yesterday was inaugurated on Capitol Hill, with Administration approbation.

Chairman James P. Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee signalized the new drive yesterday by announcing that House conferees will do their utmost to prune measures passed by both houses, but pending in conference, carrying some $160,000,000 in Senate increases.

Coincident with Buchanan's statement, Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee declared it will not be necessary to supplement the pending $799,000,000 tax bill with new levies, "if Congress refuses to make any more appropriations over the budget."

Letters From President.

Both Buchanan and Doughton were recipients of a letter from the President recently, warning that new sources of revenue must be found if Congress continues to appropriate lavishly.

House Appropriations Committeemen have contended right along that theirs is not the blame for above-budget appropriations attached in the Senate, while most Senators take the position that increases were justified.

All but two of the regular appropriations bills have passed both houses, and the President's $1,500,000,000 relief estimates are awaiting hearings opening next week with small likelihood that they will be curtailed below what the President asked.

Four of the regular bills, passed by both houses, are still pending in conference, and three of these show Senate increases of approximately $160,000,000. It is in conferences on these bills, therefore, that the new economy drive will get under way and some deadlocks between House and Senate conferees are expected to result.

Following are the bills on which a conference economy tussle will hinge:

The Interior Department bill, for which the House appropriated $81,000,000, but which the Senate raised $62,000,000 to a total of $143,000,000.

The Agriculture Department bill, carrying $165,000,000 as it passed the House, but raised to $197,000,000 by the Senate.

Decrease in the Measure.

On only one measure now in conference was the House appropriation actually decreased—the Treasury-Postoffice bill. The House appropriated $988,000,000, and the Senate cut it to $975,000,000.

Three appropriations measures already have been finally passed by Congress and sent to the White House, beyond reach of the belated pruning knife. They include the independent office bill, carrying only $879,000,000 as it first passed the House, but raised by bonus and new farm outlays to a total of $2,889,751,000.

It was to finance largely the increases made in this bill that Congress has embarked on a new tax program.

Representative Louise Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday gave hearty applause to Buchanan's decision to wield the economy ax with new abandon.

"We can't go on spending like this, and the time to start cutting is now," he said.

Ludlow predicted a tighter spending policy in the future, as an outgrowth of retrenchment studies being undertaken on both sides of the Capitol.

Treaty Reliance Waning, Craig Says

By the Associated Press.

Holding that "reliance on disarmament and nonaggression treaties seems to be definitely diminishing," Gen. Malin Craig, appealed yesterday for a strengthening of America's national defenses.

Addressing the annual meeting of adjutants-general and other national guard officials representing every State, the army chief of staff said this country did not expect to be involved in war, but added:

"We would be sadly remiss if we did not so modernize our defenses as to keep pace with recent developments."

Referring to conditions in Europe, Craig said:

"Recent events have served to emphasize the concern for world peace that has been felt by many statesmen for at least a year. Many nations are feverishly arming to the teeth. Reliance on disarmament and nonaggression treaties seems to be definitely diminishing.

"The United States remains on cordial relations with all countries. It does not envision the prospect of being involved in hostilities. Nevertheless, ordinary prudence justifies reasonable strengthening of our national defense."

U. S. Bombing Planes Arrive at Cristobal

Christobal, Canal Zone, March 31 (AP).—Nine converted bombing planes arrived at France Field today after a flight from San Jose, Costa Rica, under the command of Col. Barney Oldfield.

The arrival of the planes created much interest and the crews were welcomed enthusiastically.

Col. Oldfield said the machines, of a longrange observation type, functioned excellently throughout the trip from the United States and that, although no speed mark was sought, they cruised at 150 miles an hour.

The flight personnel, 13 officers and 30 men, will return to New York by steamer April 8, leaving the planes at France Field.

Lands Burning Plane.

Nanking, China, March 31 (AP).—Charles Sharp, Fort Worth, Texas, pilot of a Shankhai-Nanking airliner, saved his passengers and mail today with an expert landing. He brought his burning ship to the airport, and removed his passengers and mail a few moments before the craft was destroyed by a gasoline tank explosion.

Singing Wood Runs Away, May Not Start

Singing Wood, overnight favorite for the Inaugural Handicap, may not start. The son of Royal Minstrel tossed his rider in a workout yesterday morning and ran off for 2 miles before being caught. While Trainer William Norton reported that the horse suffered no ill effects from the escape, those close to the stable contend that there is little likelihood of his going postward.

In a frisky mood, Singing Wood twice threw Jockey Bobby Jones before finally swinging free and circling the track at a fast clip.

The bequest or inheritance—the report did not differentiate—was made in August, 1935, but was just made public in the commission's reports of stock transactions by officers and directors in their corporations.

Pew was given 62,898 shares of the common stock of the Sun Oil Co., increasing his holdings to 236,543 shares as of September 1, 1935.

Sugar Ruling Seen Spur to End Abuses

Donald R. Richberg, former head of the NRA, said in a talk at the Brookings Institution last night that the Supreme Court decision, rendered Monday in the Sugar Institute case, "clarifies most helpfully the law concerning business cooperation and the prohibitions of the antitrust laws."

"The opinion of the court," he said, "gives definite encouragement to 'voluntary action to end abuses,' including action going beyond 'merely the removal of evils which are infractions of positive law.'

"The road ahead is open for the Government to authorize, and for business to utilize, effective measures of co-operation in promoting fair competition for the benefit of all those interested in industrial progress—the managers, the workers and the consumers. And it must be fairly stated that the Supreme Court offers wise counsel in a statement of principles which should be followed in the authorization of operation of co-operative agencies."

Wilkinson to Talk To Cosmopolitan Club

Dr. John Cabell Wilkinson, well known speaker, who entered Alsace and Lorraine with the French General Staff in 1915, to establish a method of teaching French to the children after 50 years of German rule, will speak at the Cosmopolitan Club luncheon tomorrow at the Carlton Hotel. His subject will be "A Thumb-nail Sketch of the Rich Provinces of Alsace and Lorraine."

$114,667,400 Increase Urged For 4 Bureaus

$225,000 for More 'G-Men' Asked as 'Public Fancy' Glorifies U. S. Agents.

By the Associated Press.

Appropriations of $114,667,400 for running the State, Justice, Commerce and Labor departments during the 1937 fiscal year were recommended to the House yesterday by its Appropriations Committee.

More money for the Department of Justice agents for additional inspectors to increase safety of ships, for building Federal prisons and for extending airways were included.

The measure was $7,900,074 larger than the current year's allowance, but $7,984,177 under budget estimates.

New Laws Cause Increases.

The State Department was allowed $17,654,400; the Justice Department, $41,261,300; the Commerce Department, $34,054,700, and the Labor Department, $21,697,000.

The committee said new construction and new laws, including the social securities and Guffey coal control acts, accounted for the increases.

The committee was lavish in its praise of the Bureau of Investigation under J. Edgar Hoover.

"The activities of the 'G-Men' have caught the public fancy," it reported. "Public opinion, which at one time was inclined somewhat to glorify the parasitic racketeer and gangster, has now allied itself on the side of law and order."

The committee recommended a $225,000 increase in the budget estimate to give the bureau $6,025,000. It said that, "through the bureau's efforts, fines, recoveries and savings for the fiscal year 1935 amounted to $38,500,000, an $8 saving for every dollar spent."

Ship Surveys Added.

Heeding pleas of J. B. Weaver, head of the Bureau of Navigation, the committee provided funds for 40 or 50 more assistant steamboat inspectors.

"The Morro Castle and Mohawk disasters are too fresh in the minds of the public," the committee said, "to temporize with a manifest need for personnel."

Budget estimates also were boosted for extending airways under the Commerce Department, the bill carrying $263,000 for this work. The committee regrouped the Air Bureau's funds to earmark $4,523,080 for maintenance of airways with lights and radio beacons.

"During the past year funds made available with the understanding they were for maintenance were used for purchase of additional equipment," the committee reported.

Denies Airways Affected.

During the hearings bureau officials denied that diversion of upkeep funds had affected maintenance of the airways.

"We have never taken money to such an extent that it affected our maintenance in any way," Eugene Vidal, director, asserted.

The Appropriation sub-committee in charge of the bill questioned the officials, particularly upon the insistence of Representative Bacon (Republican), New York, on reports that radio beacons out of order contributed to the Missouri crash last year in which Senator Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, was killed. Vidal said the Kirksville radio beam was on course at the time of the crash.

Holt Posts Guard On Office Records

By the Associated Press.

Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, said yesterday that, because of attempts to break into his office, a guard would be maintained day and night.

Also, he said, all the locks have been changed.

"I want protection for the records I have gathered against certain Federal officials and the WPA," Holt said.

The Senator said he had employed M. D. Dean, former finance director for WPA at Parkersburg, W. Va., to work in a clerical capacity and keep a close watch on his files at night.

Holt has demanded a Senatorial investigation of the Works Progress Administration.

Cuious, He Kills Self.

El Paso, Tex., March 31 (AP).—Sergt. Alfred Corbin, 22, was found shot to death in his quarters at Fort Bliss today. A note found on his bed read, "I have lived a happy life, but I would like to see what lies beyond." Army officials gave a ruling of suicide. His father, J. W. Corbin, Eastland, Ala., survives.

Building Starts On State Police Radio Station

Network to Link Area in System Tuned for Rural Signals.

Work began yesterday at Laurel, Md., on the first of a series of State police broadcasting stations which, when completed, will form the basic link of an interlocking network of police radio stations in Maryland, District of Columbia and nearby States.

The stations will be on the State police wave length, which is different from that used in cities. Washington, Baltimore and other cities will maintain receivers in their regular transmitting stations, tuned to receive the rural signals.

All messages of importance, such as general lookouts or calls for aid, will automatically be rebroadcast through the city stations. In like manner, the State stations will rebroadcast city messages.

Lieut. Andrew T. Conner, who is in charge of the erection of the Maryland stations, and Sergt. Louis Bloom, his assistant, were on hand yesterday to personally supervise the work. They expect to complete the Laurel station this week.

Just how many of the broadcasting stations will be installed in the State is still problematical. Tests will be made from each of seven police sub-stations and, if it is found necessary, one will be set up in each of them.

The transmitters will have the advantage of the new type, vertical antenna. Poles rising 110 feet in the air will be erected. A single wire will drop directly to the ground and connect, with an underground "wheel" of wire, 150 feet in diameter, that will contain 80 "spokes."

An adaption of the antenna for the special use of the State police was developed by Dr. Ferdinand Hamberger, of Johns Hopkins University.

At present there are 16 Maryland State police cars equipped with radio receivers. This number, of course, does not include the numerous county police. These are tuned for city stations and will have to be changed. Whether or not the county cars will connect with the new broadcasters is not yet known.

It is also expected that every State police motorcycle will carry a receiver. The practicability of this will be the subject of a series of tests in the near future.

In line with this new addition to the Maryland law enforcement system is the bill, expected to be placed before the State Legislature, calling for the installation of a police teletype system throughout the State.

Miss Bertha Joseph, secretary to Senator George L. Radcliffe, has been made the District of Columbia chairman of arrangements for the Young Democrats' "Roosevelt Rally" to be held in Baltimore Monday, April 13.

An alteration in plans for the second annual Easter Sunrise Service, sponsored by St. John's Episcopal Church, Mount Rainier, has been announced by the committee on arrangements headed by Mrs. L. P. Harsch.

The committee said a permit has been secured from the National Park Service of the Department of Interior to hold the service on the heights of Barnard Hill Park, at Bunker Hill road and Eastern avenue in northeast Washington. It was originally planned to hold the services on McKinley Hill, Washington.

The service, scheduled for 6 o'clock, will be conducted by the Rev. Walter P. Plumley, rector of St. John's Church.

Students of the Mount Rainier High School will present three one-act plays and a comic skit in the school auditorium, Queens Chapel road and Thirtieth street, Mount Rainier, next Friday, April 2 at 8 o'clock. Funds derived from their efforts will benefit the institution's library.

The cast of the first play, entitled "A Night at an Inn," includes Earl Miller, Tillmon Scott, James MacGregor, George Taylor, Archie Underwood, Joseph Frankie and Mark Skinner.

Marjorie Harr and Douglas Wilson will have the leading roles in the play, "The Advantages of Being Shy." Others in the cast include Mary Cunningham, June Keesee, Georgia Montgomery and Mildred Welch.

A comic skit entitled, "Living Figures of Historic Characters," will be presented by a cast that will include Gilbert Gordon, Virginia Miller, Charlotte Stubbs, Virginia Gunion, June Merchant, Lucile Crum, Mary Chapman and Louise Miller.

Included in the cast of "Sauce for the Goslings," will be Wilma Herman, Alfred Chroniger, Mildred Stubbs, Norman Miller, Elaine Thomas, Bartlett Dorr and Alice Sessums.

Adequate bus service for southern Maryland will be the topic of discussion at the regular meeting of the Southern Prince Georges County Citizens Association, to be held tonight at Surrattsville High School, Clinton, Md.

Veteran Regains His Memory After Five Months, Minus a Job

Walton I. MacGregor, 59, $125 Gone, Leaves for Hampton Roads.

Walton I. MacGregor, 59, veteran of two wars, was on his way to Hampton Roads, Va., last night in search of a job after recovering from a five months' loss of memory.

On October 15, MacGregor left the veterans' camp at Kingstree, S. C., where he had been employed as assistant superintendent, with $125 and a bus ticket to nearby Columbia in his pocket.

MacGregor recalls stepping into the bus. But what he did from that moment until he regained his memory Monday night and limped into Mount Alto Veterans Hospital, was a complete blank to him yesterday.

MacGregor's total possessions, besides the clothing he wore, included a diamond stick pin, 40 cents and an old cane given him five years ago and which he carried with him through the last five months. MacGregor suffered the leg injury that made the cane necessary during the Spanish-American War. While stationed as a mounted Army policeman in Havana, Cuba, a horse fell on his leg.

MacGregor enlisted during the World War, and although he spent months overseas he saw no actual fighting. On his return he joined the Salvation Army, with which he worked for 14 years. He quit that post to become a case-worker at the Camp Jackson transient camp in South Carolina.

"In my work with the Salvation Army and these camps I had a number of people tell me they lost their memories," MacGregor recalled. "I never believed them until now. But I guess a man can lose his memory."

Dartmouth Alumni Will Give Concert

Washington alumni of Dartmouth College will present a musical club concert tonight at 8:30 p. m. in the Washington Hotel. Following the program, a dance with music by the undergraduate Barbary Coast orchestra has been arranged. Members of both the Washington and Baltimore alumni groups, as well as representatives from local school and college glee clubs and other singing societies, are expected to attend.

An alumni committee, headed by N. Page Worthington, has arranged the affair, which marks the first appearance of the New Hampshire musicians in Washington since 1932. Assisting Worthington are Charles H. Armes, Winston E. Hobbs, David E. McCoy, Robert M. Keeler and Lawrence C. Reeves.

Cumberland Boy Drowns in Spring

Cumberland, Md., March 31 (AP).—The flood of two weeks ago was held responsible today for the death of 7-year-old Henry Davis, the fifth death attributed to the high waters in Maryland.

The boy was drowned last night in a spring, normally shallow but deepened by the recent flood. The spring was close by the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Davis.

The child disappeared about 9:30 p. m., and his mother summoned the aid of the police in searching for him. A neighbor later reported hearing a scream from the vicinity of the spring in the evening. His body was found there.

Scholarship to Aid Washington Girls

Announcement of a $1,000 scholarship, open to girl students in local and neighboring high schools, was made by the local chapter of the National Alumnae Association of Trinity College. Rules of the competition by which this award could be won also were made public.

A standardized written general test will be sent out to the various local chapters of the association, and candidates will take the examination on April 25. In Washington the examination will be directed by the president of the local chapter, or a committee chosen for this purpose.

The winners of the 22 localities where Trinity College has alumnae chapters will take college board examinations in June and the girl who receives the highest ranking will be enabled to study for four years at Trinity. Any girl in this area who shall have completed a high school course or its equivalent by June, 1936, will be eligible to take the test.

The scholarship will be named after Sister Raphael, retired past president of the college.

Beer Parlors Cited By Virginia Board

Richmond, Va., March 31 (AP).—Virginia A. B. C. Board inspectors have summoned 11 Norfolk beer parlor proprietors to appear here on April 9 to show cause why their licenses should not be removed.

Charges brought against the places after weeks of investigation include "general disorder," "that alcoholic beverages were sold to persons already intoxicated," "that employes sold alcoholic beverages while intoxicated," and "that waitresses danced with customers."

A number of Norfolk establishments were investigated but inspectors reported the 11 summoned as the "most flagrant."

These are Joe Berman, American Garden and Restaurant; Abram Harvey Arluck, The Anchor; Valentine Cafe; Lou Sandler, Bronzed Rail Cafe; Mrs. Pearl Sandler; Nick Stakis, Red Rooster Beer Garden; Sam Berman, Royal Palm Garden and Restaurant; Samuel Sandler, Paradise Beer Garden; Bertha Vitto, Shamrock Garden—all of East Main street; Sam Lachman, Roosevelt Tavern, Granby street; G. Logaras, Tidewater Hotel and Grill, East City Hall avenue.

Randolph Predicts D.C. Representative

Predicting that the District will have a population of 1,000,000 within 35 years, Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, last night said the city should have "a Representative or Representatives" in Congress.

The House District Committee member told National University law students that the governmental affairs of the District should be taken out of the hands of Congressional committees and intrusted to the elected representatives of the people.

Support for communism, fostered by radicals from Pittsburgh, also is growing in the West Virginia mining districts, Randolph asserted. He urged concerted resistance to red agitation.

He also told the law students sentiment for the Townsend plan is increasing in his State.

Pulman Settles Pole Argument At Alexandria

Retired Mail Carrier and Service Company Reach a Compromise.

The controversy which has raged since last Thursday between Fred Pulman, retired letter carrier, and the Virginia Public Service Co., as to whether the company could replace a rotted light pole in front of Pulman's premises at 411 South Lee street, was settled yesterday after the city council declined to rule and had referred the squabble to City Manager Emmett C. Dunn.

Following a conference between the city manager, Attorney Frederick L. Flynn, representing Pulman, and Attorney Leo P. Harlow, for the company, it was agreed a new pole would be placed 18 inches to the south of the old location, on the line between Pulman's property and that of James Hamilton, 413 South Lee street, and that the new pole would be smaller and more attractive in design than the old.

This ends an argument which has raged between Pulman and the utilities company since 1932. Pulman claimed the pole disfigured his property and detracted from its value. The company took the position that the presence of poles was a penalty a property owner must pay for the privilege of enjoying urban conveniences.

When the company's representatives discovered the pole in question had rotted at the base they proceeded to remove it preparatory to replacement. Pulman seized the opportunity to prevent the replacement and sat in the excavation, defying the company's workmen to remove him.

Arguments failed and the fight was referred to attorneys and city council.

The council delegated the city manager to carry out the provisions of an ordinance which provides that the locations of poles should be approved.

Janney M. Yates, of Alexandria, was appointed to the newly created position of plumbing inspector Monday night, at a special meeting of the city council, and after a lengthy discussion a plumbing code was adopted for the city.

A plumbing board, consisting of the city manager, health officer and the inspector, and two citizens to be appointed by council, one a master plumber and one a representative of the public, with a knowledge of plumbing, was planned.

The term of the citizen members shall be for two years, and the board shall select its own chairman. Meetings shall be held monthly or at the call of the chairman.

The plumbers present at the meeting of council were asked to select their representative, and after a conference they named Bob Vranich, contracting plumber, who was elected. Enest E. Simpson, builder and contractor, was chosen for the other position.

The salary of the new inspector will be fixed by the city council and reported on by the city manager at the next meeting of council.

The new plumbing ordinance was adopted by council, and will become operative in 45 days; however, provisions regarding permits become effective at once.

Building Gains For Arlington Total $61,475

Records Show 96 Permits Issued in March With $483,115 Value.

Continuing to forge ahead, building operations in Arlington County during March showed a marked increase over the same period last year, according to records in the county manager's office. There were 96 permits issued for new homes, representing an outlay of $483,115.

In March, 1935, 70 permits were issued for new homes, representing an expenditure of $367,100, and 10 for business properties costing $54,540, making a total for the month of $421,640.

The records reveal a total of $1,010,240 has been spent on new construction for this year as against $668,063 for the same period last year.

Reports from contractors and lumber yard dealers in the county indicate new construction will far exceed the record of last year, which was $5,780,191.78, representing $5,552,611.78 for 698 new homes, and $227,580 for construction of 57 business properties.

Attempting to obstruct traffic along North Hartford street yesterday afternoon by throwing posts in the right of way, Robert W. Gaines, reported owner of the property, was threatened with arrest.

Responding to a call from George M. Yeatman, chairman of the county board, Detectives Harry L. Woodyard gave Gaines five minutes to remove the obstruction.

The road had been closed several days ago by Gaines, who claims to have purchased the property which he says includes the road.

The March meeting of the Francis Wallis Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, was held Monday night at the home of the regent, Mrs. Thomas S. Wallis, in Cherrydale.

The opening exercises were conducted by the regent, assisted by Pennington Moffett, who lead in the salute to the flag and the American's Creed.

Miss Mayme C. Parker, delegate to the recent State conference held in Richmond, gave a comprehensive report on the activities at the conference. She also reported on the formation of the officers club of the Virginia D. A. R. The officers elected were Mrs. William R. Duke, president; Mrs. Charles B. Keesee, vice president; Miss Clauding Hutter, recording secretary; Mrs. Anthony V. Shea, treasurer, and Mrs. Thomas S. Wallis, chaplain.

The regent announced that Emma Grott, of the Washington-Lee High School, had carried off second honors in the Good Citizen Pilgrimage sponsored by the National Society D. A. R. Miss Margaret Edwards, of Williamsburg High School, won first place.

One of these two girls will be chosen to attend the D. A. R. Congress in Washington as the guest of the National Society.

J. H. Barnard, Retired Officer Of Navy, Dies

Heart Attack Proves Fatal; Served on Battleships in World War.

Lieut. Comdr. John Hall Barnard, 75, who retired from the Naval Reserve 11 years ago, died yesterday of a heart attack at the Army and Navy Club where he resided.

A graduate of the naval academy at Annapolis in 1883, he served in the militia of the States of New York and North Carolina and in the United States Navy for more than 40 years.

In 1884 he was appointed commanding lieutenant colonel of the North Carolina State Guard, where he served for ten years. From 1895 to 1909 he was with the naval division of the New York State Guard, durin gmost of this period having the rank of lieutenant, junior grade, of the United States Navy.

During the war, iLeut. Col. Barnard saw active service at the submarine base at New London, Conn. He also served for short periods on obard the battleship Arizona and New Jersey and the cruiser Pueblo.

In 1919, at the expiration of his term, he received his honorable discharge, but re-enrolled. He re-enrolled a second time, early in 1925, but was retired later that year when he reached the retirement age of 64.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Bankers Seek Holiday Day After Christmas

It may be only the beginning of spring, but Washington bankers are foresighted about such things as Christmas holidays.

Upon their request Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday introduced a joint resolution declaring December 26, 1936, a legal holiday in the District.

December 26 falls on Saturday, and it is expected that Government employes will be granted a holiday. The bankers feel that it is needless for them to keep the banks open the day after Christmas when everyone is broke anyway.

Tunnels Will Connect Proposed Annex, Bureau

Contract specifications, released yesterday by the Treasury, for the Bureau of Engraving and Printing annex reveal it will have two tunnels to expedite shipment of raw materials and provide means of swift communication with the main plant.

The new building will be bounded by Thirteenth, Fourteenth, C and D streets southwest. One tunnel will run beneath Fourteenth street, connecting it with the main building, while the other tunnel will be on the line of D street, providing direct connection with the railroad yards.

U. S. Employes Held Ineligible For Grand Jury

Garnett Order Follows Court Rule Against Service in Criminal Cases.

Government employes are not eligible for service on the District Grand Jury, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett said yesterday after several days of study of the opinion of the Court of Appeals which held such service on criminal juries was invalid.

Approximately 40 indictments, now pending, will be affected by the opinion of Garnett, and it was shown that in those cases reindictments would be sought immediately.

No great upheaval was expected to follow the ruling. It was shown that another law that has passed the test of the Supreme Court, holds that one who has failed to challenge an indictment within 10 days cannot apeal.

Few persons now under indictment can appeal because they failed to ask a review within the constitutional time limit. Just how farreaching Garnett's ruling will be is not known. The courts may have to rule on the legality of the grand jury, on which there were Federal employes before the District Attorney's ruling is conclusive.

The Court of Apeals ruling held that the presence of Federal employes on Criminal Court juries made those juries partial, or at least susceptible to partiality. In the light to that ruling, from which the Government plans an appeal, the ruling by Garnett will clear the way for legal indictments no matter what the outcome of the appeal to the Supreme Court.

U. S. to Ban Bullet Too Deadly to Use

A new type of zinc cartridge, so powerful it will pierce a bullet-proof vest as though it were tissue paper, will be ordered obsolete, because of inadequate laws governing firearms, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said yesterday.

Hoover told the House subcommittee on Justice Department appropriations that, under present Federal laws, there would be no way to prevent criminals from obtaining the bullet.

"The only way the Government can exercise control over firearms is through the Federal registration law," he said, "this does not cover ammunition."

"It is such a menace," he continued, "that it would render useless millions of dollars worth of protective equipment purchased by enforcement agencies."

He said the new cartridge has a velocity of 1,679 feet per second, as compared with a normal bullet velocity of a .39-caliber bullet of 895 feet per second. Hoover said the cartridge, an American invention, was being developed for market consumption when discovered several months ago by Justice Department agents.

Ickes, Roosevelt To Confer on Fund

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes announced yesterday he would confer with President Roosevelt on his return from his Florida vacation in connection with a proposed $700,000,000 appropriation to continue the Public Works Administration.

The PWA administrator, who said last week he would take charge "very cheerfully" of any funds Congress appropriated for PWA, explained that the $700,000,000 would be in addition to the $1,500,000,000 asked by the President for Harry L. Hopkins' Works Progress Administration.

A bill to appropriate the additional money for PWA was introduced recently by Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, but Ickes told his press conference he had not read it and that "I don't know anything about it except by hearsay."

Ritter Avoided Taxes, New Ouster Charges

By the Associated Press.

Three new articles of impeachment, two charging evasion of income taxes on 1929-30 income, have been voted by the House against Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, of Florida, the official record disclosed yesterday.

The new articles brought the total to seven. The third additional count resulted from a division of the third original article into two articles, charging that Ritter violated the judicial code by practicing law, while a member of the bench.

Mayor Disrupts Tax Hearing

Campaign Deduction.

Earlier, when Representative Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, sought to show that $21,000,000 in PWA money had gone to Pittsburgh, McNair asked if that figure included "5 per cent deducted for campaign funds."

"I am here to protest this proposed tax on the surpluses of corporations, so far as Pittsburgh is concerned," McNair said at the outset. "You already take $100,000,000 a year from our city. If you pass this law, a lot more money will come to Washington."

He said he wanted to plead with the committee "not to take the shirt off our backs."

"I don't beg, I demand that this new tax be not imposed," he continued. "Why, the whole city government only costs $41,000,000. And the people get something for that money. If you prevent corporations in Pittsburgh from laying up reserves, what will happen to us if another flood comes along?"

No Tax on Thrift, Industry.

Under questioning, he said that in Pittsburgh there was no income tax, or a tax against capital stock if an industry was established in the State.

"It is our policy not to tax thrift and industry," he added.

McNair, who broke with the New Deal shortly after he was elected mayor, was asked by Vinson what he thought of the Democratic platform.

"Good as new," the mayor replied.

"You say you have no tax on stocks and bonds?" Vinson asked.

"No," replied McNair.

"No wonder that is the home of Andrew Mellon," said Vinson.

"I wish you would tell me," McNair snapped.

"Are you a single-taxer?" Vinson pursued.

"That's not politics, that's economics," said the mayor. "I came here to talk taxes."

No Levies on Incomes.

But he told the committee he wasn't "up on" income tax matters, "because we don't have income taxes, thank God."

Asked if he favored a $50,000,000 or $75,000,000 appropriation for flood control on the Ohio River, he said:

"Any aid you would give us now would come 10 years too late. Just leave us a little money in Pittsburgh, and you won't have to hand us any."

Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, asked if he thought corporate surpluses were valuable to Pittsburgh.

"Do I think so!" replied the mayor. "Come out there and see the ruined mills—ruined by the floods, which were caused by the CCC boys—being rebuilt out of the surpluses of the corporations which own them. And we may have a new flood in 30 days. Why, the boys in the CCC camps up on the head waters of our rivers have made nice little parks out of the swamps and mountain sides. They have dug gutters which lead the flood waters right down into our rivers."

Following McNair, Johnson continued the same line of testimony. Vinson cross-questioned the witness, but when he got down to tax technicalities, Johnson said:

"You are skilled, Mr. Congressman, in taxes, but you are not skilled enough to know the outside repercussions from this new attack on surplus."

Turning to McCormack, he added: "You have read of Federal monies going into Pennsylvania, and I want to say to you that half of it has been sheer waste."

Johnson complained that no man could get a public works job in Pittsburgh unless he "first wrote himself down as a pauper and went on the relief rolls." He said Federal projects in the city had been repeatedly started up, halted incomplete, started again under a new agency, and then stopped again.

Criticizing Federal "red tape," he said:

"If I started with contracts tomorrow, with engineering details complete, it would be August 1 before the jobs would get under way. That's WPA. One sewer job in Pittsburgh cost $64,000. The lowest bid we had from a contractor was $12,000."

At the afternoon hearing, the committee heard J. W. Oliver, chairman of the tax committee of the American Management Association, and a member of the tax committee of the New York Chamber of Commerce, and H. H. Smith, of Detroit, representing the Michigan Manufacturers Association; then ran out of witnesses.

Helvering Asked for List.

But before adjournment, Representative Arthur F. Lamneck (Democrat), of Ohio, took sharp exception to previous day's testimony by Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering, on tax advantages enjoyed by corporations as opposed to those of partnerships. He said he doubted there were many partnerships making above $500,000 a year, and asked Helvering to furnish a list. When Helvering hesitated, Lamneck shouted: "You are always willing to furnish anything the committee wants if it favors the bill, but you are not willing to show anything unfavorable."

Helvering said he would supply a comparative list showing partnerships making over $10,000, over $100,000 and over $1,000,000.

Oliver told the committee he "doubted the advisability of Congress making such drastic changes in the tax law in such a short time," and suggested modifications in the proposed corporation and "windfall" taxes. He said a "credit" should be allowed individual shareholders for taxes previously paid by the corporation, and corporations showing a loss in one year should be permitted to carry them over to the next. Charging "inequalities" in the corporate tax as between low and high income shareholders, he said it fell short of "ability to pay" tax principles.

Smith said his organization is sounding out sentiment on the tax bill through questionaires to members, and addressed himself to only one provision of the tax bill. He urged that corporations unable to pay dividends because obliged to incur indebtedness be allowed the same minimum 22½ per cent rate as corporations that have contracted not to pay out dividends, because of impaired capital structure. Personally, he said he considers the new tax plan "an additional burden on credit and on business" and as "tending to drive funds out of the manufacturing business."

Warmer Days Speed Season At Madrillon

By Chanticleer.

With warm weather sneaking up on us by degrees, some of the dine and dance managers are shuddering in their boots. But not Host Peter Borras, of the Madrillon. No, sir, the big Madrillon cooling plant is being checked over (with particular attention to the effect Maestro Leon Brusiloff's "hot-swing" music will have on the thermostat this season) and from Host Borras' point of view the weather inside probably will never change at all this year.

You ought to know this about Lorraine and Carlos, who grace the floor at the Madrillon this week: The music for their "Symphony in Rhythm" was written by Carlos. Lorraine created the designs for all her own gowns and costumes used in their dancing and last week was offered a job teaching designing in a New York school.

* * * *

Its "Fascinating Fancies" at the Lotus this week. It's another of those revues with lots of pretty gals that has distinguished the Lotus all winter. Rosini, master of mystical South American and Indian black magic, is the piece re resistance. Although I never knew the Aztecs, the Hindus or any other type of Indian ever frivoled away much time with Martini, Alexander or Bacardi cocktails, Rosini nevertheless produces barmen's concoctions practically at the whimsy of the audience. Far more down the middle of the Indian magic alley is his girl-in-the-basket trick. Crobitt and Triano are dancing a little differently than most dance teams and Judy Ellington is returned from the towers of Manhattan. Jan Utgards, who substituted for Judy last week, is remaining for an additional week. The Capitolians for the dancing.

* * *

Ever been to Brinkley's? Very pleasant, with Brinkley's aces for dancing and Jimmy Crandell for the vocalizing. Jimmy is a double-threat man. He sings and mixes drinks with equal success. Just a nice all-around person. That's right, it's the popular Southeast spot . . .

Here and There at the Town's Supper Clubs

Compliments are still bouncing around at the Ambassador Hi-Hat room, in behalf of Kitty Simons' appearance as the singing cigarette girl. They'll tell you at the Hi-Hat that talent scouts from Baltimore to New York are already giving Kitty a business eye.

Priscilla Bennet arrived at the Maryland Club Gardens last Monday night with a suitcase full of the bluest of blue tunes and a technique that is commonly referred to as ultra-torrid. C'mon over—and hear her . . . Dell Riley, Mayfair hostess not so long ago at Cincinnati's Gibson, describes her present establishment as follows, to-wit: "The Mayfair is where guests are perfectly at home in either full dress or business attire. It's that formal informality of the Mayfair that is its most attractive feature."

Those Russians at the Troika never run out of unusual entertainment combinations. They experiment with ideas that never have been tried before and every so often they ring the bell with a near-sensation. The latest: A duet by Marusia Sava, the Troika's perennial gypsy contralto, and Michael Michon, the barytone, who started his career with the Moscow Art Theater. They had been singing solos for months—when they suddenly discovered they had a perfect harmony combination.

Well, the circus had to go—but Barnee remains. That's the situation on the Shoreham front, as it were. They say Barnee is the youngest ork leader in town, but girls and boys, he has a memory like one of Will Hill's elephants. The other night I asked Barnee how the boys in the band are able to remember all the scores of arrangements of tunes they are called on to play. Barnee says: "Let me show you what they can do, rather then tell you how." With that we went to the stand and I called the tunes to Barnee, he passed them along to the boys in the band and the change from one chorus to another was made just as fast as the numbers were called. I still think its remarkable how those thousands of song titles are kept in mind and played on four measures of notice.

Hughie O'Donnell, emmceeing at the La Paree this week, was stumped when the last of the amateur competition preliminaries was held—and he couldn't select a winner. So it ended in a three-way tie. They are Morris Coleman, Carmel Lazzari and Jack Brent. So—nine finalists will compete next Monday for the week's La Paree engagement that is the reward for winning. This week's floor show is headed by Carmen, rhumba exponent, and the ballroom team of LaVess and Margot.

The unofficial congress of the Heigh-Ho met following the first presentation of Marshall and Inez, the new Heigh-Ho dance team, and decided they are the best dancers to appear at this smart spot all year. They dress up their routines with a bit of musical comedy atmosphere. They're known to hotel supper room audiences from Boston to Frisco. And have worked in two Schubert shows, "Face the Music" and "The Little Rackateer." (As a matter of fact, the Heigh-Ho's off the record meeting decided they're the best team to appear in Washington this year.)

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

THE long-threatened budgetary cuts and personnel reductions are being felt in the Government service with a net loss of 5,264 from the executive branch pay roll in February, according to the Civil Service Commission. The grand total of employes in the executive branch is reported at 799,930.

BAKER.

While the field force was trimmed, the total personnel in Washington was increased by 374, reaching a new peace-time peak of 112,304 executive branch employes. The all-time record was 117,760 for the District, or a grand total of District and field of 917,760 reported on November 11, 1918.

The total of employes in the District and suburban Washington in the executive, judicial, legislative, military and District government branches, who look forward to each "first and fifteenth" every month to an approximate $40,000,000 monthly pay roll, is estimated conservatively at 156,000.

District	Additions	Separations
Pmt. or emerg.	1,982	2,046
Temporary	1,075	637
Field
Pmt. or emerg.	8,447	15,234
Temporary	17,135	15,985

The aggregate net pay roll for the civil executive branch of the Government for February was $122,664,196.

It is unofficially estimated that there are more civilian Federal employes in Washington now than in November, 1918, outside the executive branch including the judicial, District government, military and legislative. The United States Supreme Court, due to its record peace time docket of cases and its larger quarters, has a larger staff of employes.

While there are the same number of Senators and Representatives as in 1918, their work has reached an all-time peace peak of hearings and investigations—all involving more clerical help. Also, a larger staff of guards, messengers, mail clerks, etc., is required for the new House Office Building.

The Library of Congress, handling more books, publications, etc., than ever before in history, also has been in a personnel expansion program. Expansion in this agency, which is classified under the "legislative" branch, also is noted in a new wing to the east.

The District government, with approximately 14,000 employes on the Federal pay roll, is frequently left off reports of "the number of Government employes in Washington." The present District Government total is said to be a record.

Bandits Attack Guard, Get $16,000 Pay Roll

Chelsea, Mass., March 31 (AP).—Three men grabbed $16,000 in cash at the Chelsea city treasurer's office today and fled after beating a police guard with the butt of a pistol.

The trio attacked Patrolman John C. Martin and Norman Hawley, a bank messenger, as they stepped into the treasurer's office with the money they had brought from the Broadway National Bank.

One of the robbers struck Martin with the butt of a pistol, a second man jumped on Hawley, while the third grabbed the money bag from the messenger's hand. The money was the city employes' pay roll.

Week's Wool Imports Reach 15-Year Peak

Boston, March 31 (AP).—Ten million pounds of wool arrived in Boston last week from Australia and South America, United States Collector of Customs Joseph A. Maynard announced today.

The wool imports, Maynard said, were the largest weekly total in the last 15 years. He estimated that 81,000,000 pounds of wool had been brought into the Port of Boston from July 1, 1935, to March 28, 1936, compared to 8,700,000 during the same period the previous year.

The Government collected $9,000,000 more in duties from merchandise during the nine-month period than during a similar period the previous year, Maynard said.

On the Air Today

THAT long, fat juicy WJSV record for sustained transmission went the way of all records Monday afternoon. A something-or-other in a whatsis broke. The switchboard operators were kept busy for 2 hours answering one call after another explaining that the condition was only temporary (they hoped).

Further excitement was occasioned by the announcement that "March of Time" would be continued even though the typewriter folks had finally and conclusively decided to withdraw their financial support. The new angel is the chew-gum company also sponsoring "Myrt and Marge."

If Wrigley will only continde "March of Time" on some sort of permanent basis, program directors and radio writers the country over will be relieved no end. For three or four months no one has seemed to know from one broadcast to another whether "Time" would be on the air or not. It was like Finnegan: off agin, on agin.

* * * *

Ted Kimball, WMAL announcer, spotted one of the better slips of the announcing tongue the other night at the conclusion of the Pittsburgh Symphony Program. The announcer at KDKA said, in effect: "You have heard a concert by the Pittsburgh Sympathy"—and Kimball, who had just flown over the western Pennsylvania area the week before when the floods were raging, reported it sounded almost the right thing to say!

Don't ever think April 1 will pass at WJSV without plenty of the worst nonsense you ever heard being piped out to an unsuspecting public. April Fool's Day nifties were plotted out all day yesterday and if one-half the absurdities concocted by Wells Church, Lee Little, Ann Gillis, Arthur Godfrey and others of the staff ever get on the air the prime objective of a radio station (namely, to get the day's audience and hold it) will have been realized. Being sworn to secrecy, I cannot go into details but they begin with a wallop bright and early with Elder Michaux's "Happy Am I" presentation—and continue throughout the day.

* * * *

One Man's Family: Book 18, begins with Paul and Beth going to Sky Ranch, WRC, at 8.

Second anniversary: Andre Kostelanetz, with Rosa Ponselle, in gala celebration, WJSV, at 9.

Fred Allen: Presents "April Fool" contest of amateurs—with Phil Baker, Stoopnagle and Budd, Tom and Fred Waring, Irene Rich and Peter Van Steeden as the talent, WRC, at 9.

"Cavalcade:" In tribute to lives of Mark Twain and Louisa Alcott, WJSV, at 8.

Eton Boys: Begin a new short program, Wednesdays at 6:35, WJSV.

Benny Rubin: Inaugurates a new variety show, WMAL, at 8:30, with comedy motif, and the Rhythm Girls and Four Showmen.

Second inauguration: Arty Hall's Southern Rubes, in songs of the South, WMAL, at 7:15.

* * * *

The Fred Allen show tonight seems to hold promise of much good clean fun. The Warings will not be permitted to touch a musical instrumeht; Baker will be required to do a turn without his accordion; Van Steeden is promised as a crooner, not a band maestro. In other words, the guest stars will literally become amateurs for the occasion.

Senator Pope's Birthday.

The occasion had special significance for Senator Pope, who was observing his birthday yesterday. It also was an anniversary for Mr. and Mrs. Clapper, who were oserving their wedding anniversary. They were married in Kansas City, Mo., 23 years ago—and it would have been easier to believe it was only three years instead of 23. The Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings will celebrate their anniversary the way, in a few days.

Representative and Mrs. Biermann hurried home from the function to finish their packing and leave for their home State, Iowa, where Representative Biermann will be the keynote speaker at the State Democratic Convention.

Mrs. Barkley was entertaining friends with an account of her taxi-driver's remarks as she rode to the Embassy. The car of the Vice President and Mrs. Garner passed them and the taxi driver pointed it out with the comment "I guess he can have the job four years more if he wants it."

"You mean Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner?" said Mrs. Barkley.

Mrs. Stevenson Attends.

Mrs. Stevenson, the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Sykes who, with her sister, was there with her parents, writes of Washington society for two newspapers, one in Jackson, Miss., and the Dispatch, Columbus, Ohio.

On Monday night, in contrast to the formal dinner at which they were hosts last night, the Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky were guests at an entirely informal party given by the Ambassador and Mme. Saito at the Japanese Embassy. There were only a few present and it was an affair planned to give variety to the usual formality of larger functions. Other guests were the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Calderon, the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, and the Ambassador of China and Mme. Sze. After the dinner they spent the evening at games, including bridge and mah jong.

After the dinner last night the guests went into the drawing room for coffee and there bouquets of red roses harmonized with the red of the heavy silk draperies.

Miss Hoskinson And Mr. Jones Married Here

The wedding of Miss Helen Murray Hoskinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hoskinson, of Washington, to Mr. Hugh Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Jones, of Horton, Kans., took place at the home of the bride's parents last evening at 8 o'clock, with the Rev. Donald G. Wright, of the Faulkner Methodist Episcopal Church, of Walden, Mass., officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Miss Adelaide Emly as maid of honor and by two bridesmaids, Miss Kathryn Kerlin, of Keyser, W. Va., and Miss Marjorie Starbard, of Ridgewood, N. J.

The bride wore a white satin gown with a long train with insertions of lace and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The house was decorated with palms and roses and the ceremony was performed before an improvised altar in front of a large fireplace. The altar was decorated with white roses and ferns and at either end were red and yellow roses harmonizing with the flowers and gowns of the attendants. Miss Emley wore a dress of yellow taffeta with a rolled collar high in front and coming to a low point in the back, puffed sleeves and a draped skirt caught at the back with velvet bows, and carried a bouquet of deep red roses. Miss Kerlin and Miss Starbard, whose gowns were fashioned on the same lines as that of the maid of honor, wore red taffeta and carried yellow roses.

Mr. Ruel Walker, of Washington, acted as best man and the ushers were Mr. John Henry Hoskinson, brother of the bride, Mr. Thomas F. Simpson, of Washington, Mr. Owsley Vose, of Evanston, Ill., and Mr. Frank Schacht, of Milwaukee, Wis.

A reception followed the ceremony. In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Hoskinson, Miss Emley, Miss Kerlin, Miss Starbard and Mr. Walker.

Mrs. Hoskinson was in a gown of blue sheer crepe fashioned with a cowl neckline and a short train, and wore a corsage of gardenias.

Immediately after the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for a wedding trip, the latter wearing a three-piece suit of dark red tweed with a lynx collar and matching accessories. On their return, they will make their home in Washington.

Mrs. Jones is a graduate of Friends School, Gunston Hall and Swarthmore College and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Kansas, and is a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

"Happy birthday" will be the greeting Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper will receive from his cabinet colleagues today as he observes his sixty-ninth birthday with a day of hard work at his office.

A native of South Carolina, Secretary Roper first earned political renown in that State and followed it by service in the National Government in Washington, notably as vice chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, then as Commissioner of Internal Revenue and finally as Secretary of Commerce, his present post.

Just what birthday plans Mrs. Roper and their children have for the Secretary's pleasure are matters of state secrecy, but it is safe to venture that his birthday cake will be of the angel food variety. Mrs. Roper is the cake expert of the Cabinet and the angel food cake served at her teas and at homes is a culinary dainty with which to conjure.

The Ropers are claimed by the people of the District of Columbia as their own cabinet folk, so to speak, for they have lived here almost continuously since 1893 and have always been prominent in the social and civic life of the Capital.

Art lovers and members of the younger set of Washington society are making little journeys to Baltimore to see the exhibition of pastel and oil paintings by Miss Elizabeth Gordon, daughter of Mrs. Alexander Gordon, of that city and Huntly, Va., now being shown at the Vagabond Hotel. Miss Gordon, who is the niece of Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps, passes much of her time at her mother's estate, Kenmore, at Huntly, Va., high in the Blue Ridge Mountains and has put into her paintings the lovely mountain scenery near there.

Mrs. Gordon's daughters are popular in Washington and week-end parties at Kenmore, are attended by as many Washingtonians as Baltimoreans. Mrs. Joseph F. Dahlgren, formerly Miss Anne Huntly Gordon, is now in Manila with her husband, Lieut. Joseph F. Dahlgren, U. S. N. In a short time Lieut. and Mrs. Dahlgren will go to Chefoo, where they will remain until autumn, when they expect to return to the United States. Lieut. and Mrs. Dahlgren lived in Washington for a time and were leaders in the young married set here. Another daughter of Mrs. Gordon, tall, attractive Virginia, is now Mrs. Keppell Palmer, of London. She may visit Kenmore this summer.

Miss Elizabeth Gordon and Miss Frances Worrall, of Locust Valley, Long Island—often a visitor in Washington—will be guests of honor at the dinner to be given in Philadelphia, April 17, by Mr. Herbert C. Rowland, a cousin of Miss Worrall. Miss Gordon, of course, lived in Philadelphia when her mother was the wife of the late J. Wilmer Biddle, of the Quaker City. Mr. Douglas Gordon, of Baltimore, first husband of Mrs. Gordon, was the father of her children. Mr. Alexander Gordon is a cousin of Mr. Douglas Gordon.

Rumors and counter-rumors that the renowned Leiter mansion on Dupont Circle may be used for other than residential purposes arouse regret in those who dislike to see so many landmarks of the Washington of yesterday disappear before the onward march of progress. The Leiter palace is one of the very few remaining of the spacious homes which won this section of the northwest the title of "The Mystic Circle of Wealth and Fashion."

The Leiter mansion belongs to the era when the social scheme was carried out in the terms of magnificent balls and stately dinners planned for months in advance. That house was the center of the social activities of the multi-millionaire, Levi Z. Leiter, and his charming wife, who was a Maryland girl with many friends in this section of the city. In the ballroom of this house the Leiter young ladies were married—one of them, Mary, becoming Lady Curzon, afterwards Vicerine of India. There is a new generation of Leiter young people today—Miss Nancy Leiter, a popular belle, and her brother, "Tommy" Leiter, horseman and a leader among the younger beaux of the Capital. They are the children of Mrs. Joseph Leiter and her late husband, Joseph Leiter.

In that house also King Edward VIII was entertained while visiting Washington as the Prince of Wales in 1919. Latterly the white and gold ballroom has been the meeting place of the exclusive dancing class sponsored by Mrs. Leiter.

In the array of traditions surrounding this house is that of the custom of using verbenas for floral decorations if they are available at the time. The late Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter was devoted to this flower and often had displayed many rare specimens of the flowers at her entertainments.

Apropos of England's new King, Washington society, of course, shares the universal interest in the possibility that at last this bachelor monarch may take a bride and give England a Queen. The royal maidens proposed for this honor no doubt would listen with the closest of attention to a proposal from this man who is still Prince Charming although a King.

If one of them were queen in her own right, as Princess Juliana of The Netherlands will be some day, she might exercise the right of selection enjoyed by the King's great-grandmother, Queen Victoria, and speak for herself. Of course, all the princesses could use the leap year privilege of 1936 to achieve the same result. Discussing the subject of queens proposing, a high-placed diplomat the other day recalled little-known details of the famous proposal of marriage made by Queen Victoria to Prince Albert, afterward her Prince Consort.

One morning the young Queen Victoria sent for her cousin, Prince Albert. She received him alone, and it is said that this is what happened. At least, it is so recorded in the Queen's journal: "After a few minutes I said to him that I thought he must be aware why I wished him to come here—and that it would make me too happy if he would consent to what I wished (to marry me)." "Then," the journal continues, "we embraced each other, and he was so kind, so affectionate."

Mrs. Hallie A. Newell Here at P. E. O. Meeting

Supreme President of Order Stresses Value of Feminine Coherence.

ORGANIZED women can make the dreams of one woman come true. That is why Mrs. Hallie A. Newell, of St. Louis, has been an active worker in the P. E. O. Sisterhood for more than 30 years.

In Washington to attend the first annual convention of the District of Columbia State Chapter of the P. E. O. Sisterhood, Mrs. Newell, now supreme president of the organization, yesterday at the Mayflower discussed some of the projects now being carried out by this, one of the largest and oldest women's organizations in the United States. She pointed out that a program is now under way to bring about the realization of a dream a woman educator had more than half a century ago.

Soft-voiced and silver-haired, Mrs. Newell said she believed any woman could accomplish more in a group than by working alone. Organization activity proves helpful to the woman herself (in that it keeps her mind stimulated) and it can result in invaluable help to others.

Conducts College.

In this connection she explained the organization now owns and conducts Cottey College, a junior college for girls in Nevada, Mo. This institution was founded 52 years ago by Mrs. Virginia Cottey Stockard, who is now president emeritus.

"About eight years ago, Mrs. Stockard—a member of P. E. O.—attended one of our national conventions," said Mrs. Newell. "At that time she said our organization had much the same ideals she had tried to follow in establishing Cottey College, and offered the institution to us on the provision that we would endow it.

"A singular thing about it is that the college had the same colors (white and gold) and the same flower (the marguerite) as the P. E. O. Sisterhood.

Worked Out 10-Year Plan.

"Since we took it over we have worked out a 10-year plan of building it up. With our approximately 60,000 members concentrating on this project, we feel our goal will be accomplished and that Cottey will one day be one of the leading junior colleges in the United States, and a fitting monument to the worthy woman who founded it. Thus, through an organization of many women one woman's dream will come true."

Mrs. Newell said the educational fund of the P. E. O. Sisterhood is now about $800,000. "This is now being used to help hundreds of girls to a higher education," she said. "When a student receives a scholarship from this fund, she may attend any college and take any course she desires."

Serving as supreme president since October, 1935, Mrs. Newell has an extensive background of club offices to her credit. She has served as State organizer of the Illinois and Missouri State chapters; as president of the Missouri State chapter, and as second and first vice president of the supreme chapter.

Many of Clinic Patients on Relief

New York, March 27 (AP).—Dr. Eric M. Matsner, medical director of the American Birth Control League, said today that 41 per cent of the mothers who applied to birth control clinics last year were on public relief.

The typical clinic patient was 28 years old and had three living children, he told the league's campaign committee, drawing his figures from records of 100 of the 342 birth control clinics now functioning under medical direction in the nation.

"Poor health on the part of the mother, insufficient family income, or both, were the reasons these women sought birth control information. More than 50 per cent of the patients were treated free. Those able to pay were charged a nominal fee.

"Records show that at least 30 per cent of the new patients last year were Catholics," he asserted.

U. S. Aid Buys Undies For Women in Alaska

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Surgery of the Heart.

Among laymen there is a common belief that if the heart is even touched death will occur. While this is not true, nevertheless surgeons have until recently regarded this organ as outside their province, although stab wounds in the envelope surrounding the heart (pericardium) and even in the heart muscle itself have been successfully repaired.

Of course, the heart will not hold still. Should it do so, death would ensue, and it endeavors to continue to pump blood under any and all circumstances.

We must understand that the heart is really anchored in the body by the large blood vessels that enter and leave its upper portion. It is suspended in the chest much as a pear might be hung upside down from a group of twigs. It is fairly accessible surgically and can be reached by a trained operator via a proper opening in the chest wall.

Coronary Occlusion.

A serious type of heart disease is that in which the circulation is cut off from an important segment of the heart muscle. This is known as coronary occlusion. Inasmuch as the coronary vessels supply blood (nutrition) to the heart, any interference with the back flow in these vessels cannot fail to weaken the action of the heart beats (contractions). One of the recent developments in heart surgery is designed to provide a new blood supply when one of the coronary arteries has been blocked.

Should an important artery in the leg become plugged from any cause other blood vessels will strive to enlarge to take over the function of the destroyed vessel. Unfortunately, although this may take place in the heart to some extent, the process is slow and the muscle fibers will be too long deprived of nourishment to permit recovery. For several years it has been known that when adhesions form against the heart, blood vessel communications are set up between the coronary vessels and the arteries that feed these bands. This offered a hint that a blood supply to the heart might be maintained through these strips of tissue sufficient to keep the heart in a fair state of nourishment. In other words, could blood carrying grafts be fastened to the heart?

Operation Described.

In a recent report C. S. Beck has described an operation which he has performed successfully on four patients. Blood carrying bands of tissue were attached to the heart in two different areas, and Beck now believes that sclerosis of plugging of the coronary vessels of the heart may in this way be treated surgically.

One of the patients, a farmer aged 48, was unable to work because of intense pain beneath the breastbone which came on during the slightest exertion. This condition continued for two years. Since the operation he has been able to keep up reasonable activity. Another patient, aged 51, with intense heart pain of seven years' duration, which came on as the result of even slight excitement or activity, retired from his work about two years ago, utterly incapacitated.

We may well place the emphasis upon the prevention of coronary disease and thus avoid the necessity of resorting to Beck's ingenious procedure.

Soft Blue Light May Make Him Pop Question

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., March 31. A girl should have a dim blue light to help a bashful beau propose, says Lou Kolb, chief electrician at a big film studio.

A red lamp shade in the living room is likely to drive a man to the divorce court.

"Those things are just practical psychology," Kolb explained.

"We've been using them for years to help stimulate the mood a star must have to play a certain type of scene. They never fail."

He said red light makes people irritable, even quarrelsome; a lot of white light tends to cause gayety; green shadings bring peace and calm; so does brown; blue or purple are effective in generating affection.

Individual preferences of the stars, he said, are:

Pastel shades for Joan Crawford; heavy "back-lighting" (that is, the stage behind her flooded with light) for Jean Harlow; hard, white light for Clark Gable, except during love-scenes, when violet diffusers are turned on; diffused white lights for Lionel Barrymore, if the scene allows him to be relaxed, otherwise red; purple for Myrna Loy in almost any scort of action.

Accessories Match the Easter Corsage

Pull-on suede gloves are matched to lavender orchids in this stunning Easter outfit. The smooth wool coat buttoned to the waist has a full circular skirt and wide patent leather belt. The hat of shiny black straw, is a Lanvin reproduction.

Easter Fashions to Feature Flowers

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—American Easter fashions "say it with flowers."

The vast series of Sunday morning parades from Maine to California will be marked by the most varied floral accents the fashion world has used in years.

Bright blossoms from field, garden and hothouse bloom on hats, necklines, lapels or waistlines in many costumes designed for Easter wear and numerous printed frocks are splashed all over with flowers.

Daisies perch under the brim of a sailor and buttercups rim the crown of an inverted "May basket" hat. Bold bright anemones are poised at the throatline of frocks, corn flowers are worn as boutonnieres and tulips thrust into belts.

Many of the frocks for Easter wear are sheer black georgettes or crepes splashed with coral and ivory daisies, jade and white leaves or rose, mauve and green anemones. Besides these there are a number of dark coat dresses with printed floral crepe vestees and skirt insets or wind-around printed scarfs.

Black and navy blue crepes make the most of the other dresses, most of which are topped by jackets. Navy blue frocks with brief boleros and frilly white jabots or pique vests are big favorites worn with dark straw hats trimmed with white pique bows and white pique gloves.

Two piece frocks combining a skirt and tunic blouse of plain or geometric printed crepe are other favorites.

The coats which will top many of the dresses bear the stamp of 1936. Most of them are the quintessence of simplicity in effect, though they may be complicated in cut. Fur is almost banished as a trim. Trim black or navy blue redingotes, high waisted empire coats and mannish chesterfields hold the spolight, and often are worn with a rich silk ascot scarf.

Suits will step out, too, in great variety on Easter morning. The mannish little tailleur in the American fashion is darling zut models with swagger and bolero jackets will be seen also. Bright flowered challis blouses and scarfs, plaid wool waistcoats, pique vests, and colored linen shirts will go with them.

TWO ON SAFARI

By George Agnew Chamberlain

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Morland's Story.

HER eyes buried themselves in his, sank deeper and deeper as if they were drowning. Let them drown. She loved the grip of his fingers on her arm, the feel of his hand around her jaw. Perhaps if she did not answer he might hold her just so forever.

"Haste! Haste!" jeered Morland softly. "Let's step easy——"

Furious, Ballard thrust Josephine's arms and head aside. He sprang to his feet, looked around wildly, seized the third bottle of champagne from the waiting Ali and hurled it against the trunk of the big tree. It exploded with a great splatter of foam to the excruciating delight of the native audience who howled approval. He collapsed in his chair and buried his face in his hands.

"Poor fish!" murmured Morland. "I've never felt sorry for shot game, they die so quickly. But a fish on the hook! Think of its long agony, its rushes this way and that, its constant illusion of escape and the sickening thud of its fishy heart when it finds hook, line and the brute at the other end are still there! God help you, Mallory, dear boy—you're hooked!"

"For life," muttered Ballard. "Can't the two of you let up on me?"

"Of course, we can," said Morland soothingly. "As for me, I'll step out of the fray at once. I'm not married to Jodie and by a perfectly natural coincidence she isn't married to me. She's my cousin, old boy—my first and only cousin. We were cribbed in the same crib, bathed in the same bath and fed more or less with the same spoon until forks came along to symbolize the inexorable wall of sex. Does that make you feel any better?"

"A lot," said Ballard, straightening his spine, his tie and his jacket; then with his hnadkerchief he mopped cold sweat from his brow. "I feel as if I'd taken a licking—a long one. I'll be all right in a minute."

"Take your time," said Morland. "There are a lot more things I might be telling you about Jodie. I can't imagine where she got it, but there's a strong strain of mule in her. No whip can make her move when she doesn't want to go, no bit can hold her when she does."

"You're telling me!" cried Ballard. "Just this minute I don't think I love her half as much as I'd love dragging her around by the hair. Let's talk about you for a change. How did you get here and why?"

"You first," said Moreland. "Etiquette, my boy; you're the traveler."

"Hasn't Jo told you about me?"

"Sketchy—very sketchy. Good old William Jones put her on to you. He looked her up to tell her you'd taken your living oath to do away with me for a measly five thousand. That was the minute when she turned from a sweet young thing into a leech, determined to go when and where you went. The next day he telehoned her to hot-foot it to Red Lion Square to take a squint at you, and she did. The rest you know."

The Past Revealed.

"So do you," said Ballard, "that's all there is. Here I am, I've found you, you're very much alive and instead of my coming in for a slice of easy money it's up to me to repay the cash I've spent."

"Hard luck," said Morland. "I can't urge you to carry out your bargain and cop the five thou,' but if you'll be as patient as I am I'll promise to come across with twice that—an honest debt if there ever was one."

"I've got an idea," said Ballard and ordered Ali to produce paper, pen and ink. When they arrived he motioned them toward Morland. "Write what I tell you, will you?"

"Anything within reason, old pard."

"Just say, 'Ballard Mallory found me and I'm very well, thank you.' Sign it, smudge your thumb with the ink-bottle cork and make a nice finger-print."

"There you are," said Morland presently, "but it doesn't look very important."

Ballard took the scrap of paper and pocketed it. "Perhaps not, but it's worth upward of a thousand pounds to me not counting the fun I'll get watching Menck's face when he reads it. Now spin your tale. My brain is tied into knots trying to ask and answer a dozen questions at once."

"Ask me one at a time," suggested Morland.

"Why should Lord Morland of Morland want you out of the way to the extent of risking his own neck?" complied Ballard.

"That old sack of soured port!" muttered Larry. "Do you know anything about entail?"

"Not much," said Ballard. It's a rare bird in my country, but, of course, I've read about it."

"The present Lord Morland of Morland," explained Larry, "is my very distant cousin and head of the Morland line. I'm the only collateral male and the entail ceases with his generation. Jodie doesn't count because she's a girl."

"When I come into the title," continued Larry, "I'll be free to sell one or a dozen city streets at a whopping price. But by the same token, if my death should precede the old soak's, the entail would automatically be broken and he could do the selling. As it is he can't even mortgage realty; all he can do, and has done for years, is to pawn his rentals in advance to the solicitors. Now he's getting so old they shut down on him and the only thing left was murder."

"Thanks," said Ballard, "that completes the picture."

"Give the old crock his due," resumed Larry; "he never thought the jolly scheme out for himself because he hasn't the brains. But he went to a crew of pirates who make a business of just this sort of thing. Their general idea was a stroke of genius—murder made safe and dignified. But they made one slip; they must have thought I was as thick as the family head."

"Why? How?"

Escape to Africa.

"Don't hurry me and you'll get it all. Where they went wrong was to let the old boy play the philanthropist—turn benevolent enough to offer me the job of tracing down some ore samples. Had they had the sense to have anybody else do it, I shudder to think where I'd be now. But the samples were real, so was the map and the small amount of cash they gave me, and so is Africa. I jumped at the chance."

"Without smelling a rat?"

"I smelt fish—rotten, stinking fish. That's why I jumped. I wanted to get away and think things over, and the chance they handed me was simply too good to be true."

"From what they told me," interjected Ballard, "you were supposed to be headed for the Limpopo."

"That's right."

"Then how did you get up here? Not through Inhambane, I'll bet."

"You lose," said Morland. "That's where I landed from a smelly little boat swamped with Kaffirs. While I was on it there were only two things to do besides hold my nose—make up my mind what I was going to do and glory in the antics and get-up of a Jo-boy called Papu. Well, I made up my mind all right. I took a good look at the map to make sure I wouldn't go where it said, tore it up and pushed the case of ore samples into the sea."

"Good boy," murmured Ballard.

"After that all I had to think about was Papu," said Morland. "I followed him ashore, saw him head for a compound, waited until he came out and then fastened myself to him exactly the way Jodie did to you. He got a notion I wanted to hire him and raised an awful row—said he had the price of a wife and he was through with work forever. That made me laugh so hard he caught it and started laughing, too. He said if I'd give him my cap he'd be my servant, after all. I told him he could have the cap, but I didn't want a servant; all I wanted was to tag along and spend the holidays with his people. You can guess the idea that had begun to buzz in my bean, can't you?"

"No," declared Ballard shortly.

"Having gleaned Lord Morland's intention, where would I be safer—back in merry England or buried in the African wilds?"

"Now, I really see the light," murmured Ballard. "So, you had the nerve to start for the back country with only what you stood in?"

"Why not? If Papu could live, why shouldn't I? We went paddling along through sand half way to our knees, but we took it easy. The whole country lays itself out for a returning Jo-boy with his pockets full of Transvaal coin. Women and boys would pop up from nowhere with jars of beer or we'd bump into a cache of surra wine. Finally we arrived in Wemba, Papu's home town. He had a great wedding and after that I settled down to the time of my life."

"One minute," interrupted Ballard. "I gather that during almost a year of having the time of your life you never let Jo know where or how you were. Wasn't that a bit cruel, not to say low?"

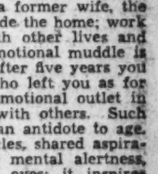
Tomorrow—Conclusion.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Good Health, Good Temper, Good Looks and a Happy Outlook on Life Make Woman of Any Age Attractive.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was married very young and for several years we lived at home, where conditions were very agreeable. I had a very fine husband. My parents liked him very much and he liked them as well. Eventually we set up our own home, after the second child came. I was a good housewife and mother. After we had bought a home and a nice car and our third son was about 4 years old my husband asked me for a divorce.



Mary Haworth.

Well, as the story goes, there was another woman. They had worked together for six years and had grown to love each other. I was the very dependent type and loved my husband too much for his good or my own—I can see this now. I begged and pleaded with him to try, for the children's sake, to keep our home together. He was a good man and as we were still very young we agreed to start all over: he to forget the other woman and stay with his family, and I to try even harder to please him.

* * * *

There were times when we went along quite happily together, and other times when he was always out and then we argued and quarreled and were unhappy. This went on for years. The longer we lived together the worse he treated me. We lost our home. There were times when I didn't have clothing enough to cover me, nor money to buy food. We had our happy moments even through all this. There were times when he would hold me close and cry over some cruel thing he had done to me. But after five years of this he left me. I changed from a happy, cheery young mother into a nervous, melancholy old woman. My hair turned gray in no time. (This was five years ago). I washed and ironed. I counted pennies and cooked and took care of my children. He went to live with the other woman.

* * * *

Finally, after two lonely years, a friend and neighbor guessed the truth of my situation. She took me out to shows and parties and together we started a woman's club. I began to take hold of life again. I love dancing, and enjoy cards, shows and automobile trips. My boys are big now and I am so proud of them. We have been chums and they really love me as few sons love their mother. Their father and I have become the best of friends. I gave him a divorce and he has re-married. He supports us and the whole situation has worked out so that everyone is happy—apparently. But I still love him. I always shall and sometimes when he comes to visit the children I think I shall go mad.

* * * *

I realize, of course, that the past is a closed book. But I am so lonely. I have my children with me, but they are young men now and I am still a young woman—35. I have plenty of friends and belong to several clubs interested in children. But I meet only mothers and fathers in this way. I never meet the man who is free and wants companionship as I do. I have joined a church where I could meet the right class, but I have kept my divorce so quiet that to them I am only Mrs. Blank, or the mother of those fine Blank boys. I kept the divorce quiet for his sake. His job and hers depended on it. I tried to do what is right because I want him to be happy.

* * * *

I have told you my story so that you will understand what lies back of this appeal. Now, can you tell me how a woman like me should go about finding another companion in life? Bachelor or widower, I do not care; only that he be some one of clean mind, respectable background and decent habits; someone who believes with me that "life begins at 40." Most sincerely,

MRS. BLANK.

Get a Job and Set Your Thinking Straight.

DEAR MRS. BLANK: There is nothing in your letter to suggest you have a job or that you have ever tried to find one. You say only that your former husband "supports us." For a former wife, the most wholesome substitute for a husband is work outside the home; work which brings her into daily and hourly contact with other lives and teaches her the saving lesson that her mental and emotional muddle is not the squeaky axle on which the universe turns. After five years you ache not so much with loneliness for the husband who left you as for substitute emotional and social outlets. The finest emotional outlet in the world is work performed shoulder to shoulder with others. Such work heals nerves and cures melancholy. It acts as an antidote to age. It becomes a social experience, with its shared obstacles, shared aspirations and shared sympathies. It makes for greater mental alertness, animating the whole countenance, particularly the eyes; it inspires greater pride in appearance and invests the worker with a vital sense of self-respect, of being somebody in his own right. The new demands of each day's work make yesterday's occurrences dead, indeed. One's thoughts in spite of one are focussed on the future, on what tomorrow or the next week may bring. It is virtually impossible to brood on the past.

Get a job. Set your thinking straight. Don't make a virtue of necessity by reflecting on your nobility in having given your husband a divorce. After all, what else could you have done, in merest decency to all concerned? Bachelors and widowers in choosing life companions usually cut a wide circle around women of the martyr type. Don't keep your divorce such a hushed-up affair. It's no disgrace. It would be more of a disgrace if you had refused a divorce under the circumstances. When meeting persons, let it be understood you're a widow. Few will inquire into the nature of your widowhood. For those who do, a barest outline of the truth will suffice. Avoid your husband if the sight of him gives rise to painful emotions. Be out when he comes to see the children.

* * * *

With the world as densely populated with attractive women as it is today, and with women far outnumbering men in Washington, you will need to develop more positive attractions than the simple longing for a husband, if you hope to acquire one. Good health, good temper, good looks and a happy outlook on life make a woman of any age attractive to men of the same age.

Prize Recipes Prove Rhubarb Is Tasty Plant

Contestants Show That 'Pie Plant, Makes Relish, Cocktails, Pudding.

THE prize winning and honorable mention recipes in last week's contest for interesting ways to serve rhubarb will be a revelation to every housewife. The idea that rhubarb, or pie plant, as many of the entrants called this fruit, is good only for sauce and pie is a theory that can no longer be judged correct. Though the number of recipes for rhubarb pie did head all entries, it was astounding to find so many other attractive ways in which this favorite spring fruit can be served.

The six recipes awarded $1 prizes in last week's contest for rhubarb dishes appear below. These will be rejudged at the close of this series of contests to determine the winners of the four grand prizes. Those recipes that were considered worthy of honorable mention will appear Saturday on the food page.

Oriental Rhubarb Relish.

1 quart sliced rhubarb
1 cup sugar
¼ cup shredded crystallized ginger
¼ cup thinly sliced orange rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Red vegetable coloring

Wash rhubarb, cut into small pieces, put in an enamel saucepan, cover tightly, put over hot water until rhubarb has softened, then add sugar, red coloring to make rhubarb rosy, lemon juice, orange rind and crystallized ginger. Cook over low flame until thick. Serve with lamb, veal or fish.

Baked Rhubarb.

Take two cups of diced rhubarb, washed but not peeled, place in a heat resistant glass casserole. Over it sprinkle ¾ cup sugar, then lay on slices of orange, peeled and with all white fiber removed (1 orange used to 2 cups rhubarb). Sprinkle ¼ cup sugar on the orange slices. Place cover of casserole on dish and bake in a slow oven until fruit looks clear. No water should be added as fruit makes it own juice.

Rhubarb Mousse.

1 quart cubed rhubarb
2½ cups sugar
Pinch of salt
1 stick cinnamon
About 1-3 cup orange juice
1 pint whipping cream

Wash the rhubarb and, without peeling, cut into small cubes. Cook the rhubarb in an enamel saucepan with the stock cinnamon and orange juice. When the mixture begins to get mushy, add the salt and sugar. Let this cook until the mixture is fairly thick, then take off the stove, remove the stick of cinnamon and mash the rhubarb through a coarse sieve. Let the mixture chill, then fold the chilled rhubarb into the cream which has been whipped, but not too stiff, and freeze in an automatic refrigerator without stirring.

A drop of pink coloring may be added to the mixture, but this is optional.

Rhubarb Cocktail.

Put 2 cups sugar over 2 quarts (8 cups) rhubarb cut fine and let stand for one hour in a cool place, then heat slowly. When boiling add 1 tablespoon of cornstarch dissolved in a very little water. Cook until clear, strain and chill. At serving time, add the following juices, which have been chilled: ¼ cup strained orange juice, ¾ cup raspberry juice, 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Pour over shaved ice in glasses, if preferred, or serve in fruit cup glasses.

Rice and Rhubarb Dessert.

2 cups boiled rice
2 cups rhubarb
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 cups sugar
1 cup cream or top milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon beet juice

The rice should be used hot. Soften the gelatin for 5 minutes in cold water to cover. Stir into rice, then add ½ cup of the sugar and vanilla, let cool. Then beat in the cream. Turn into a ring mold, let stand in a cold place several hours. Cut rhubarb in inch lengths. Put in double boiler, add rest of sugar, cook until tender. Mix cornstarch with enough cold water to dissolve, stir into rhubarb and cook until it thickens. Drain off juice. Put rhubarb in center of rice mold. Add beet juice to the drained juice and pour around rice. This is a pretty as well as nourishing dessert.

Careful Buying Pays.

When buying try to be judicious. Remember that some foods will keep better than other, and perishables should be bought in small quantities rather than in large ones. Remember too that food prices are constantly changing and you must consult your grocer frequently about prices.

Rice Jelly Balls Low In Cost, Rich in Flavor

For a light luncheon which you want to round out with a substantial dessert that is low in cost but rich in flavor and appeal try spicy rice jelly balls. Left-over boiled rice is the foundation.

Reheat two cups of boiled rice and mash while it is hot. Stir in ¼ cup melted butter, 2 egg yolks well beaten, and ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, and 4 cups sugar. Shape the mass into balls, and insert a teaspoon of jelly or jam in the center of each. Dip in egg and cracker or brea dcrumbs and fry in deep fat. Serve with a raisin sauce made by cooking together for 15 minutes 1 cup seeded raisins (which have been put through a food chopper and simmered in 1½ cups cold water for 5 minutes) and ½ cup sugar.

Flooded Area Drinks Tea to Avoid Disease

Adds Flavor to Necessary Boiled Water; Beverage Found Fine in War.

PEOPLE in the flooded regions, in their efforts to escape disease, are drinking more tea, according to H. P. Thompson, president of the Tea Association of the United States.

"With mose water sources and many wells in the flooded areas polluted," explained Thompson, "inhabitants are being cautioned to boil all drinking water. Since nothing is so insipid as boiled water taken alone, many persons in the flood regions are drinking tea instead of water. This accounts for the fact that tea orders being received by jobbers, packers and importers are in excess of replacements of tea stocks in stores inundated.

Soldiers Thrive on It.

"New England and Pittsburgh always have been important tea-drinking centers, but the sudden spurt in tea orders in these and other flood districts clearly indicates people there are heeding the warnings of doctors to boil all drinking water until the disease danger has passed.

"Military troops have used tea successfully to prevent disease and relieve fatigue. British troops in the Boer War in South Africa filled their canteens with tea instead of water. Japanese and Russians, both important tea-drinking peoples, in the war of 1904, kept their armies free of typhus fever and intestinal troubles, despite the intense summer heat, torrential rains and limited sanitary conditions, through their habit of boiling water in making tea.

Used in Ethiopian Campaign.

"Col. Valery Havard, assistant surgeon, United States Army, commenting on that war, said, 'the use of tea as a habitual beverage contributed greatly to the freedom from infectious diseases by the Russians and Japanese.'

"Italy, although a non-tea-drinking nation, recognizes the efficacy of tea in preventing disease and fatigue, which explains why the Italian commissary has purchased much tea for use by the army in Ethiopia.

Keep Berries Unhulled.

Berries that are to be kept in the refrigerator should not be washed or hulled until a very short time before serving. Washed berries even in the refrigerator may become covered with mold because of the excess moisture.

Child's Rights To Playthings Held Inviolate

Grown-Ups Err in Forcing Him to Yield to Younger, Says Expert.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

IT IS BAD enough to have a younger brother or sister. But when, to sharing one's importance as the center of the household, there is added the further indignity of giving up one's toys to the newcomer, life becomes unbearable.

The Smith nursery resounded with the constant noise of battle and protest. Tommy, who was 5, was protecting his rights and his property against Lucy, who was 3. It was a useless struggle, for as soon as Lucy set up a howl, some grown-up was sure to rush in and inevitably the same thing happened. Tommy was scolded for selfishness.

"You must be good to your little sister and share your toys with her." And if Lucy broke or spoiled any of Tommy's possessions and he made a protest, the answer always was, "She is too little to understand. You must forgive your little sister."

A child's belongings are his, and his ownership should be respected. He may lend them, he may give them away, he may share them, but only if he wants to. He is more apt to be generous about them if he feels that his rights are undisputed. The minute they are threatened his fear and resentfulness are aroused, and he fights.

That a child is little should not be a reason for giving in to it. The child soon learns to play up his own weakness and becomes a tyrant. It is never too early to begin to teach a child to adjust itself to others and respect their rights.

Cake Is New Subject For Recipe Contest

Homemade cake is such a prime favorite that it has been chosen this week as the subject for the current Post recipe contest. The broadness of the subject will give every woman in Washington an opportunity of entering The Post's Recipe Contest, for isn't cake the first culinary ambition of nine out of ten persons?

Those women who are not prize winners as yet in this series of contests take another chance this week to earn one of the weekly prizes, for there are but two more opportunities of winning a weekly prize, and thus becoming eligible for one of the four grand prizes.

Simply write out your favorite cake recipe and send it to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post. If you win one of the six $1 prizes this week your recipe will be entered in the final judging to determine the winners of the four grand prizes which are pictured on this page.

Judging of recipes takes place on Saturday, so be sure to mail your entry in time to reach this office by that time.

Easily Takes the Place of Molasses, Adds Distinctive Flavor.

BEFORE people had sugar in Europe they used honey for sweetening—in beverages as well as in cooking. The Germans used it on the well-known holiday "lebkuchen," and the Scandinavians and Italians also made holiday cakes sweetened with honey. The special flavor of honey blends into the other ingredients of a cake as it stands.

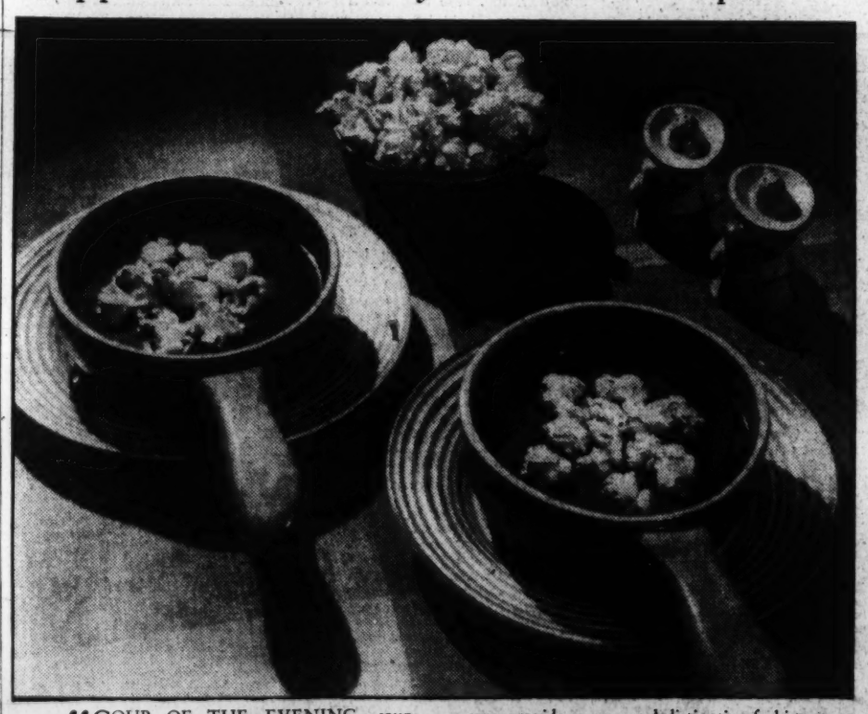
Honey also has the ability to absorb moisture and that keeps a cake from drying out. This quality is due to the fruit sugar called levulose, which absorbs moisture from the air. In cooking this is sometimes an advantage and sometimes not, according to the United States Bureau of Home Economics. In fruit cakes, plum puddings, or any other steamed puddings, or soft cookies, honey is a helpful ingredient. But in ginger snaps or other crisp cookies, boiled frosting for cake, or hard candy, honey soon causes softness and stickiness.

If you have a home supply of honey you will undoubtedly want to use some of it in cooking. If you have to buy your honey, get the extracted or strained liquid honey for cakes and cookies. There are two reasons for baking cakes and other foods containing honey at a lower temperature than those in which sugar is the sweetening. Too much heat will change the flavor of the honey. Its delicious taste comes from certain volatile oils, which evaporate at a high temperature. Also, at a high temperature, the sugars in honey change to caramel more readily than ordinary sugar. That means change of flavor and a danger of your cake browning too rapidly. So bake cakes in a moderate oven.

In mixing honey cakes, put the honey into the liquid. In recipes calling for molasses, such as gingerbread or steamed pudding, you can use honey in place of molasses, measure for measure. They're both sirups, with a similar consistency. Honey doesn't contain as much acid as molasses, so omit the soda in the recipe and use a little more baking powder. For each quarter teaspoon of soda left out, add 1 teaspoon of baking powder.

The change is a little more complicated when you want to use honey instead of sugar. There is water in honey, so the liquid in the recipe must be reduced. When you substitute medium-thick honey for half the sugar in the cake, cut down the liquid one-fourth. If you substitute honey for all the sugar, cut down the liquid one-half. In many recipes the best results come from using honey for only part of the sugar.

Appetizers Make Way for Cheese Popcorn!



"SOUP OF THE EVENING—soup, beautiful soup!" went the refrain in "Alice in Wonderland." But it will take more than the refrain from a lovely song to make the children, yes, and the adults, too, look favorably upon a bowl of hot soup these warm spring days. Then what shall it be? The sulphur and molasses cure? No, indeed, but a sprinkling of cheese-flavored popcorn, the newest teaser to the appetite. These fluffy kernels of popcorn, treated to a covering of a sharp American cheese product, have an inimitable flavor all their own—a flavor that keeps calling "More!" As an adjunct to cocktail and soup courses, cheese-flavored popcorn provides a new and distinctive fashion. The full flavor of whole corn kernels popped to giant snowflake proportions, and the just-sharp-enough flavor of cheese are an irresistible combination, and a truly wise housewife understanding the appetite appeal of cheese-coated popcorn need do nothing more than sprinkle a handful over a bowl of hot soup to change her family's idea about what will taste good on a balmy spring day. The next time you serve soup, especially if it is a cream of tomato, asparagus or pea, be sure to remember that cheese-coated popcorn, which comes in moisture-proof bags, or in large party-size tins, is the one soup accompaniment that will turn a winter dish into a distinctive and popular spring one.

Visiting Friends Present Special Problem Here

By Margaret Wallace.

FRIENDS—and friends of friends—from other places present special problems in etiquette for Washington residents.

In this modern world, in this city, as well as every other place, there are few persons without occupation of some kind, either as wage earners, homemakers, or volunteer workers in organizations. Every one desires to be polite to old friends or those for whom some friend has bespoken consideration when they visit Washington. Just how far this politeness must go in a busy world is a much-discussed question.

Friends from other cities who expect to come to Washington should write in advance if possible. They should state when they expect to arrive, where they will live, and something of how they will be occupied. This will make it possible to make plans to see them or to invite them to call or to a social function. It will also prevent embarrassing unxepected calls.

The Procedure of Calling.

Washingtonians should call on friends from out of town first. They should telephone if they expect to be received. It is correct to leave cards with addresses and telephone numbers on them, also to leave invitations with the cards. Visitors to Washington should, in turn, leave cards at the homes of those who have called on them.

The visitors may telephone their arrival to their friends if they have not been otherwise notified. A letter of introduction should be left at the home of the person to whom it is addressed, with the visiting card bearing the Washington address and telephone number of the visitor. The card should never be left at business addresses unless it is of a business character.

No well-bred person visiting in Washington will make the home or office of a friend or acquaintance her headquarters unless specifically invited to do so. This habit is one from which Washingtonians suffer frequently.

Query—A lady arrived at my house with a letter of introduction from a friend in another city while I was giving a bridge party. She walked right in and into my drawing room. She interrupted the game, of course, and I had to stop and read the letter and be polite. She took off her coat and took my seat at the bridge table and remained until after tea. She did not play bridge very well. I am fond of the friend who gave her the letter of introduction. I do not want to be rude. Will leaving cards be enough?

Answer—Leaving cards will be enough.

Visiting In-Laws.

Query—My husband's sister-in-law has arrived at our home with her two children. She did not notify us in advance that she was coming and we did not invite her. She drove up in her car one morning and said that she would attend a convention here the next week and that the children would be safe at our house while she was away in the day time. It is not convenient to have her as I have my mother and sister visiting me. My husband has had to sleep in the living room. I do not know when she will go home.

Answer—No guest, not even a close relative, should arrive to pay a visit without an invitation or notice at least that she is coming. You might suggest the name of some boarding house or hotel. Say that you are sorry that you will not be able to ask her to remain with you during her visit in Washington.

Query—Some friends of mine motor in from a nearby city very frequently and expect me to take them to luncheon. They come to my business office and wait for me. I do not think my employer likes it. Sometimes I have luncheon engagements, but do not like to say so. I really can not afford to take them to luncheon all the time. Do you think I can tell them politely that I can not go to luncheon in business hours or that I have an engagement?

Answer—Yes. It will be entirely correct to tell them that you can not go out to luncheon with them or that you have an engagement. You can tell them, too, that your employer does not like you to receive visitors.

Query—Are invitations for a garden party written or engraved, or can they be sent on a visiting card?

Answer—Invitations for formal functions are engraved; for more informal parties, such as the usual garden parties, they can be written or sent on a visiting card.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

EXTRA! EXTRA! The new chintzes are blooming forth in spring-like profusion. And we're the kind of a person who gets as much of a thrill about gardens over the counter as gardens over the fence.

We're a bit glib about the word chintz perhaps . . . we use it to mean most anything in cotton goods that is fresh looking and flowered. That includes all the pretty cretonnes as well as the glazed and unglazed chintzes. Then there are the flowered linens too. They used to be on the dull side of color, but of late seasons they too are getting bolder and cleared in color. The reason we like these fabrics for tired rooms is because they're such a good tonic for whatever is the matter.

Here's a dose for a room that's dreary and drab . . . green ground chintz with old fashioned bouquet design—use with three-inch pleated ruffles in rose color. For a room that is too beige looking, try chintz with a brown ground and bright pattern and finish it with bands and welting of jade color. If the room is darkish and dingy, try chintz with a bright yellow ground with lilac colored pleats and welting. For a room where you can afford to be a bit impractical, there's nothing prettier than white ground with clear colors in the pattern.

new florals on dark red ground—that would warm up an igloo! Even when we haven't a thing to buy, we love to wander among the chintzes, plucking the new blossoms with our eyes . . . it's a very good cure for the spring urge to wander in a meadow or go wading in some singing brook, when you haven't a meadow or brook handy that is.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Bedroom Window Ideas for Spring." It has sketches from her notebook of simple, pleasant curtain arrangements.

Household Hints

The very next time you want to make a pie, try mixing canned apricots with canned raspberries. It is a delicious combination.

Always read carefully the manufacturer's instructions before using a new electrical appliance. The same thing applies to the instructions for electric stoves as well as the smaller pieces of equipment. You will then be able to operate it much more efficiently.

Saffron, which American cooks have overlooked in their marketing for interesting seasonings, is widely used in Europe and has a reputation that goes way back to Cleopatra.

It is the stigma of the saffron flower which flourishes in Spain, and it takes about 225,000 stigma to make a pound of saffron. Chefs value it for the golden color and mild flavor that it adds to cookery, and the peasants brew a tea from it to soothe the nerves.

Dried fruits are delicious when cooked with a little cinnamon, or thin slices of orange or lemon peel. Similar spices may be substituted, if preferred.

Pieces of cooked chicken added to the usual ingredients for preparing macaroni and cheese affords a pleasing new version of an old favorite.

If you have become salad-minded since the arrival of mild weather, try this comination of fruits and cheese. Fill chilled peach halves with cottage cheese and sprinkle with finely chopped pineapple. If canned pineapple is used be sure that it is well drained. Garnish each salad with half a walnut meat. Serve with any preferred dressing.

Here is just another manner in which baked apples can be prepared. Peel the top of the apple and bake in the usual way until they are soft, but firm. Add a spoonful of sugar to each apple, place them under a broiler and brown quickly, basting once or twice.

Food Prices Likely to Shift Rapidly Now

Favorable Weather May Bring Vegetables Down at Any Moment.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THIS is the time of year when we must not forget that food prices may change over night. Strawberries, for example, have been high, but all of a sudden agreeable weather conditions have provided an abundant supply, and prices are lower. So it goes for almost every food product, and especially fresh produce, for rapid changes in weather, such as we experience at this time of year, mean that spring foods are suddenly going to burst upon the market in their full glory.

What was expensive last week and forbidden to our tables, may this week be abundant and inexpensive.

Menus at this time of year, when winter dishes no longer have their old appeal, may be a trial to the housewife. She will find, however, that if the markets are visited as frequently as possible, new ideas will pop into her head at the mere sight of a fresh green, crimson strawberries, or any of the other foodstuffs that remind her that spring is really here to stay.

Lettuce is Reasonable.

Though green vegetables are relatively high this week, the reasonable price of iceberg lettuce makes it possible to serve many interesting salads, both fruit and vegetable, and so offset the use of an oversupply of root vegetables.

A change is primarily what the appetite demands at this time of year. With the coming of filtering sunlight and balmy breezes the body needs less energy giving foods, but rather craves fresh succulent dishes, especially fruits and vegetables. Cold dishes may be introduced into the menu gradually. At luncheon, for example, the first course may still be hot soup, but instead of a heavy soup served up in large bowls, a clear soup, a vegetable soup, or a light cream soup in medium sized portions with a salad to follow and a fruity dessert will be much more acceptable to the appetite that has suddenly become indifferent to hot, heavy foods.

Of the green vegetables this week you will find spinach and cabbage the two in the lower price level. Instead of meat tonight why not serve a spinach ring filled with fresh mushrooms. Fluffy steamed rice will be an admirable accompaniment to this dish and will give your family that much-needed change from potatoes.

Ten-Minute Cabbage.

Cabbage, if attractively served and not overcooked, is also a spring tonic worth mentioning. You might serve ten-minute cabbage with plenty of butter, salt and pepper and a garnish of finely grated raw carrots. With this have your first cold meat of the season, pressed corned beef slices, perhaps, and creamed new potatoes dusted with finely chopped parsley. A salad of crisp, fresh greens with a tart dressing is always acceptable, especially at the present season. The dressing may be spiced with finely chopped beets, a bit of onion, green pepper, pimiento or paper thin sliced of crisp, red radishes.

The root vegetables are less expensive than the other green vegetables in season—artichokes, asparagus, green and lima beans, cauliflower and green peas. But they also have their summer attire. Little round beets boiled in their jackets, cooled and peeled make an excellent basis for a spring luncheon salad.

Hollow out the centers of the beets—saving the inside for salad dressing, and fill each beet cavity with cottage cheese which has been spiced with finely chopped chives. Serve with mayonnaise dressing. For a heavier salad add two stuffed egg halves to each salad, a few green pepper rims or chilled, canned asparagus tips.

If you like raw vegetables try several of the root family and several of the less expensive ones in a combination salad. There is no other salad that will bring your appetite so quickly to normal. Diced carrots and turnips with chopped celery, minced green pepper and a suggestion of onion is a noble combination. Marinate the mixed vegetables in a thin, tart dressing just long enough to be sure that they are cold and then embed each serving in a nest of crisp water cress. Serve the salad with additional dressing, either French or mayonnaise.

Among the fruits, that will appeal to the lazy appetite, are our winter favorities—apples, grapefruit, oranges and bananas. These four spiced with fresh strawberries or fresh pineapple—both on the market in plentiful supply this week—will make the best and most appreciated fresh fruit salad of the season.

Fresh Fruit Dessert.

With the showing of a more abundant supply of fresh fruits at more reasonable prices, the women who maintains her home on a moderate budget will find that she can substitute interesting fresh fruit desserts for the winter puddings, pies, cakes, etc.

Fruited gelatin mixtures served plain, or with cream or icy cold thin custard sauce, are always popular. Be sure, however, not to add fresh pineapple to gelatin mixtures, for it contains a peculiar enzyme which will not permit the gelatin to harden. In using fresh pineapple for this purpose, cook the pineapple first.

Egg and Cheese Dishes Good For Luncheon, Dinner in Lent

These Delicious Protein Foods Have Many Possibilities Alone or as Main Dishes; Low Cooking Temperatures Advised.

THE LENTEN season is a grand time to revive all your favorite egg and cheese recipes. Both of these delicious protein foods have many possibilities alone or combined as main dish foods for luncheon or dinner.

One cookery principle which should be most carefully followed for both these foods is low cooking temperature.

If eggs are to be cooked use a low fire no matter what the dish in preparation. If it's poached eggs—keep the water below boiling; if it's fried eggs let them cook slowly, pouring the fat over the yolk to cook the film of white which covers it—or cover the pan. If you are preparing an omelet be sure that the fire is very low so that the omelet puffs gently and sets before it browns. Even for hard-cooked eggs—the cooking water is kept well below boiling to insure a tender evenly cooked egg.

In cheese, the best way to insure low cooking temperatures is to mix the cheese with some other food. Grated cheese, melted in white sauce or tomato sauce makes a delightful rarebit to serve over toast or vegetables. Layers of sliced or grated cheese baked into a souffle, a dish of macaroni or rice are well protected from excessive over heat by the added food. Never place a layer of cheese on top of a baked dish. If you want a brown, crispy crust try buttered bread or cracker crumbs.

Eggs and cheese combine well in flavor to make attractive dishes. Poached eggs served on toast and covered with a rarebit sauce are most nourishing and delightful in flavor. An escalloped hard-cooked egg and cheese dish is a square meal and serves to best advantage with a good tomato sauce.

Here are a few combination cheese and egg dishes that you will want to give plenty of exercise these few remaining weeks of the Lenten season:

Escalloped Eggs and Cheese.

1½ cups dry ground bread crumbs
6 hard-cooked eggs, cut in slices
1 cup grated American cheese
2 cups medium white sauce

Arrange in layers in a buttered casserole, bread crumbs, eggs, cheese and white sauce. Make a sauce by melting 3 tablespoons butter, adding 3 tablespoons of flour and 2 cups milk. Stir until thickened and season. In each layer place small bits of butter and seasonings of salt and pepper. The last layer should be crumbs mixed with melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 minutes. Serve with tomato sauce. Serves 4 to 5.

Baked Macaroni with Cheese and Tomatoes.

1½ cups macaroni
1 cup grated American cheese

Cook macaroni in plenty of boiling salted water for 20-25 minutes. Drain and rinse with cold water. Add cheese.

To make sauce:
¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
2 cups unstrained canned tomatoes
½ onion chopped fine
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon sugar

Melt butter, add flour and tomatoes. Stir until smooth and thickened and season with onion, salt, pepper and sugar. Pour this mixture over the macaroni and bake in a baking dish. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Amount serves 5.

Strawberry Mousse.

1 pint rich cream
1 cup fruit-pulp
Vanilla
Powdered sugar.

Whip and drain the cream. Mix with it the pulp of the strawberries which have been sprinkled well with powdered sugar. Add vanilla, mold, and pack in ice and salt for three hours, or pack and freeze in the trays of the mechanical refrigerator.

"Well, Helen," Mrs. Black said, "that hand certainly was a feminine victory. Fifteen dollars in the kitty and not a cent of our money."

"Hardly adequate compensation," was Mrs. White's icy retort, "for finding one has married an idiot!"

The two men having nothing to say, the second hand was dealt.

The bidding:

Pass	Pass	Pass	1 spade
Pass	2 spades	Pass	4 spades [final bid]

Mr. Black opened the king of hearts and, receiving a high card from his partner, continued with two more rounds, declarer ruffing the third. The club jack was used as entry and the spade ten led for the finesse. West's king won and a spade was returned. Another trump lead accounted for the adverse trumps and then the club queen was overtaken by dummy's king. The diamond queen was next led and East covered. South took the ace, led the nine, and let it ride. The finesse succeeding, South claimed the remaining tricks and game contract.

I waited for either recrimination or confession, but none was forthcoming.

"Doesn't anyone want to comment on that hand?" I asked. Everyone looked surprised.

"What is there to say? The diamond finesse worked," said Mr. Black.

"But there wasn't a true diamond finesse," I pointed out. "Your wife erred in covering the queen. She had nothing to gain by the play. She should have waited for the jack to be led and covered that. Then there would have been no way for declarer to avoid the loss of a diamond trick. Sorry, Mrs. Black, but $2.50, please!"

Mr. Black let out a roar.

"Two-fifty!" he shouted. "What is this, a frame-up? We men pay $5 and $10 for our mistakes! This is no time for chivalry!"

"You mind your business!" his wife said tartly. "Two-fifty is plenty. Why, you poor fish, you didn't even know there'd been a mistake!"

Trial of Myers In Wilson Case To Start Today

Two Others Indicted for Slaying to Be in Court at Rockville.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Rockville, Md., March 31.—The trial of Ernest Myers, Tri-State gangster, charged with first-degree murder in the "mistaken identity" slaying of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route carrier, in Takoma Park in October, 1934, opens here tomorrow.

Monday he withdrew his plea for change of venue over the protests of his attorney, Samuel Levin, of Baltimore.

As the gaunt gangster is brought here today he will be accompanied by two others, also charged with murder in Wilson's death—Albert McDermott, alias "Slim" Dunn, and Albert Sutton. They may be used in the trial, or they may hear where their own trials will be held. Both have been granted change of venue.

Armed guards will stand outside the courthouse.

Wilson was shot down from ambush when he stopped in the dawn to deliver a morning newspaper at the home of Edward "Mickey" McDonald, well-known gambler.

Police Draw Parking Lot Control Plan

Surveillance Is Sought to Halt Moving of Autos to Streets.

Practice Is Confined to Only Few Firms, Say Investigators.

Plans to invoke drastic regulations governing District parking lots were announced yesterday as police completed an intensive investigation of alleged street parking practices by various downtown lot operators.

A report, compiled by Capt. Milton D. Smith, traffic division commander, and based on a recent survey of parking lot conditions, was sent to Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown.

The report, it was learned, disclosed instances of alleged illicit practices whereby lot attendants, after accepting storage fees, ursurped public parking spaces by moving cars onto the street.

By thus duping motorists who pay for parking privileges, the report related, certain lot operators are violating local traffic regulations in order to provide additional storage space on their property.

Confined to Few Lots.

It was pointed out, however, that such practices are confined to only a few downtown lots—usually the smaller concerns.

"We are not accusing every parking lot in the downtown business section," said a police official. "The majority of lot owners conduct their businesses above reproach".

In Capt. Smith's report to Maj. Brown, it was disclosed that members of a special squad of plain-clothes policemen observed as many as eight autos being driven from a lot and onto the street as soon as the morning rush-hour parking ban lifted.

Several of these cars were ticketed for overtime parking and other violations of parking regulations. In at least two cases, lot owners themselves posted collateral rather than expose their activities to paying customers.

Law Does Not Cover.

"Under existing laws," Capt. Smith said, "we can only make arrests for infractions of parking regulations. There is no law governing any use of a motorist's car while it is parked on a lot—even if it is driven from the lot and onto the street."

In his report, Capt. Smith included recommendations for a licensing system to cover all parking lots in Washington. Plans for this system are now being studied by the District License Committee, appointed recently by the commissioners.

Under the license plan, scales of standard fees would be set and rules established for parking lot operations.

One recommendation provides for suspension or revocation of a license when street parking practices are found.

Plans In Offing.

Meanwhile, with traffic hearings before the special House subcommittee concluded, Representatives Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas announced plans to relieve Washington's burdened problem.

A substantial increase in police personnel and strict enforcement of "sensible traffic regulations" will be among the committee's recommendations, Carpenter declared.

A concrete report will be compiled from the mass of testimony and in addition to recommendations for traffic improvement and safety, it will serve as a textbook for motorists in the years to come, Carpenter said.

The committee has not decided on the number of additional policemen to be recommended. Carpenter, however, said he was convinced that Maj. Brown should have an adequate force to deal with present traffic conditions.

Beneficial Results.

The committee in no way suggests a harassment campaign against local motorists, Carpenter pointed out. With a larger force, he explained, Maj. Brown will be able to concentrate on the reckless drivers who contribute to accidents, injuries and deaths.

Recent efforts to promote traffic safety by educational methods and "crack-down" enforcement drives have brought beneficial results, Carpenter feels.

New District Postmaster Takes Oath

Burke Defends Spoils System In Postoffice

New Postmaster Sees 'Much Good' in Present Plan; Given Dinner.

The prevailing system of appointing postmasters as part of the political spoils of the party in power was defended last night by Vincent Burke, newly appointed postmaster for the City of Washington.

Burke, who was sworn into office yesterday afternoon, was tendered a dinner by friends and the National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations at the Hotel Washington.

"I realize that both the President and Postmaster General Farley have placed themselves on record as favoring the expansion of the civil service to include postmasters and the principal assistants," Burke said.

"However, I think there is much good in the present system," he continued. "I know many fine postmasters who have been appointed out of political life."

Both Burke and Farley praised the retiring postmaster, William Mooney for "his splendid work in the department."

"It wasn't easy for me to tell Bill Mooney that I had to appoint Vincent Burke to succeed him," said Farley. "I will remain grateful to Mr. Mooney for the splendid way in which he took the news."

Farley also promised a number of promotions of local postal employes at 10:30 today. One of these, he revealed, was the advancement of J. E. Cooper, president of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, to the post of superintendent of rural mails.

J. J. Fields, postmaster of Louisville, serving as toastmaster, sketched Burke's steady rise in the postal ranks from his start in 1906 as a substitute clerk earning only $600 a year. At the time, Fields recalled, he was Burke's "straw boss."

Numerous other tributes were showered on both Burke and Farley. Among the speakers were Albert Goldman, postmaster of New York; Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes; John J. Barrett, president of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks; Alexander Hamill, secretary of the National Association of Postoffice Laborers; Herschel C. Ressler, president of the National Association of Postal Supervisors, and Bruce Luna, postmaster of Dallas, Tex.

The 'Number' Racket

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Today, Uncle Sam pays his thousands of Government employes in Washington. And today, thousands of pay-day dollars will pour into illicit channels, lending support to the crime-breeding "numbers" racket and defying authorities to control underworld murder and bloodshed.

It is "easy-money" day for big-time racketeers. Pennies, dimes and nickles from the salaries of District workers will contribute a tremendous "take" to gambling promoters and petty "numbers" operators.

Downtown streets, already seething with daily "numbers" activities, will be the scenes of open betting and heavy payoffs. Established gaming quarters will do a rushing "business."

And on the sidelines police will stand by watching all this with a forced wink—powerless, they say, because the "numbers" operators and runners are difficult to convict under existing laws.

Gaither, Maryland lottery boss, is the latest victim of clashing underworld forces. He died Saturday with a bullet through his head. Yesterday, investigators turned to New York racketeers for an answer.

Having discarded clews that a Washington gang was responsible for Gaither's sudden death, police moved to New York to check reports that Gaither "worked" for big-city lottery operators.

It also was indicated that racket chiefs in Cleveland, Atlantic City and Philadelphia would be questioned. Far-reaching "numbers" activities, police say, had made Gaither a figure in the underworlds of a dozen cities.

But although, under the law, local authorities are handicapped in their effort to curb the "numbers" game, Lieut. George M. Little, chief of the vice squad, last night renewed his attacks on illicit gambling practices by raiding a reputed gambling establishment in the 1400 block of Irving street northwest.

Four men were arrested. A quantity of alleged "numbers" and racing slips were seized. The men were charged with permitting gaming. It remains to be seen whether this charge will hold in court.

It has been estimated that one out of every three persons in Washington plays the "numbers." And here is an argument in defense of the racket heard yesterday:

"Why all this beefing about the 'numbers' game? Let the police get after some of these hoodlums and gunmen who are running wild. Crack down on the big fellow, not the little one."

The speaker admitted he played the "numbers," and would continue to play them.

And here is the police answer:

"No matter how virtuous this person may feel, he is directly supporting the "hoodlum" and 'gangster" to whom he referred. Gambling is the greatest single cause of gun-toting, shootings and killings in Washington."

Board Suspends 27 Drivers' Licenses

The Revocations Board yesterday suspended 27 driving permits for periods of from 15 to 45 days after the owners were convicted of speeding.

Robert C. Gilmore, Olney, Md., lost his permit for 45 days for driving 45 miles an hour. It was his second offense.

Spring Array

Many Types of Blooms Dot Capital Parks.

The list of flowers and plants, both wild and cultivated, now blooming in the Capital's park system reads like the catalogue of a gardening supply house.

Included are the hepatica, bloodroot, spring beauty, ground pine and trailing arbutus. Magnolia is at its height, the best park exhibit being near the District of Columbia War Memorial in West Potomac Park.

The Japanese cherry trees in Meridian Hill Park are in full blossom and the pussy willow and weeping willow of East and West Potomac Parks are putting on their best show. The office of National Capital Parks also called attention to the forsythia exhibit in the Washington Monument grounds.

And, as a note of warning, the parks office reminded that shunk cabbage, which grows in odoriferousous profusion in Rock Creek Park, is now at its greatest strength.

D. C. Control Over School Is Suggested

Training Home Is Now Under Rule of Justice Department.

A proposal that administration of the National Training School for Boys on Bladensburg road be transferred from the Justice Department to the District government was made at recent hearings on the Justice Department appropriations bill, it was revealed in printed transcripts released yesterday.

Representative McMillan (Democrat), of South Carolina, made the suggestion, while Claude D. Jones, superintendent, was being questioned by the sub-committee.

Jones expressed the opinion that the transfer would be "detrimental to the opportunities that might be furnished the boys at this school."

"Why?" asked McMillan. "Here is an institution which, according to the facts in the record, has a great majority of the boys from the District of Columbia.

"It furthermore appears that the per capita cost of the institution to the District of Columbia does not equal the per capita cost of the institution per day. It therefore seems to me that with such a condition as that prevailing it would be the proper thing to have the District of Columbia government take over this institution and let it be directly controlled by the District of Columbia government."

Previous testimony showed that the District last year paid about $107,120.44 for care and maintenance of local boys out of a total appropriation of $185,000.

"They paid about half the cost and had about 70 per cent of the boys committed to the institution," observed Represenative Tarver (Democrat), of Georgia.

Jones stated, under questoning, however, that the per capita cost paid by the District compares favorably with the actual per capita cost.

He also explained that though the District was responsible for 70 per cent of the new commitments, actually only 59 per cent of the average population came from Washington.

"We furnish the United States boys with a suit of clothes and transportation and give them a gratuity," he added. "These items are not included in the per capita cost charged against the District of Columbia boys.

Cancer Cells Healthy, Carnegie Expert Says

Are New Types Derived From Normal Ones, Dr. Lewis Asserts.

The theory that cancer cells are exceptionally healthy and vigorous, rather than diseased, and that they are derived from normal cells because of external influences was advanced last night by Dr. Warren H. Lewis, of the Carnegie Institution.

Dr. Lewis, a staff member of the department of embryology, advanced his views in an illustrated lecture at the institution. For several years he has been studying the structure and behavior of normal and abnormal cells in animals and in man.

"Some authors," he said, "consider malignant cells as sick or diseased cells, but to me they seem to be extraordinarily healthy and vigorous. They pile up in the body without acquiring a proper blood supply and often die there in great numbers probably from the injurious effects of their own waste products and from lack of oxygen."

Growth of normal cells is controlled by the body in some unexplained manner, but malignant cells multiply with abandon, Dr. Lewis declared. The relative ease of producing malignant tumors artificially supports the theory such cells are new types, or species, transformed from the normal state by environmental influences or chemical treatment, he said.

Summing up the results of many years of work on rat tumors, the scientist asserted:

"Cancer cells are new types of cells derived from normal ones, which have been altered by environmental influences or agents of one sort or another. Many are visibly different and all are physiologically different from normal cells.

"They multiply and maintain their peculiar characteristics and their malignancy indefinitely, when cultivated in the body or outside the body in special media independently of the special environment, or agents which induced them.

"A sharp line of distinction can be drawn between the true tumors on the one hand and the bacterial and virus tumors on the other because the continued presence of the causative agents is probably necessary for the growth of the latter."

Beware, Ye Who Are Gullible— Day of Utter Nonsense Is Here

Beware, you Washingtonians who are gullible, for today is the day of fools—the day of utter nonsense, born back in the mists of time—and of spring ecstacy, which tolerates no serious-mindedness!

If you discover a pocketbook on the ground in front of you, don't stoop and reach for it, no matter how altruistic your reason. In all probability it will vanish, and someone who is pulling the string at the other end will laugh and shout:

"April fool!"

If you see a coin on the pavement, avoid picking it up. Probably some jester will have fastened it to the cement with glue.

And, if you are one of those early golfers, for whom the blustery winds have no terror, be careful the ball your patrner teed up for you is genuine. It may be made of soap.

She's Apt to Laugh.

If the little girl next door, toying with her pigtails and swinging her books, comes to see you and says something about there being a spot on your necktie, ignore her.

If you don't she's apt to laugh at your confusion and repeat the old jingle about how it's April fool, and you ought to wash your face and go to school.

In keeping with the rollicking spirit of the day, the telephone at the Zoo is expected to jangle throughout the day.

"Is Mr. Lion there?"

"May I speak to Mr. Fox?"

"Tell Mr. Wolf to come to the phone, please."

So if someone leaves a note on your desk today to call any of the above, forget it.

Origin of Day Vague.

The origin of April Fool's Day is vague. It originally was a festival. In India the rajahs observed the Feast of Huli, and sent lesser persons on foolish missions.

In France and Great Britain the custom is general. Ancient England ignored April Fool's Day, but about 1700, when politics became a topic for the common man to discuss without risk of losing his head, the people began to take up the day with a bang.

Capital Flood Dikes Money Is Restored

The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday restored an item of $571,000 for Washington levees in the flood control bill being revised for Congressional action before adjournment.

The item, which was in the omnibus rivers and harbors bill that passed the House last year, was eliminated by the Army engineers who made a report to the Senate committee.

War Department experts held that the levees would be unnecessary to protect the National Capital against future floods providing protective measures are taken further up the Potomac River as provided in the bill and their report.

Lift Parley Today Plans Rule Changes

Conference Prompted by Recent Death of Boy in Shaft.

Sufficiency of Existing Regulations Is in Dispute.

Revision of existing elevator regulations is to be begun at a conference called for today by Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner.

The meeting is the direct result of the recent death of a 14-year-old boy in an automatic elevator. The lad was caught between the outer and inner doors of the elevator and crushed to death when the elevator went upwards in response to a signal from an upper floor.

Dispute has arisen as to the sufficiency of existing regulations. Inspectors who approved installation of the elevator and have subsequently approved it in operation reported it conformed to regulations governing semi-automatic elevators. They described a semi-automatic elevator as one in which a person is required to open the doors.

The regulations were designed to require such a small space between the outer and inner doors of automatic elevators that one or both would be held open by the body of anyone attempting to enter or leave who might be caught between the doors.

Elevator inspectors, Capt. Hugh P. Oram, chief of inspection; Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector; representatives of elevator manufacturers and installation companies and Federal Government experts are to participate in the conference.

Col. Sultan said he would make no effort to place responsibility on any individual for their interpretation of the regulations as applied to the elevator in which the boy was killed. If the regulations are indefinite enough to permit a difference of opinion and application, in good health, by informed inspectors, they should be made more specific and clear, he said, adding that his job was "to prevent such an accident in the future."

$11,815 Is Raised In Church Drive

With $11,815 pledged and several gifts to be reported, the Washington Federation of Churches yesterday officially closed its financial campaign. The federation had set out to raise $13,600 to carry on its program another year.

Frank M. Liggett, campaign director, as the drive ended, cited several divisions and teams for obtaining the full quotas. These included the woman's division of which Mrs. W. G. Waldo was leader; the woman's council, of which Mrs. J. Claude Keiper was chairman; the church gifts committee, headed by J. A. Trader, and the following teams: No. 1, C. F. Connelly, captain; No. 7, Frank L. Smith; No. 11, Mrs. H. E. Eney; No. 13, Mrs. Zora C. Hamilton; No. 14, Mrs. H. B. Richardson, and No. 15, Mrs. E. M. Reese.

Citizens' Red Stand Praised by Blanton

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, author of the anti-red rider, yesterday placed his blessing upon the action of the Federation of Citizens Associations last Saturday night in proposing that public school children be taught the evils of communism.

He lauded the federation in an extension of remarks in the Congressional Record and inserted the resolution and committee report adopted by the organization. His action came after a conference with George E. Sullivan, who is the spokesman for the federation in anti-red activities.

"The time has come when we Democrats must weed all pinks and reds out of government," Blanton said. "I have lowered my visor. I have unsheathed my sword. I have entered the lists. I am at war to the finish against all communism and all subversive enemies of good government."

Government Bureaus Aid Flood Relief Ball

Sale of tickets opened yesterday in all Government departments and the District Building for a flood relief ball to be held at the Shoreham and Wardman Park Hotels tomorrow night.

Cabinet officers, members of Congress, Government officials and workers have been invited to attend. The ball is being sponsored by the welfare organizations of several departments. John D. Fox of the Farm Credit Administration is acting as chairman.

An active interest in plans for the ball is being taken by Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commandant of the Coast Guard. The Coast Guard rendered invaluable service during the recent floods.

"Robin Hood of El Dorado" Proves a Memorable Melodrama of Early California

By Nelson B. Bell.

"The Robin Hood of El Dorado" is the picture that "Rose of the Rancho" should have been—a colorful, fast-moving, hard-riding and realistic melodrama of the California of 1848, when the country's original land-owners were subjected to the constant depredations, rapine and violence of outlaw gringos.

The central figure in this picturesque drama of the open, which has been filmed in the grand manner by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is Joaquin Murrieta, an authentic character in California's early history, to whom have been added attributes of mind and heart that are as much derived from the legendary fictions concerning the man as from any reliable record of his actual activities.

It is in this role that Warner Baxter reverts to the sort of accented impersonation that first brought him to stellar eminence in "In Old Arizona," the first all-talking picture ever made out of doors, back in 1929. This reversion to type, so to speak, recalls that Baxter since has acquitted himself with no less glory in such contrasting film plays as "Forty-Second Street," "Stand Up and Cheer," "The King of Burlesque" and "The Prisoner of Shark Island."

Previewed by Critics.

In "The Robin Hood of El Dorado," the star is precisely what the title implies—a phantom of vengeance who preys upon the persecutors of his people and steals from the rich to provide for the poor. Yesterday afternoon's private preview of the picture, in the projection room of the Fox Film Exchange, strengthened the conviction that Warner Baxter is a better actor than he generally is given credit for being. With its thundering horsemen, gunplay and violence, "The Robin Hood of El Dorado" is a picture of such sweep and such overwhelming action—especially in the climacteric moments that immediately precede its final fadeout—as largely to obscure the worth of any single performance. Several, however, stand out, even above the play's tremendous turbulence.

In addition to Baxter's able portrayal of a role rather more sympathetic than any other in the film's gallery of principals, J. Carroll Naish contributes a surprisingly realistic character delineation in the role of "Three Fingered Jack," outlaw and desperado, who kills for gold rather than in defense of a principle. The casual spectator will find it difficult to recognize Mr. Naish in his amazing make-up, but easy to appreciate the effectiveness of his work.

Two Leading Women.

In the leading feminine roles, two comparative newcomers to the screen are shrewdly cast. One is Ann Loring, a new discovery of M-G-M's, one is led to believe, whose home is in Brooklyn; the other, Margo, the young woman who made her cinema debut in the Hecht-MacArthur production of "Crime and Passion" and this week is appearing opposite Burgess Meredith in Maxwell Anderson's grimly morbid drama of "Winterset," at the National Theater.

While these newcomers are proving their worth, several old-timers are demonstrating that the spark of their younger days still is alive. Among these are Frank Campeau, the original Trampas in the stage version of Owen Wister's "The Virginian," with the late Dustin Farnum; Soledad Jiminez, who again plays Baxter's mother, just as she did in "In Old Arizona;" Francis McDonald, Paul Hurst and several others who have been around for a long time now.

A detailed review of this subject will not appear in this space until after its Friday opening on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater. It may not be too much, however, to guarantee in advance that it will be found difficult to take a nap while "The Robin Hood of El Dorado" is unfolding its tempestuous action up there on that silver sheet.

Speaking of Margo, her interpretation of the role of Rosita in this "El Dorado" business makes it easy to believe that her first introduction to the public was as a dancer—a fact which her highly dramatic work in "Winterset" completely belies. One almost wonders if these two young actresses are the same.

And as long as "Winterset" has bobbed up again in these remarks, it might be said that Lee Baker, in the role of Judge Gaunt—the part created by Richard Bennett—in this Maxwell Anderson blank verse drama adds greatly to the effectiveness of the play by the simple bewilderment, anxiety and dignity of a member of the bench whose mind has been unseated by the worry of his most momentous case and judicial decision. Mr. Baker gives the part a fine reading. Incidentally he bears a sufficiently close resemblance to Edmund Breese, another admirable actor, to be his twin brother.

Public Service and Education.

On the letterhead of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of the District of Columbia, A. Julian Brylawski, president, under date of March 30, comes the announcement that Mrs. Ada S. Klock, 1522 Varnum street northwest, has been retained by the M. P. T. O. of D. C. in an advisory capacity in relation to public service and educational work by the theaters represented by the organization's membership.

Mrs. Klock will be the contact between the theaters and the various Washington organizations, educational groups, clubs and other agencies interested in the integrity of the screen as an active element in the Capital's community life. She will suggest to the managers the best types of neighborhood bookings, special Saturday activities and co-operative enterprises, and will advise the theaters in their participation in community affairs.

For many years Mrs. Klock has been affiliated with the Parent-Teacher Association here. Organizations interested in her plans, or those with suggestions of their own for theater co-operation in community affairs, may reach Mrs. Klock in the Earle Theater Building, room 1055, phone NA. 9632.

Mrs. Klock is taking up with the Motion Picture Theater Owners group the same work so successfully done by the late Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, serving in the same capacity, with the then Crandall Theaters in the Washington territory, almost 15 years ago.

Tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in the Arcade Theater, Hyattsville, Md., Sidney Lust will stage a grand finale to the juvenile amateur contests that have been held in recent months in his Arcade Theater, the Cameo Theater, Mount Rainier, Md., and Milo Theater, in Rockville. First prize winners in all of the recent contests will compete for silver loving cups and cash prizes. Art Brown, WOL "Rise and Shine" man, will be guest master of ceremonies for the occasion.

Included among those participating in the program will be Betty Callahan, acrobatic dancer, Takoma Park; Jack Brent, Irish tenor, Washington; Tommy Hier and His Harmonica Harmonizers, Washington; Preble Earle Donoho, "the boy Paderewski," Washington; Budy Carper, tap dancer; L. H. R. McGill, singer, University of Maryland; Cleo Homan, 275-pound tap dancer, Washington; Mary Adams, "little Miss Personality," Edmonston, Md.; Betty Lee, girl hillbilly, Washington, and Junior Crosson, Va.

In Drama and Music.

"Chatterton," the play which Julia Marlowe used as a curtain-raiser for a period of six years, will be presented by the Arts Club tomorrow evening, with Dorothy Lawrence in the title role. Edward C. Potter's elegiac overture, "Chatterbox," which was given its premiere by the National Symphony Orchestra on March 1, will be played in a piano arrangement.

The play was written for Miss Marlowe by the late Ernest Lacy, of Philadelphia and New York. It tells the tragic story of the English poet, Thomas Chatterton, who committed suicide at the age of 17. About this boy genius, 14 biographies have been written, one of them by Charles Edward Russell, of Washington, D. C.

This column wishes to acknowledge receipt of a handsome engraved invitation to the international preview of Gaumont British's "Things to Come," adapted from H. G. Wells monumental volume of "The Shape of Things to Come," in Wardman Park Theater, next Tuesday night, April 7. This is declared to be one of the most mammoth achievements in the history of the cinema and from such scene "stills" as have been made available to the press it may easily be judged to be exactly that. Since this, necessarily, is an imaginative story, the making of the picture was almost wholly a creative problem for Alexander Korda and his staff.

Fathers and Sons.

Reverting briefly to Sidney Lust, the Maj. Bowes of the Washington territory, he also is serving again as general chairman of the committee having in charge arrangements for the annual "Father and Son" banquet, to be held in the Mayflower Hotel on the night of Wednesday, April 29.

Having in mind the overwhelming success of last year's banquet, Mr. Lust is determined to make this year's even a more memorable occasion. Guests will be seated promptly at 7 o'clock and entertainment from then on will be practically continuous until 11.

For this annual get-together for fathers and their sons, under the auspices of the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, plans already formulated include the presentation of a considerable number of the amateurs promoted by Mr. Lust in his theatrical talent contests, the Detroit Tigers baseball team of the American League, the Washington American League team, wrestling cohtests, boxing bouts, motion pictures and the introduction of distinguished guests whose careers may offer examples worthy of emulation by the city's growing youth.

In addition to this elaborate and diversified entertainment, each boy in attendance will receive free theater tickets and tickets to Glen Echo Park, good when this popular resort is open for the summer season.

Between new and the night of April 29, it is expected that other items of interest will be added to the proposed program, announcement of which will be made in due course.

Make-Me-Boy-Again Note.

Please do not ask me to take your small son to this affair, for that will be impossible.

I am going as Sid Lust's!

Ye Ol' Maestro Waves 'Hello'

Yowsa, here comes Ben Bernie and "all the lads"—although only two of them are piping an accompanying roundelay for the ol' mousetrap in this picture—back to the Capital for a week on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater, beginning Friday. Grapevine reports have it that the gay and wisecracking Bernie this season has the best band act of his career. In addition to all of the old features some new ones have been taken on that are said to give the turn a variety and fillip that it has never before possessed—and it always was a swell act, at that.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the United States Navy Band Orchestra in the Sail Loft Tuesday night; Lieut. Charles Benter, conductor; Everett Gayhart, jr., guest soloist. Program: Overture, "In Springtime" (Goldmark), First Movement of Pianoforte Concerto No. 1 in C major (Beethoven), "Valse Fantastiue" (Vassilenko), "Islamey" (Balakirev), "Gralsrittersmarsch" (Wagner), Symphony in C major (Schubert).

If Master Everett Gayhart continues to possess the aplomb with which he made his first public appearance last evening, his musical career will not be beset by the trepidations that lie in wait for the nervous temperament. This 14-year-old pianist, the son of Commander and Mrs. Everett Gayhart, played the first movement of Beethoven's C major concerto with every evidence of assurance.

In his fleet performance there were no hesitancies nor any falterings of memory; his extremes came in sharp on the beat, and his attack had precision. His technique was clear cut, his phrasing accurate, and his rhythm excellently stressed. Judgment as to his tone quality will have to be reserved until one hears him using an instrument more colorful than the one assigned to him. This youth deserves watching, for his was a promising debut. A large audience seemed to be of this opinion, too, for he was given a very approbative reception.

Lieut. Bentert's program had a timely application to the vernal season in the joyous Goldmark overture and the romantic urgencies of Schubert's C major symphony. Schumann thought that its length was "heavenly" and there have been few to dissent from his enthusiastic adjective. Its weight of pure melodies, its emotional sincerity and its continued flow of optimistic sentiment give it enduring value. Moreover, it is so unmistakably Schubertian in every measure as to endear itself to every one who holds the composer in affection.

No one but Schubert could have expressed just the shade of tender melancholy that breathes in the principal theme of the second movement, with its peculiarly lovely lilt. The delightful scherzo in rapid waltz time is essentially Viennese and foreshadows the rhythmic enchantments of the Strauss family. The finale, which carries on the mood of gayety, sparkles with vivacity and twinkles with happy humor.

School's Pupils Ready to Mark Cherry Blooms

300 Children at Wheatley Will Present Pageant on Friday.

The blossoming of the cherry trees along the Tidal Basin this week-end will not go unrecognized by Washington's school children, despite the cancelation of the annual cherry blossom festival.

Friday afternoon 300 children of Wheatley School, with Japanese parasols, lanterns and ginrickshaws, will present a pageant symbolizing the meaning of the cherry blossom festival in Japan.

The pageant, to be directed by Florence Mortimer, teacher at the school, will be staged under joint auspices of the Community Center Department and National Capital Parks.

Already tinted with pink, the single-blossomed cherry trees are expected to burst into full bloom either Friday, Saturday or Sunday, depending on the weather the next few days. A slight frost predicted for today may delay the full blossoming of the tress until after the pageant.

The Japanese Embassy is being informed twice daily of the progress of the blooms by the Park Department. Ambassador Hirosi Saito plans to go up in an airplane and survey the trees as soon as they burst into full bloom.

Despite abandonment of the festival plans, the Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade expects as many visitors as usual in other years will be attracted to the Capital.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, March 30.

Edward G. Robinson and George E. Stone are playing a scene for the flicker "Bullets and Ballots." Robinson is portraying Johnny Broderick, the Broadway detective, but he looks the same as he did when he played "Little Caesar." Because of censors, the screen's famous gangsters are playing their roles wearing shields.

Director William Keighley is arranging a new setup. Robinson's stand-in takes his place, and Stone, who hasn't a stand-in, is about to work into the scene when he shouts to me: "Hey, you're my size. Why don't you stand in for me?" I have watched stand-ins and written about them, but I have never been one. I will try anything in the picture business if it'll make good copy, and if I can learn something from it.

I tell Stone that I will stand in for him. I take the place, designated by white chalk marks, in the hotel lobby, and stand next to Dick La Marr, stand-in for Robinson.

• • • •

Stone is playing the role of Wires, a confidence man. He is reading a newspaper in this scene. I hold the newspaper, and I note that the paper this confidence man is reading is the Journal of Commerce, Hal Mohr, who won the Academy Award for photography, is lighting the scene. I get only the best. I stand at attention. I chat a bit with La Marr, but there really isn't much that stand-ins have to say.

• • • •

It takes a long time to light a couple of players and a portion of a set. Anyway, it seems long when you're standing under the hot lights—and they ARE hot. Everyone about is talking and loafing. The electricians appear jolly placing the lights on you. Standing-in is when the understudy feels that he is the star, for it is then that he is really in the star's shoes. I assure you that I stood there much longer to have George E. Stone lighted properly than Stone stood there to play the scene. And after watching Stone play the scene, I felt that I could do it as well. I guess I'm a regular stand-in with all the "ham."

I stayed on the set and watched Robinson and Stone do the sequence. Robinson's stand-in also stood by. We both admired the "light and shadows," paying more attention to this than to the performances. After the "take" was okayed by Director Keighley, an electrician was discovered asleep on a rafter. They tell me I'm the only stand-in who caused an electrician to fall asleep while he was working.

The sequence in the flicker "Mary of Scotland," in which the judges sit and hear the evidence, is being filmed by Director John Ford. Special period costumes have been designed and purchased for the judges. They wear red velvet cloaks with fur collars, long worsted tights, and even special shoes. The scene is rehearsed several times. The judges sit at high desks, only the cloaks and fur collars exposed.

One of the judges says to Director Ford: "These worsted tights itch. Can we take them off—and the shoes?" Director Ford consents. When you see "Mary of Scotland," remember that the dignified judges are sitting without their trousers, protected by the high benches.

• • • •

Director Frank Capra has started work on his new flicker, "Lost Horizon," although his most recently completed picture, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," was only previewed last week. This is the fastest Director Capra has ever stepped from one picture to another. However, Capra started work on the screen play of "Lost Horizon" long before he did on "Mr. Deeds."

"Lost Horizon" is something different for Director Capra; with the making of this he deserts his familiar formula. It is a new Capra venture and he realizes it.

"Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" follows the pattern, and is in the spirit of "It Happened One Night," and I can tell you that I enjoyed "Mr. Deeds" more than I did the now famous "It Happened One Night."

Returning to the set of "Lost Horizon," the first sequence Director Capra is filming is the opening chapter of the book. Ronald Colman is playing the role of Conway, the man who got beyond the Lost Horizon . . . There are two vital changes in the scenario: The stranger Conway meets is now his brother, and the missionary lass is now a prostitute.

• • • •

On the set of the flicker "White Fang," which is an Alaskan village pitched under a tent at the Twentieth Century-Fox Studio, a number of dogs are attached to sleds, ready to pull them across the studio snow. The majority of the dogs are shy. They want to run away from the actors. Director David Butler tells Actors John Whalen and Slim Summerville to pet the dogs before scenes, so they'll become friendly.

I stand watching the scene being filmed with Gene Fowler, who wrote the scenario of "White Fang." After many "takes," we leave the set. We are walking down a street, away from the studio, when a stray dog barks viciously at Fowler. "See how word gets around that I wrote 'White Fang'?" asks Fowler. "Every dog resents me."

Manhattan Promenade.

Today, spring really has come to town. The sun sends down shafts of extravagant warmth, persuading the cliff-dwellers of New York to peel off the overcoats which have bowed down their scrawny shoulders since October. The parks are crowded with happy citizens, and at the Central Park Zoo some of them strain their necks for a better look at the tiny bear which is living there at the moment in an incubator. This is the time of year when the penthouse owners of New York rush to the seed stores, and hardware stores for hoes and rakes. Shortly, the penthouse dwellers will hang out their striped awnings and arrange the deck chairs, and invite their friends for roof dinners. Dust will blow into the consomme, and smoke from neighboring chimney stacks will discolor the lemon meringue pie, but the penthouse dwellers are hardy folk. April in Paris with "chestnuts in blossom and holiday tables under the trees" must be nice, but April any place is rather swell, too.

Dear Mr. Sullivan: You have no doubt, as a newspaperman, heard of the whirlwind campaign which I conduct each spring in the cause of temperance. In conjunction with my lectures, I have had on the stage with me what I called my "Object Lesson." He has sat on the stage with me, and I have pathetically pointed him out to the audiences as a horrible example of the ravages of drink. For years Clarence Fortescue has loyally supported me in this great work, but last spring poor Clarence passed on. So to get to the point of my letter: Several of your friends have referred me to you as being specially qualified to take poor Clarence's place. The position offers unusually good opportunities, and a substantial income. May I count on you for my spring tour?

Yours in the cause,
Brother Francis X. McCann.

Dear Ed: I'm going to import a lot of Broadway beauties for this Centennial show in Texas, and some of the old Casino de Paree babies are a cinch to wind up with millionaire cattlemen. Albert Johnson is startling the prairie people with some of the most amazing entertainment buildings these tired old eyes have ever gazed upon. One is a 3,000-seat outdoor theater-restaurant. It will have a 120-foot revolving stage that will come at the audience over 40 feet of water. John Murray Anderson, Will Morrissey and Ned Alvord will join me here as soon as they can get away. A drug store cowboy, whose face would hold a three-day rain, supplies me with the New York papers. Best, BILLY ROSE.

In answer to the remark in this column that whisky doesn't age, once it is glass-bottled, a reader sends me a treatise prepared by Peter Valaer and W. H. Frazier, at the Internal Revenue Laboratory . . . Their tests of whisky in glass bottles indicate that whisky DOES change, with a decrease in acids and an increase in color and in esters . . . Newly distilled whisky that stood four years in glass lost practically all of its slop taste and odor . . . Loss in acid content may be due to the free alkali extracted from the glass; it may be due to equilibrium changes or possibly oxidation changes . . . Am I mortified?

Nats' Fumbles Bring Reds 5-4 Win

Hill, Travis Undo Good Pitching by Linke; Attack Falters.

Griffs Outhit Foes, 8-6; Coppola Also Does Well on Mound.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 31.—Betraying the excellent pitching of Ed Linke and Henry Coppola with a pair of dismal errors, the Nats today interrupted their three-game winning streak and presented the Cincinnati Reds with a 5-4 victory.

The Nats outhit the Reds and outfumbled 'em. Out in left field, Jesse Hill permitted a single to scamper through his legs for two extra bases that led to the Reds' first run and at shortstop, Cecil Travis belied all the nice things the boys have been saying about him by heaving a wild throw into the right-field customers at a time when two Reds were in scoring position. Both scored.

Under those circumstances, the six-hit pitching of Linke and Coppola was about as useful to the Nats as a pain in the neck.

Nats No Menace at Bat.

But the Nats were no raging menace at the bat despite the fact that they outhit the Reds, 8-to-6. After they tied the score at 4-4 with a pair of runs in the fourth, their batting attack fell off to a whisper against the offerings of a pair of Red rookies, Gene Schott and Emmett Nelson.

In those last five innings, Schott and Nelson not only held the Nats scoreless, but limited 'em to two hits, a single by Travis in the sixth and a single by Lewis in the seventh.

It all began in a very deceiving manner. Jesse Hill smacked Schott's first pitch in the opening inning for three bases into left center-field and scored when Lewis grounded to second base. The Nats made it 2-0 in the second when Stone led off with a double to right-field and scored from third when Lew Riggs made a wild throw to the plate on Bolton's grounder.

With two out in the third, the Reds got a run back when Chapman singled to left and Hill converted Thevenow's single into a three-base blow that scored Chapman.

The Reds reared up again in the fourth to take a 4-3 lead. Linke had two out and two strikes on Campbell when he walked the batter to start the uprising. McQuinn singled to right and Myers singled to center to score Campbell. When Schott grounded tamely to Travis the rally appeared to be at an end, but Travis pitched the ball into the dirt past Kuhel and two more Cincinnati runs scored.

Back bounced the Nats with two runs to tie the score in their half of the inning. Stone beat out a perfect bunt and Kuhel singled to right. With two out, Linke scored 'em both with a long double to center.

That was the last productive Washington hit. Nelson, who relieved Schott in the eighth, turned the Nats back hitless, but the Reds wangled a run out of Coppola in the seventh to win the ball game.

It happened like this: Myers opened the inning with a walk and Schott sacrificed him to second. Chapman singled to right and that was sufficient, although on the next play Travis tossed in his second error of the day when he dropped a throw by Kress on an attempted force play.

Griffith Buys Catcher for $5,000

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 31.—The Washington ball club's frantic search for a catcher ended tonight with the purchase of Walter L. Millies from the Brooklyn Club at a price of $5,000.

Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats closed the deal for Millies with Manager Casey Stengel of the Dodgers by long distance telephone a few minutes before the Washington Club entrained tonight for the barnstorming trip north. Negotiations had been in progress for more than a week.

With Chattanooga, Millies sported a .324 average and, when Dee Miles was called to the Nats, remained as the team's leading hitter. He is a comparatively small catcher of the Muddy Ruel type, reported to be a hustler and possessor of a splendid throwing arm. His hits, unlike Cliff Bolton's, are of the sharp-single variety.

All National League clubs waived on Millies.

Millies, who will join the Nats at Macon, Ga., on Thursday, comes to the club at a time when the No. 1 catching post is now securely held by Cliff Bolton, who has found new favor in the eyes of Manager Bucky Harris as a result of his recent hitting spurt. Millies is regarded, however, as excellent protection for the club in case of injury to Bolton and if the latter lapses the new acquisition will be promoted to the regular post.

The acquisition of Millies raises to four the number of catchers now with the Nats. Both Sammy Hobrook and Bill Starr are expected to be given their releases on 24-hour option of recall. Holbrook is expected to rejoin the Chattanooga club which is handicapped by an injury to Catcher Jack Redmond, and Starr is slated to return to the Albany team. Starr, however, may be carred until the player limit of 23 goes into effect on May 15.

Promoters Offer $30,000 to Baer

Philadelphia, March 31 (AP).—Promoters Herman Taylor and Robert Gunnis today wired Max Baer, former world heavyweight champion, an offer of $30,000, with the privilege of 30 per cent of the gate, to fight Leroy Haynes, Negro heavyweight, here during the Democratic National Convention in June.

The offer hinges on a victory for Haynes, former Californian, who stopped Primo Carnera in three rounds recently, over George Godfrey in their bout April 13.

Bowie Race Track, April 1.

Dear Al:

Bill Bennings played hookey from school twice during his youth. The first time was to go up to the top of the Washington Monument—the only occasion that I ever arrived at that point. The second was to see the horses run at Bowie. As far as I can recollect, it was in 1914, but even so, I can close my eyes now and feel the sting of father Bennings' shoe. As I remember the trip, I climbed on a flat car attached to the "race special" on the W. B. & A. electric line. The racing fans swarmed the car like bees and we hardly had reached the District line before three crap games and several rounds of black jack were under way. My mental picture of the sport that day is a hazy one but it sort of made Bowie seem like home to me as far as racing is concerned. There's something about those pine trees on the hill along the backstretch and the little house at the stretch turn that mean more to me than the flamingoes at Hialeah or the mountains at Santa Anita. Give me Bowie, with a little mud on my shoes, and I'm happy. Brother Boyle, who does the managing at the Prince Georges course, has arranged a pretty fair opening-day program. I'll be seeing you down along the rail.

BILL.

First race—Bowie certainly didn't help the selectors to start the meeting with a winner. Here we are faced with maidens and fillies at that. In the absence of a true line on the first-time starters, I have to go to Trina and My Elsie off their Florida education. The former had none the best of it the day she was three lengths behind Maedic at Hialeah and I'm going to take my chances. Drowsy may take the show.

Second race—Lativich won two races from this kind in Florida and should go well in this field. Big Red won his last at Tropical with a gentleman rider in the saddle. Should make it a close race for the top one. Night Ray was tipped with every start down South and may awake here.

Third race—Dogmata is reported to be in form. The Vanderbilt horse likes the course and may step out to lead the way. Portden was fairly consistent in Florida and may catch the field needing a race. Red Badge was speedy in winter racing and must be respected. Lotofus and Gay Minetta have outside chances.

Fourth race—Bright and Early, despite the impost of 120 pounds, may run off with this short sprint. The Golden Broom colt has been working regularly and may be ready to win at the first asking. Torita, favored by the weights, may join Patsy Begone in a battle for the place award.

Fifth race—I'm going to climb far out on the limb in the feature race. Sailor Beware will carry the Bennings colors. The St. James colt, notorious as a sprinter, underwent a minor operation on his throat since his last race. I'm told that he is ready for a short race of this sort. Singing Wood has been burning up the Benning track with his trials, but that 128 pounds may be the breaks. Vanderbilt's pair of Good Harvest and Purple Knight are due respect.

Sixth race—Cachalot won two and was second twice in his last four starts in Florida. Seems capable of carrying top weight to a purse in this company. Round Table, hard to handle at the post, could take it all if sent away alertly. Hut likes the track and won her finale effort in California.

Seventh race—Silence III is a much improved horse over the one that trailed his fields at Bowie last fall. Despite the fact that he would prefer more distance, I'm forced to take him in this company. Saint Kitts is a possible surprise. Playmore to take care of the others.

Best Bet—Cachalot.

Vamarie First to Cross Yacht Race Finish Line

Havana, March 31 (AP).—The 72-foot ketch Vamarie, skippered by Vadim Makaroff, of Oyster Bay, N. Y., arrived here tonight at 10:54.04, thereby winning the "first-to-finish trophy of the seventh annual St. Petersburg-to-Havana yacht race.

The Vamarie, the scratch boat in class A of the fleet, made the journey in 82 hours 54 minutes and 4 seconds. The yachts left St. Petersburg at noon last Saturday and were retarded by failing or unfavorable winds throughout the 284-mile haul.

Phila. Stadium Gets Service Grid Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 31.—The Municipal Stadium in Philadelphia will furnish the setting for the Army-Navy football game next fall, it was announced today by officials of the Navy Athletic Association. November 28 will be the date.

The announcement followed a final conference with Commander John H. (Babe) Brown, graduate manager of athletics and director of football, had with stadium officials in Philadelphia today. Transfer of the game from Franklin Field, grounds of the University of Pennsylvania, scene of many gruelling service struggles, tentatively selected as the site, was not unexpected. Greater seating capacity was the big inducement in the decision.

The stadium will have seating accommodations for 100,000 fans, it is stated, compared to something over 78,000 at Franklin Field Stadium. Interest in the service battles has mounted from year to year, and they are always sellouts.

Last season's game was staged on Franklin Field and athletic officials of the rival academies were forced to turn down requests that would have assured an attendance well above 100,000.

$2,500 Race Is Lure for Sprinters

Opening Brings Sport Back to Eastern Section.

Track to Be Lightning Fast; 'Everything Is in Readiness.'

By Walter Haight.

THE money goes in the window, the horses go round and and some of the customers come out broke. It all starts today, folks, at Bowie and it's called the sport of the kings as the crowd gathers and, in some cases, something entirely different as the customers leave for home. But everything considered, it's an afternoon's outing and the majority is wont to refer to it as "enjoying a day at the races."

After four months of turf prohibition due to the winter, horse racing returns to the Eastern section at the Prince Georges track and to quote the plant's press agent, "everything is in readiness." The country's leading jockeys, many of the first-flight horses, a track that, barring rain, will be fast as Thirteenth street before they put in the traffic lights, and oodles of fresh money or cash that has not been sent through the mutuels hereabouts since last November.

Handicap Is Cut.

There is nothing particularly startling about the opening-day program but fair horseracing is expected to result. The top spot of the afternoon will be the Inaugural Handicap, a twice-clipped sprint. First, it was reduced in added money to $2,500 and then it was made a five-and-a-half-furlong race instead of a six-furlong contest.

But the Inaugural has drawn a field that promises to do much hoop-de-doing before a number is hung in the winning slot. Fifteen speedsters of various sizes and ages have been named overnight for the big event. About 12 are expected to follow the lead pony to the starting gate.

Chief interest in the race and not a little of the money to be wagered will be on Singing Wood, Mrs. John Hay Whitney's one-time Derby candidate. The Royal Minstrel colt has been working for a month at our own Benning track, which Maryland says will not open. Singing Wood, despite 128 pounds, is well liked by his handlers.

Vanderbilt Represented.

The Vanderbilt Stable, which dominated Maryland racing last year and then went on to lead the Nation in money won, is represented by Good Harvest and Purple Knight, reported to be ready to run. Bright Haven, Stubbs, Vote Boy arrived in good shape from Florida, while New Deal, from California, will be the hope of Walter O'Hara, who would build us a race track "if."

The remainder of the card is interesting. As usual, it opens with a maiden sprint for fillies of the 2-year-old variety. Two other dashes are listed besides the feature

2,500 Watch as A. A. U. Champions Run Up Score at Tech.

Eastern Team Defeats Government All-Stars in Opener, 35-19.

By Dave Herman.

BASKETBALL Goliaths who towered over their opponents like mountains over hills reached up and poured goals into the hoops with monotonous regularity last night at Tech High's gym, as the National A. A. U. champions, Globe Refiners, of McPherson, Kans., crushed Rinaldi Tailors, Washington's best, 57 to 35.

Some 2,500 basketball fanatics, including a number of celebrated Kansans, sat in on the proceedings, watched the mountainous Jayhawks drill out 26 field goals and 5 free throws and gallop through the Tailors' defense with comparative ease.

Height and experience were telling factors, height particularly. At one time the champions had a team on the floor that averaged 6 feet 7 in height, with such baskeball Carneras as Willard Schmidt, 6 feet 9, and Joe Fortenberry, 6 feet 8, putting on a real show to the ringing applause of spectators.

Fortenberry Scores 16 Points.

Fortenberry, All-American center for two straight seasons, lived up to his reputation. He scored 16 points, and was perhaps the most sensational of the invading Kansans. Not only did he blaze away at the hoops with bullet-like accuracy, but the giant center played a remarkable floor and passing game for such a lofty person.

Challenging and tying Fortenberry for top honors was the midget Rinaldi star, Bobby Lucas, who also scored 16 points, and received the biggest ovation of the night when he was withdrawn in the last few minutes of play. Lucas handled the ball expertly and gave fans many a thrill with his spectacular mid-court shooting. Six of his

Bonura Accepts Terms; Higgins Slams Three Home Runs

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, March 31.—Dizzy Dean, in his initial 1936 pitching effort, was pounded for 4 runs in four innings by the Albany (Ga.) club, but the St. Louis Cardinals scored 4 runs each in the fifth and sixth innings to win 11 to 5.

Francoline and Kratzter smashed home runs off Dizzy in the third. Mike Ryba replaced Dean in the fifth and limited the hard-hitting Georgians to 1 run in the remaining innings.

Chicago, March 31.—The Chicago White Sox infield, through necessity a "crazy quilt" pattern since Manager Dykes led his club to spring camp a month ago, "went 1935" today.

Big Zeke Bonura, first baseman, who had been holding out for $12,500 annually, accepted the terms of the club, which offered $8,500, Harry Grabiner, Sox vice president, said he expected Bonura, who has been working out at New Orleans, to report Wednesday or Thursday.

Bonura's capitulation takes a puzzling problem off Dyke's hands. The Sox manager has been using "Mule" Haas, an outfielder, at first, and recently has considered playing the bag himself and sending young Joe Morrissey, a rookie, to third. With Bonura signed, Dykes now will play the "hot corner," with the remainder of the inner defense the same as the club presented last season, Luke Appling at short and Tony Piet at second.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 31 (AP). The New York Yankees closed their Florida campaign today by losing to their farm club, the Newark Bears, of the International League, 7 to 2.

Kemp Wicker checked the Yanks with four hits and two runs in the first five innings and Marvin Duke shut them out with three safeties in the last four games. Charlie Ruffing made his first appearance of the season and was touched for five hits in the second and third innings to give Newark four runs.

Chicago, March 31 (AP).—Hack Wilson, one-time home-run hitting outfielder for the Chicago Cubs, was offered $5,000 today to play with the Chicago Mills semi-pro team this season.

William G. Harley, manager of the Mills Club, telegraphed the offer to Wilson at his home in Martinsburg, W. Va. Harley indicated he might increase the offer if it were not acceptable to Wilson.

Knoxville, Tenn., March 31.—Without Pinky Higgins, the Athletics would have been just another ball club to the Knoxville Smokies today. But the A's crack third baseman was on hand, and hammered out three homers to pace the Philadelphia American Leaguers to an 11 to 5 win.

"HAVANA" is a Magic Word . . .

"HAVANA" is a magic word in cigar smoking. But the magic of a fine cigar does not depend merely on Havana tobacco—far from it.

There is quality Havana—and there is poor Havana. Yes, and there can be too much Havana for mildness or satisfaction—or too little to affect the quality of a so-called bargain cigar.

El Producto uses the choicest Havana balanced with other fine (and equally costly) tobaccos to give a mild, distinctive and uncopyable blend that spells real enjoyment. It represents the thorough satisfaction that only quality can produce.

You may prove that for yourself—by stepping up to the nearest cigar counter and asking for El Producto in the size that suits your taste.

Eastern Draws Massachusetts Champs in Tournament

Bay Staters To Be First Title Foe

By John R. Vosburgh.

EASTERN HIGH'S confident basketball team received food for serious thought yesterday when it was notified that it had drawn the Massachusetts State high school champions from Brockton, Mass., as its first opponent in the seventeenth annual Eastern States championships at Glens Falls, N. Y., tomorrow.

The basket-shooters from the Bay State have the honor of taking the first crack at Eastern's title-holding champions. Whatever tendency toward overconfidence the Lincoln Parkers might have developed during their recent high-flying season had reason to be dissipated at the news.

"It might as well be Massachusetts as anybody," said the chief. "By golly, we don't care who 'tis. We're ready for 'em all."

Play at Nine-Thirty.

Eastern will tackle the Bay Staters in the third game of the tournament. The teams will take the floor at 9:30 tomorrow night. The schoolboy classic will open at 7 p. m. with White Plains (N. Y.) High, champions of the lower Hudson Valley, meeting Trenton (N. J.) High, New Jersey State champions.

The second game calls for LaSalle Academy, runner-up for the Catholic school championship of New York, to meet St. Mary's Academy of Glens Falls at 8:15 p. m. After the Eastern game, Brown Prep, of Philadelphia, prep school champions of Pennsylvania, will meet Massanutten Military School, of Woodstock, Va., Virginia's prep school title-holders.

Team to Leave Today.

Provided Eastern weathers the first sally at its title, it will meet either White Plains or Trenton Friday night. Eastern won the championship last year by defeating St. Francis School, of New York, Worcester (Mass.) High and Brown Prep. The closest battle was given by St. Francis, which finally succumbed by 1 point. After that, Eastern sailed through the semi-finals and finals in easy fashion.

Coach Guyon and his champs will leave for the scene of action at 4 p. m. today aboard the Congressional Limited from Union tSation. Assistant Principal Holmes will accompany the squad. The latter will be composed of Capt. Chick Holidge, Lavelle Dean, Buddy Shaner, Bill Buckholtz, Red Scheible, Chick Colley, Clint Quantrille and Alan Miller.

FREEMAN, outpaced for the first five furlongs, worked his way to the leaders nearing the homestretch, swung to the outside for the closing drive and finishing fast, was up in the last 20 yards. SCINTILLA, hard ridden to hold early command, shook off TUDOR QUEEN, saved ground, but faltered under punishment after being straightened into the homestretch. TORCH MAIDEN went in the first flight all the way and came gamely for the closing test.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700. For 2-year-old maidens. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:57. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, W. H. Gallagher's lt. b. c. (2), by Twink—Let Her Fly. Trained by J. L. Donovan. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:48.

SAY WHEN, racing with blinkers, broke quickly to move into an easy lead shortly after the start, was kept under pressure for the entire trip and held BISCAYNE BLUE safe under pressure. BISCAYNE BLUE raced stoutly while in nearest pursuit of the winner, but could not gain during the final drive. GLEAMING, shuffled back shortly after the start, swung to the outside after gaining her best stride and closed full of run.

BAIN MARIE followed INCOGNITO closely after getting away nicely, took command when straightened into the homestretch, then held on determinedly to withstand HURTLE. Latter, in tight quarters on the inside going into the turn, swung to the outside approaching the homestretch, responded to severe punishment and closed with good courage. He stumbled midway of the homestretch, but recovered quickly. INCOGNITO showed good speed for three furlongs then tired after saving ground.

Latter worked her way steadily on the outside in the last half mile, was placed to punishment when reaching the homestretch, but could not gain on the winner approaching the finish. DAME QUICKLY was hustled hard from the start, lost command when leaving the backstretch and tired gradually thereafter.

BOOTLESS, squeezed back going to the first turn, went to the outside when securing racing room, moved up strongly under punishment entering the homestretch, then closed gamely to get up in the last sixteenth. WAR GAMES followed SANDY BOY closely in the first seven furlongs, assumed a slight lead at the stretch turn, saved ground and held on gamely. MAXINE F., messed about in the early racing while racing on the inside, swung around her field when reaching the homestretch and closed fastest of all.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALMARINE, $6.50, $3.70, $2.70; STEALTH, $2.70, $2.20; LARO KEYS $3.80.

ALMARINE, following in close pursuit of the leaders, took command midway of the final turn, was strongly handled in the final drive and outstayed STEALTH. Latter, rated off the pace for the first six furlongs, swung to the outside when making his run, closed gamely, but was unable to make up any ground in the stretch drive. LARO KEYS bettered his position gamely in the last half mile and was going willingly at the close.

CHIRAC, outpaced for the first half mile, saved ground when approaching the leaders nearing the homestretch, came strongly in the final drive and was up in the last few strides. JOHNNY BANE broke swiftly, raced TOANO into submission and held on courageously when the real test came. TOANO raced in her best form, forced a fast pace and continued gamely after saving ground throughout.

Wood Pitches, Bats Maryland to Victory Over Cornell Nine, 8-6

Maryland Ace Gives Up 9 Safeties

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THROWING a hook as wide as a dub golfer's drive and wielding a bat seemingly as broad as a canoe paddle and potent as an artillery field piece, George Wood pitched and batted the University of Maryland nine to an 8-to-6 victory over Cornell yesterday at College Park in the first of a two-game series.

It was the second straight victory for Wood and Maryland, and the Terps' third consecutive victory over Cornell, which lost both games of the series last spring. The tedious task of subduing the Ithacans was begun before a chilled throng of about 1,000 fans and completed at dusk with but few of the faithful still in attendance.

A grand total of nine hits ricocheted off Cornell's Louisville sluggers, but they usually were well spaced by sagacious Wood and at no stage of the proceedings was he in any immediate danger of being clubbed off the mound. The only danger George was exposed to appeared to be a frozen arm, for the two innings when Maryland gathered up its winning runs were long, drawn-out affairs, sufficiently long to remove all of the steam from a pitcher's arm.

Wood Clinches Game.

Wood clinched the game and individual laurels for the afternoon in the sixth inning when he strode to the pan with the bases fully populated and Cornell precariously close to their hosts. He looked over a couple of Dan Lindheimer's offerings before picking out the one he patted into rightfield for a double that removed all Marylanders from the pathways.

Cornell rallied in the seventh and eighth innings, scoring a total of three runs as Wood eased up, but whatever hopes the little Big Reds had of tying the score departed promptly when he bore down on the last two men in the ninth and retired them in order.

Lindheimer, who gave way to Lozier at the beginning of the eighth inning, was wild and unsteady in the second and sixth innings, and this erratic streak, coupled with timely hitting of the opposition, proved to be his undoing.

Willis to Pitch Today.

Cornell picked up a run in the third and another in the fourth after Maryland had assumed a 3-0 lead, and tied it up in the fifth on hits by Schaehrer and Lindheimer. Schaehrer, shortstop, made the prettiest play of the game, going far and deep to his right to scoop up McCarthy's grounder, but was unable to make a play on it and it went for a hit.

Vic Willis will pitch for Maryland today, while Cornell's mound chores probably will be attended to by Bob Baker, a rookie. The game will start at 4 o'clock.

Ace Rookie, Paralyzed, Cheered by Wirephoto

The picture was sent personally yesterday to Joe by the Associated Press Wirephoto system. It helps the husky 190-pounder while away the time as he tries to figure out the mysterious paralysis of his right leg. Doctors at Johns Hopkins, in Baltimore, say his chances of playing baseball again are "1,000 to 1."

While Joe was trying out with Detroit at Lakeland, in Florida, the Associated Press photographed him as one of the most promising rookies. Only fond memories of the past remain for Joe, and that picture represents most of them. So he wrote the Associated Press in New York asking for it.

"All I have to show I was with the Tigers," he wrote, "is that picture."

Swiftly the news service threw its magic picture apparatus into action. The Wirephoto system shortly had Joe in possession of his picture. The best Joe can do at the present time is hobble around with a cane and do such odd jobs as may help the friends who are caring for him at an F street rooming place two blocks from the White House.

The youth, a former fullback for G. W., was induced to go South with the Tigers by the club's scouting staff. Detroit representatives had seen him playing with a Racine, Wis., club and their expectations were borne out at Lakewood.

Vandenberg proved a hard-hitting, fast-traveling outfielder, one of the likeliest looking rookie, with a powerful arm and a good measure of heft in his frame. Then, about two weeks ago, fate interfered. "Without any warning," he says, his right leg collapsed and he hasn't been able to rest his weight on it since.

Something is wrong with the nerve center of the thigh. His leg hasn't much feeling to it, he explains. Meanwhile, the specialists at Johns Hopkins are baffled in an attempt to diagnose the trouble.

Joe was in Washington about four years ago on a scholarship to George Washington and played football one year with such stars as ZuZu Stewart and Walter Slaird. Since then he has been playing ball in Wisconsin.

"They were mighty nice to me," Joe says of the Detroit Club. "They made sure I had money enough to get North and get located. Mickey Cochrane was mighty fine about it."

Cruickshank Shoots a 29 For 9 Holes

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 31.—Bobby Cruickshank, the little Scot whose bid for National Open championship honors was balked 13 years ago by Bob Jones, signalized his visit to his Georgia rival's home grounds today by taking the first nine holes to the Augusta National course apart.

Practicing for the third annual $5,000 invitation tournament, starting here Thursday, the Richmond, Va., professional toured the outgoing half of the Jones-designed layout in exactly 29 strokes. With birdies on all but the fourth and seventh, Cruickshank was 7 under par as he clipped a shot off the former practice record. Bobby had only 12 putts, using a Jerry Travers model of the famous Schenectady club. He put together a card that looked like this compared with par:

Par, out ..... 4 5 4 3 4 3 5 4 5—36
Cruickshank .... 3 4 3 3 3 2 4 4 3—29

Cruickshank did not complete his round in an attempt to lower Jones' practice record of 64 for the course. He played the full route this afternoon, however, and "cooled off" so rapidly that he had to get a birdie 3 on the eighteenth, his only subpar hole of the round, to post an even 72.

Jones, registering his fourth successive sub-par round in the hottest weather so far, had to do some scrambling on the last nine to register 36-34—70, 2 under par. He was in the ditch twice on No. 13, escaping with a 6, but had birdies on the eleventh and twelfth, and dropped a 15-foot putt for an eagle 3 on No. 15.

Van Ryn Victor In Houston Net Play

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 31.—John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, Davis Cup doubles player, and Henry Culley, of Santa Barbara, Calif., overcame surprisingly stiff opposition by a pair of University of Texas youths to advance to the third round of the annual River Oaks Tennis Tournament today.

Van Ryn came closest to defeat as Bob Kamrath refused to quit after a love set loss and squared the match. The score was 6—0, 3—6, 6—2.

Culley vanquished Gordon Pease in straight sets, 7—5, 8—6, but had to come from behind in each.

Other seeded stars had less trouble. Bryan (Bitsy) Grant functioned smoothly as he trounced Louis Thalheimer, Dallas veteran, 6—0, 6—2. Arthur Hendrix, the giant killer from Lakeland, Fla., eliminated James Andrews, of Randolph Field, San Antonio, 6—1, 7—5. Kalle Schroder, colorful Swedish star, downed Will Caswell, of Austin, father-in-law of Wilmer Allison, 6—1, 6—3. Wilbur Hess, of Houston, national intercollegiate champion, scored a 6—0, 6—2 triumph over Fred Royer, of Dallas.

Rinaldi Bows To Refiners By 57-35

2,500 Watch as A. A. U. Champions Score; Eastern Wins.

Only one of the nine McPherson champions failed to score. Coach Gene Johnson substituted frequently and one was as good as the other. Vernon Vaughn, dead-eye forward, scored 11 points, and Tex Gibbons, all-American guard, 10.

Eastern Wins Easily.

Carroll Shore and Ollie Tipton, Rinaldi guards, got in a couple of hot shots that were greeted with a burst of cheers.

The Kansans rolled into an 8-to-0 lead before Rinaldi broke the ice. With 12 minutes gone, Rinaldi had advanced to 10 to 12. That was the closest the Washingtonians came.

Then the champions opened the throttle wide and raced ahead, 29 to 13, at half-time.

The pre-game ceremonies were impressive. Representative Jack Houston, of Newton, Kans., Fifth Congressional District, tossed up the first ball and made the welcoming address. Also present were Senator George McGill and Representative Bill Lambertson, of Kansas.

In the preliminary, Eastern High played rings around an all-star Government team, winning easily, 35 to 19. Lavalle Dean, in top form, scored 14 points, to pace the District champions. The passing and shooting of Eastern amazed the entire McPherson team.

Congressman Tosses Up Ball

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 31.

WITH plenty of seats for the opening game still on sale at Griffith Stadium, Mr. Clark Griffith very naturally is announcing to the Washington public that his pitching staff is not half bad. In fact, Mr. Griffith is very anxious to let it be known that he is beginning to think very highly of his pitching staff.

POVICH.

To any who will listen, Mr. Griffith paints a pretty picture of his pitching and he is rather convincing about it, too, despite the fact that anybody who attempts to deal kindly with the Washington pitching is supposed to have two strikes against him.

"Get out a pencil and paper and I'll show you what I mean," Mr. Griffith remarked to this department today, whereupon, more out of curiosity than in faith, I produced the necessary adjuncts to Griff's argument.

"All right, put down the names of those pitchers we started last season with," Griff commanded. "Now, who have you got there—Whitehill, Linke, Stewart, Burke, Weaver and Russell. They were a lot of tripe.

"How could any ball team win with a crew like that. We were licked before we started the season, but we didn't know it. But we've cut away a lot of that deadwood. Now put down the pitchers that we're gonna start the season with next month.

"That's a different line-up—Newsom, Whitehill, Linke De Shong, Appleton, Russell and Coppola. I'm not counting Weaver. Monte doesn't look as if he can make it. But we didn't have Newsom at the start of last season and he's the best pitcher on the club. Whitehill and Linke showed us they could win if they had the proper rest, and De Shong should fit in there. If Appleton can't win in this league, I don't know a pitcher from a bleacher seat. And you can believe it or not, but I like Jack Russell.

"There's a fellow who can pitch winning ball for us. He's a different pitcher this year. He was always too pretty out there on the mound with too much form and not enough windup."

If I remember rightly, Mr. Griffith unburdened himself in like manner at this time last year. That was when he was saying that Bobby Burke had finally arrived; that Monte Weaver had just begun to recover his true form; that Walter Stewart was still a good pitcher, and that Jack Russell was due for a good season because he had lengthened his windup.

It's easy to discount the optimism of Mr. Griffith, who is vitally concerned with the manner in which the turnstiles rotate at his Griffith Stadium lot, but it is not easy to blame him. He actually believes what he says. Thirty years in training camps have failed to make him callous. He's still, innately, a fan, not only eager to believe in his ball club but eager to accept as the dawn of a new era any good performance by one of his bums, temporary though it may be.

In Short—

The Nats' return to Orlando next winter was assured today, following a conference between Griffith and John Ganzel, chamber of commerce official who offered the club the same $3,500 guarantee it received this season . . . The Washington club entrained tonight for a three-game tour through Georgia with the Cincinnati Reds . . . with a place called Cordele to be the first stop tomorrow . . . Manager Bucky Harris has soured almost completely on Dick Lanahan, the Washington youth who appeared to be an excellent pitching prospect . . . Lanahan's wildness, coupled with his failure to observe strictly the training camp rules, presage his release to the minors unless he shows a startling reversal of form . . . Buddy Myer, whose countenance always resembled that of a very un-clever prize fighter, now looks for all the world like a miniature Joe Grimm . . . as a result of being struck on the face by a ground ball, Myer's nose is spread all over his physiognomy and his swollen lip is crying for room to expand.

G. U. Golfers Play Villanova Saturday

Georgetown University's golf schedule was increased by one match last night when Hilltop athletic authorities announced that the links patrol from Villanova will oppose the Hoyas Saturday at 2:30 o'clock, probably at Congressional. Williams is scheduled to play the Hilltoppers Friday in the opening skirmish of the season.

Robert to Meet Bisignano At Arena

Contest Feature of Mat Card Tomorrow; 4 Other Bouts.

By George Considine.

YVON ROBERT and Alphonse Bisignano, the gents slated to indulge in the rassle show feature tomorrow night at the Turner Arena, might well be arguing for the second ranking position in the world of wrangle.

The second ranking position in the world of wrangle is not a position to be sneered at, what with the first ranking position in its present chaotic state. Judging from the large number of disputants for the world championship, it would seem that the only place a workman can command any attention is in the second spot.

A couple of months ago one Ernie Dusek was the undisputed second man, but all that is changed now. Yvon first made his bid for runner-up dishonors when he licked Champion Danno O'Mahoney in that impromptu affair in Holyoke, Mass. Then he followed up with victories over Ernie Dusek, Jumping Joe Savoldi, Kansas City Joe Cox and George Zaharias.

Meantime Alphonse was having himself a time out in the Middle West. He was beating all the Dusek boys consistently and was also outgrunting Savoldi, Cox and Zaharias, the boys who dispute the third-ranking position. So the rassling industry's puppet masters decided to thrash the thing out once and for all.

It thus falls to the hapless fates of Messrs. Robert and Bisignano to commit the first world-championship-once-removed battle on record. One thing is certain, however. It won't be the last, foshding it.

All customers within 20 feet of the mat are requested to wear football uniforms while witnessing the semifinal bout involving Bad George Lenihan and Worse George Koverly. That match is for the world's nasty-man championship.

In the other distractions, Sure Mike Mazurki struts with Jim Coffield, Hot Tom Alley works with Amerous Al Laross and Jim Wilhis takes on one Abe Goldberg.

Sarron May Train Here For Freddy Miller Bout

The first gun in the training campaign for the Pete Sarron-Freddy Miller featherweight championship bout, to be held here May 11, was fired yesterday as Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager, arrived in Washington to select a training site and start rounding up sparmates.

"I want very much to train Sarron in Washington for this bout," Erwin said. "But, that all depends on what kind of a training site we can find and how successful we are in rounding up sparring partners. If we cannot find a suitable training site or get enough southpaw sparmates here, we shall be forced to make our headquarters in New York."

Ouimet Is Upset In Pinehurst Golf Play

N. C. Schoolboy Defeats Veteran in Amateur Tournament.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 31.—Bobby Dunkelberger, 16-year-old High Point, N. C., schoolboy, upset Francis Ouimet, of Boston, in the first round today of the North and South Amateur Golf Tournament, defeating the former national Amateur and Open titleholder, 1 up.

Dunkelberger barely slipped into the tournament via the playoff route, but played fine golf to oust Ouimet, who was playing in his first tournament of the year after having had little opportunity for golf the past winter.

Page Hufty, of Chevy Chase Club of Washington, scored another major surprise when he topped Johnny Johnson, of Lumberson, N. C., 1 up. The Carolina druggist was the sensation of last year's tournament. He won his way to the finals and carried George T. Dunlap, jr., to the final green. Both men played steady, par-touching golf.

The other entrant from the National Capital, R. P. Davidson, of Chevy Chase, was outclassed by J. O. Levinson, of New York, 4 and 3.

Dunlap, defending champion, downed W. P. Budd, jr., of Durham, N. C., 6 and 4, but Sam Friedman, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., co-medalist with Dunlap, was defeated by W. E. Stockhausen, of New York, 3 and 1.

Indian Spring Golf Club Is Busy Regaining Former Prowess as Membership Jumps to 300

By Dave Herman.

ONCE a power in golf circles, Indian Spring Golf Club faces the task of developing some new stars, now that three of its best players have left the club.

Gone are Roger Peacock, District champion, who had no equal at the club; Levi Yoder, the transplanted North Carolinian, who made his presence felt in big championships here, and Craig McKee, lanky Iowan and former club champion.

It is the peirod of activity at Indian Spring these days. Indian Spring Country Club is no more. But members have won the club back. They have elected a board of governors, and you can look for things to hum. Tom Belshe is a real golf chairman with lots of ideas.

The membership has jumped to 300.

Louis Fuchs long has been a threat in tournaments hereabouts. John Holzberg, former club champion; Dick and Frank Kruezberg, Leroy Sasscer and Elliott Spicer are the seasoned players who are well known in the District.

George Diffenbaugh, veteran professional, has some young ones coming along nicely at the course. Bobby Brownell, 17, 1934 District champion, played his golf at Manor last year, but Diffenbaugh, who first tutored him, claims Bobby will be chucking 'em around Indian Spring this season. Brownell is the ace of the junior prospects.

Red-haired Bob Pettingal is young and needs experience, and Elwood Berkley, Western golfer, needs seasoning, too.

Diffenbaugh has been with the club ten years. A smart teacher, he is the District Open champion.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, Middle Atlantic and Maryland champion, is an Indian Springer. She is due for another brilliant season. Mrs. Alma Von Steiner, who is club treasurer, is an outstanding low handicap golfer.

Recently Betty Keeler, 19-year-old former District municipal champion, joined the club. This 95-pound miss can make a ball go a long ways. And she's quite a putter.

J. T. Meighan Suspended By N. Y. Exchange

His Firm is Accused of 'Reckless and Unbusinesslike Dealing.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 31.—The New York Stock Exchange today suspended the membership of Jerome T. Meighan, of Walter P. McCaffray & Co., for three years under charges of "reckless and unbusinesslike dealing."

Action by the governing committees of the exchange was based upon an order of Supreme Court Justice William Harmon Black temporarily enjoining the firm from dealing in securities.

The order handed down yesterday also included the German-American Securities Co., Inc., and followed an investigation by New York State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr.

In an affidavit, Assistant Attorney General Martin P. O'Leary declared the German-American firm was in financial difficulties last August and was aided by an advance of $100,574 by the stock exchange house. It was further stated that as a result of the transaction, 70 customers of the German-American Co. are out securities valued at $40,000, which they had placed with the company for safe keeping.

Twenty minutes after the opening gong of the stock exchange started trading, E. H. H. Simmons, vice president, from the rostrum in announcing the suspension said in part:

Firm Is Accused.

"The substance of the charge and specifications was that Jerome T. Meighan had been guilty of conduct or proceeding inconsistent with just and equitable principles of trade in that his firm of Walter P. McCaffray & Co. engaged in reckless and unbusiness-like dealings and had made improper use of customers' securities by pledging more of said securities than was fair and reasonable in view of the indebtedness of said customers to said firm."

It was learned at the exchange that the business conduct committee of the exchange in its investigation of the case found that Meighan had no guilty knowledge of the acts of his partners and that when he learned of the questionable transactions several weeks ago he immediately notified the business conduct committee.

The suspension is the first since October of 1933, when a specialist of the exchange was dropped for violation of the constitution.

McCaffray & Co. also retired as a member of the Stock Clearing Association, and open exchange contracts will be assumed by Rhoades & Co.

Plane Buying ByGovernment Up 55 Per Cent

Defeat Looms for 10 Per Cent Profit Limit on Army Business.

New York, March 31.—The prospect is for sizeably larger Government aircraft buying during the fiscal year during July 1. Allocations for Army plane purchases are indicated at around $45,000,000, up $16,000,000, or 55 per cent, as compared with the 1934-35 year. The Navy is scheduled to get around $40,000,000, an increaseof $14,000,000 or 54 per cent. Also, the chance is improving that the proposal to put a 10 per cent limit on profits from Army business, the maximum allowed on Navy orders, will not get through to enactment, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York.

The House approved the restriction, but the Senate threw it out and, without a record vote, refused to reconsider its elimination. No one knows, or at least no one will say, how much difference a 10 per cent limitation would make to a company like Douglas or United, and while it is likely that the manufacturers would fare considerably better under such a restriction than they would have one believe, there is not much question but that their profits will be bigger without it.

Meantime, the outlook for foreign and domestic commercial demand remains generally favorable, particularly in the engine field. Replacement of commercial engines is expected to run well ahead of 1935, and while sales of commercial planes may fall short of year-earlier levels during the next few months, a lot can happen between now and December 31.

Sears Proposing Issue of 200,000

Chicago, March 31 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co. announced today stockholders will be asked on April 27 to authorize the increase of the number of no-par stock shares of the company by 200,000, the additional shares to be offered to employes.

The new shares, if authorized, will increase the capital stock to 5,200,000 shares, and will be offered for sale at $45 a share at the discretion of the directors. Sears stock was quoted at 66⅝ on the New York exchange today.

Sales during the second period of 1936—February 27 to March 26, inclusive—were $33,965,053, an increase of 17.1 per cent, or $4,957,067 over the same dates in 1935, the company reported. Cumulative sales since January 30 were $59,506,878, up 14.1 per cent, or $7,351,826, compared with the same dates last year.

Due to leap year, the report said, 1936 sales were made on an additional day as compared with 1933.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks Firmer in Active Trading; Motors Lead; Wheat Drops; Bonds Dull.

New York, March 31.—Stock prices were firm today in slightly better volume. Fair gains were made in steels, rails, motors, mail orders and metals, without special stimulus in the news. Wheat lost 1 to 2 cents a bushel on predictions of moisture in the drought areas, while sugar futures reached new highs for the past eight years before reacting moderately. Cotton also was higher. Bonds were mixed and dull.

Favorites among the railroad shares were Santa Fe, New York Central and Southern Pacific, while Union Pacific dipped more than a point.

Chrysler, General Motors and Hudson were leaders of the market, with grains of a point or more. Low-priced motors improved fractionally.

United States Steel, Bethlehem and Republic averaged about a point higher. Mail order shares had similar rises. Rubbers, foods and chemicals were up fractionally and utilities were mixed.

Atlantic Refining rose more than a point to new high ground. Panhandle Producers preferred added more than 5 points.

Features in the losing column were Checker Cab, which broke more than 5 points on comparatively light volume, and losses of 1 to 3 points in Johns-Mansville and a number of preferred stocks, including American Locomotive, Armour prior preferred, E. G. Budd, Colorado Fuel, Electric Power & Light and Pere Marquette prior.

Specialties with gains of 1 to 4 points included Case, Eastman Kodak, Midland Steel Products, Underwood, United States Industrial Alcohol and Western Union.

Foreign Exchange.

Last November the Bank of France supported the franc at a price around 6.58 and now is willing to have the franc supported there again by the release of gold. Apparently, banks in Paris have been given informally to understand that the French central bank would prefer not to see gold withdrawn unless French francs sell around 6.58¾, for no business is being done in gold at prices around 6.59 cents, at which there is a small profit. Foreign exchange firms are rather pleased to have such an arrangement, however informal, for in effect it means that nobody will send gold from France until the profit margin is much greater.

For a central bank to express a desire is tantamount to an actual ruling by the bank, for the possible consequences of disfavor are too great for any French bank, or branch of a foreign bank in Paris, to risk. It may be argued that France is not as firmly on a gold basis as it was before, but, since the Bank of France is still legally obligated to sell gold at a fixed price, and is merely desirous of having gold shipments take place at a slightly lower valuation for francs, the situation has not changed materially. Nor is such action without precedent. Francs were firm today at or just under 6.59. The British equalization fund continued to support the franc by purchases of francs, the francs being used to earmark gold.

Bank Condition.

Figures for the reporting member banks in 101 leading cities in the week ended March 25 were heavily weighted by changes in the condition of New York city reporting banks. Reserves dropped $40,000,000 in New York City and $81,000,000 in the country as a whole, reflecting belated income tax payments. Deposits of domestic banks were down $124,000,000, of which $85,000,000 was lost by the New York City banks. Demand deposits adjusted were down $24,000,000 for the country as a whole, but increased $38,000,000 in New York.

For all the reporting banks, portfolio of government direct obligations went down $5,000,000, although New York banks added $13,000,000 to their holdings. Holdings of Government guaranteed issues increased $7,000,000, but in New York the rise was $13,000,000. The gain in other securities, $18,000,000, was produced by a rise of $20,000,000 in this item in New York. Aggregate changes during the week in loan figures were moderate.

Italian Gold.

London reported that the Bank of Italy in its annual report for the year ended December 31 disclosed gold holdings of 3,027,000,000 lire compared with 3,963,000,000 lire in gold held at the time weekly reports of the bank were halted October 20 last. The loss of gold in the two months, about 84,000,000, had been foreshadowed by recent figures which showed that France and Switzerland in the four months ended January 31 had gained $187,000,000 Italian gold. Some of this metal, of which $170,000,000 went to France, undoubtedly was deducted from Bank of Italy reserves before the weekly statements were suppressed.

Recovery.

Those who doubt that the financial condition of the railroads is improving need only to read the Interstate Commerce Commission's order authorizing the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific to acquire 12 miles of line from the Minneapolis & St. Louis for $1, "No new financing will be required," the commission states. The buyers also may elect to take certain branch or terminal property at net salvage value.

Discipline.

The Stock Exchange suspension today marred the outward appearance of perfection in conduct for the first time since before the battle over the securities exchange act, if the pending action by the SEC against two members be excepted. Apparently for effect, the exchange has disciplined in secret instead of spanking in public, since late 1933. Today's suspension followed an injunction obtained yesterday by the State attorney general. The case first came to the exchange's notice one morning about three weeks ago. The same afternoon the SEC heard about the same affair. The next morning the Stock Exchange reported the matter to the SEC, and from there the legal action was carried on by the State attorney general.

Baby Bonds.

The Treasury daily statement for March 27 shows United States savings bonds issue this month totaled $45,376,000, which would make the aggregate now outstanding something over $200,000,000. Small corporations have been reported buyers of the bonds for temporary employment of idle money. Corporations may buy them, but in amounts not greater than $10,000 in any one year.

New Crop Receipts Break Wheat Price

Chicago, March 31 (AP).—Smashing of season low-price records of new crop deliveries of wheat resulted today from almost 3 cents a bushel market collapse. Apparent ending of drought that in the Southwest and West has been imperiling domestic wheat crops led to heavy selling pressure from speculative sources.

Wheat in Chicago closed weak, 1⅞ to 2¾ cents under yesterday's finish; May, 95½ to 95⅝; July, 85¼ to 85⅝. Corn, ⅛ to 1⅛ down, May, 60 to 60½. Oats, ⅜ to ½ off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 15 cents.

Welding Research Plan Covers Broad Field

New York, March 31.—Plans to expand its organization for the advancement of welding research, declared to affect an enormous number of industrial activities, including the construction of streamline trains, airplanes, huge dynamos and steel buildings, as well as modern naval armament, were announced today by the welding research committee of the Engineering Foundation, of which Prof. Comfort A. Adams, of Harvard University, is chairman.

Under the direction of Col. C. F. Jenks, commanding officer of the Watertown, Mass., arsenal, a new industrial subcommittee to co-ordinate industrial welding research in this country has been formed. Sixty investigations are under way in universities alone.

Allegheny Steel Plant at Capacity

Pittsburgh, March 31.—Capacity steel production is being scheduled by Allegheny Steel Co. at its Brackenridge, Pa., plant. It is already operating six open hearth furnaces, compared with four furnaces in operation a week ago, and in addition recently placed seven electric furnaces in operation.

The sheet mills, which were untouched by the flood waters at any time, are also going on at capacity this week, W. F. Detwiler, executive vice president, stated.

Pacts Affect 32% of U. S. Foreign Trade

New York, March 31.—Reciprocity trade agreements already concluded affect 32 per cent of our total foreign commerce and this figure will be increased to 41 per cent when agreements now under negotiation are completed, states the Index, of the New York Trust Co., in its issue published today. Total trade with the ten nations in the first category amounted to $1,357,788,000 in 1935, and with the eight countries with which negotiations are in progress it totaled $394,226,000.

"A basic principle in the agreements," the Index says, "is the provision that all concessions granted other countries will be on a most-favored-nation basis; that is, similar concessions will be extended to like products imported from other countries, and consequently the benefits of the treaties actually concluded will be widely extended. The only exception to this is in the case of those nations whose treatment, in the opinion of the President, is discriminatory to American commerce.

"The establishment of these trade agreements is but a first step in the modification or elimination of the many barriers to world trade such as high tariffs, restrictive quotas and exchange limitations. At the same time, through expanding trade and promting production, they lead in the direction of soundly stimulating employment and toward stability in international exchange—both vitally necessary to the complete economic recovery of this country and of the world."

The ten countries with which agreements have been concluded are Cuba, Brazil, Belgium, Haiti, Sweden, Colombia, Canada, Honduras, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

Except for one bid of $5,000 the accepted bids ranged in price from 99.930 equivalent to a rate of about 0.092 per cent per annum, to 99.897, equivalent to a rate of about 0.136 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

Capital Transit February Loss Is $67,251.13

Snow Removal Expense Cuts Into Increased Operating Revenues.

The monthly report of the Capital Transit Co. filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission reports a net loss for February of $67,251.13, compared with a net income of $38,891.26 for the same month last year, making a total loss of $106,142.39. Operating revenues of $789,507.30 this year, compared with $687,130.68 in February last year, an increase of 14.9 per cent.

John H. Hanna, president, commenting on the report said, "Increased wages, new Federal taxes and the heavy cost of snow removal in February practically equaled the amount of the deficit shown in the report." "However," he added, "revenues show a very satisfactory rise, but they are still being exceeded by the rising expenses."

Operating expenses of $675,014.21, compared with $501,410.47 in 1935. Operating income showed a net loss of $17,793.07, which compares with $81,342.07 last year, making a total loss of $99,135.14. Gross income, less operating expenses, taxes and depreciation, showed a loss of $13,400.01, which compared with $93,765.56 for the corresponding period last year, makes a total loss of $107,165.57. Deductions from gross income this year of $53,851.12, compared with similar deductions last year of $54,874.30.

Emmitsburg Nine, Gridmen Practice

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., March 31.—The varsity baseball squad of Mount St. Mary's College opened the second week of its training here yesterday with a long batting and fielding work for the outfield and infield candidates. The team opens its season April 18 in Annapolis, where it meets St. John's College.

Shaping up rather well in spite of a late start, the squad appeared ready for a practice game, which will probably be held late this week when Coach Jo-Jo Lawler prepares to wield the ax on the squad of more than 40 candidates.

All members of the squad aspiring for places on the hurling staff were permitted an opportunity to perform on the mound. Bill Sullivan, Joe Thomas, Bill Anglin and Bill Rutan showed up well in their performances today. Charley Eckenrode, Billy Smith, Tom Canfield and Joe Ferrara led the catchers in the day's drill.

Wally Opekun, backfield mentor of the Mount's grid squad, was in charge of that group as they began the second week of their training here yesterday. Their workout was long and probably the hardest since the squad turned out one week ago.

Found Prudent, Capital Woman Wins Lawsuit

Chicago, March 31 (AP).—Found to have reached an age of prudence, Miss Gertrude Crocker, 40, of Washington, D. C., was awarded her share of her father's estate in Federal court today. Attorneys estimated she would receive from $13,000 to $20,000.

Miss Crocker cited what she said was her $100,000 tea-room business in Virginia overlooking Washington as proof of her ability to manage her own affairs.

When her father, the late John T. Crocker, died about 10 years ago, he left a will providing his six children could share his estate as soon as each was "sufficiently prudent to handle the money."

In seeking her share, Miss Crocker asked the removal of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Peirce, as trustees of the estate.

Judge John P. Barnes ruled Mr. and Mrs. Peirce acted arbitrarily and abused their discretion in refusing to turn over the principal of the estate as soon as Miss Crocker and other heirs demonstrated their ability to handle their own affairs.

Spring Style Show To Be Held Friday

Plans for this season's Spring Style Show and Exhibition, including an Easter fashion promenade, at the Mayflower Hotel Friday from 5 p. m. until 11 p. m. are practically complete, it was announced by the Connecticut Avenue Association.

Visitors will enter the exhibition under a floral arch in the lobby, and view the exhibits in the Chinese room, finally arriving in the ballroom, where living models from New York City will display the more than 30 fashion creations chosen by the committee. Additional booths will be set up containing every kind of household goods, china, glassware, furniture, rugs, and gifts for Easter.

This season, the stage in the center of the ballroom will enable the public to see the living models better than before. The models will enter the stage under a floral pergola. There will be three showings of the fashion promenade, at 5 p. m., 8 p. m., and 10 p. m. The public is invited to all three shows, and during the intervals between shows opportunity will be given for inspection of the many attractive booths.

Mrs. Amelia Gude Thomas is chairman of the committee on decorations. Joint chairmen in charge of the stage and other details for the three fashion shows are Harry Kronheimer and Alfred Pasternak.

Police and Firemen Ask $159,975 More

Supplemental appropriation of $159,975 for the Police and Fire departments was requested by the District Commissioners yesterday to provide for additional men and equipment to allow for the increase in annual leave to 26 days. Charles E. Schron, Fire Department chief, asked for 33 more men and equipment at a cost of $65,175. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, asked for 48 more men and equipment at a cost of $94,800.

Camp Goodwill Dishes Destroyed; 3 Arrested

There was not much good will at Camp Goodwill in Rock Creek Park last night, judging by the hundreds of dishes and other property destroyed for no apparent reason. But there was even less good will at the receiving home where three young boys were held for investigation pending action of the Juvenile Court.

Park police, attracted by the unfamiliar noise of breaking chinaware, arrested the trio after a short chase through the woods.

ment before the contest began as to whether there was any possibility that the plan as presented violated the postal lottery statutes and the answer was given in the negative and the contest admitted to the mails. If such permission had not been given the contest would not have been conducted."

Smith, in New York, said his organization was "anxious to meet the issue as soon as possible."

"We are prepared," he added, "to meet any charge and believe the Postoffice Department should have definite evidence that we are conducting an honest contest, with security to all our customers, having in escrow $150,000 in prize money. Our contest complies with all Federal and State laws."

Although the Golden Stakes promoters were cited to appear today, the hearing will be delayed by slow progress at yesterday's hearing of similar charges against the Grand National Treasure Hunt, Inc., and the Association for the Legalization of American Lotteries.

The Treasure Hunt and the Association for the Legalization of American Lotteries were charged with conducting "a gift enterprise or scheme for the distribution of money by chance and for obtaining money through the mails by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations or promises."

Juvenile Court Bill Threatened By Pigeonhole

Failure of Commissioners' to File Report Blamed by Rep. Palmisano

The model juvenile court bill introduced early in the session by Chairman Norton of the House District Committee is threatened with death by being pigeonholed, Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, said yesterday because the District Commissioners have failed to file a report on it.

The bill has been lying dormant for weeks despite the plea of the District Committee chairman and several women's organizations that hearings be held. The measure was referred some time ago to the Judiciary sub-committee, of which Palmisano is chairman.

It was said at the District Building that the bill had been referred by the Commissioners to the corporation counsel before E. Barrett Prettyman resigned, and that several amendments had been suggested by him. Since his departure, however, no further action has been taken.

Georgetown Defeats Dartmouth in Debate

The victorious team, which upheld the negative side of the issue, was composed of Joseph M. Dawson, Thomas B. Finan, and John F. Lang. The debate was held in Gaston Hall.

Sterilization Urged For Mentally Unfit

Pasadena, Calif., March 31 (AP).—Sterilization of unfit persons to help prevent "the steady decrease of average intelligence" in the United States, was proposed today by Paul Popenoe, secretary of the Human Betterment Foundation.

"Figures just published by Frank K. Shuttleworth, of Yale University," Popenoe said, "confirm those published last year by Lorimer and Osborn, indicating a slow but steady decline in the intellectual level of the United States.

Popenoe's comment was in connection with a report just issued by the foundation showing that official sterilization operations had been performed on 23,092 insane and feeble-minded patients in this country up to last January 1.

Heimwehr and Soldiers Stage Austrian Clash

Graz, Austria, March 31 (AP).—Clashes between leaderless groups of Vice Chancellor von Starheimberg's Heimwehr (home guard) men and members of the regular Austrian army created tumult tonight in the Dollfuss Corso—Graz' most pretentious square.

Several times police charged the milling crowds to separate fist fighters. It was regarded as a new manifestation of the long-standing grudge between some elements of the army and Von Starhemberg's private forces.

The demonstration followed reports some soldiers would be dismissed to make places for Heimwehr men in the regular army.

Senate Unit Favors Bill On Unlisted Securites

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Banking Committee yesterday reported favorably an administration bill extending indefinitely the right to trade in unlisted securities upon national exchanges, but subjecting the practice to regulation by the Securities Exchange Commission.

Under existing law, trading of stocks unlisted on registered exchanges would have been prohibited after June 30 next.

The securities commission recommended the amendatory legislation. The banking committee was told severe hardships might result if such trading were terminated abruptly and that the New York Curb Exchange might have to close.
